The cost of this fluid is estimated at ten cents per gallon, and it is demonstrated that eighteen gallons, by careful attention, will run an engine of the capacity here noticed for one year. Its components are such as not to freeze, even at ninety degrees below zero. The amount of fuel is in a proportion of fifteen pounds of coal to one hundred pounds, compared with a steam engine of the same dimensions, whilst more than double the force can be brought into requisition. The engine, which we saw in operation, has a piston of twelve inches stroke, crank six inches. It was doing the service of ten horse power under break of a wheel 8 feet in diameter, 9 feet 11 1-2 inches in circumference, pressed between two bars, one on each side, and a friction block on each bar of 7 1-2 inches in length and 2 1-4 inches in width, on an iron rim of 2 1-2 inches, under a weight of 112 pounds, making 80 revolutions per minute.

To those versed in mechanics this will indicate the engine's capacity, or the power applied thereto by this wonderful agency. The heat causing the result here noticed was only 236 fahrenheit, or 60 pounds working power under exhaustion, and an atmospheric pressure of 15 pounds adverse, which adds that much to the active agent. By trial with steam in the same proportions, under a similar condition, with 267 degrees of heat, the amount of pressure was only 25 pounds to the square inch, and when tested the engine moved but slightly and stopped. Thus there is clearly demonstrated an almost incredible superiority, or advantage, of this new motor, in its application over steam. Besides the advantages above noticed, we are told—and, indeed, it becomes apparent to practical or scientific observers—that explosion is impossible, and thus a momentous point is gained in obviating all danger.

Curious Facts from History.

The Saxons first introduced archery in the time of Voltigeur. It was dropped immediately after the conquest, but revived by the crusaders, they having felt the effects of it from the Saracens, who, probably, derived it from the Parthians. Bows and arrows as weapons of war were in use with the stone cannon so late as 1640. It is singular that all the statutes for the encouragement of archery were framed after the invention of gunpowder and firearms. Yew trees were encouraged in churchyards, for the making of bows, 1482. Hence their generality in churchyards in England.

Coats of arms came into vogue in the reign of Richard I of England, and became hereditary in families about the year 1292. They took their rise from the knights painting their banners with different figures to distinguish them in the crusades.

The first standing army of modern times was established by Charles VII of France, in 1445. Previous to that time the king had depended upon his nobles for contingents in time of war. A standing army was first established in England in 1638 by Charles I, but it was illegal, as well the organization of the royal guards in 1679. The first permanent military band instituted in England, was the yeoman of the guards, established in 1486.

Guns were invented by Swartz, a German, about 1378, and were brought into use by the Venetians in 1382. Cannon were invented at an anterior date. They were first used at the battle of Cressy in 1346. In England they were first used at the siege of Berwick in 1405. It was not until 1544, however, that they were cast in England. They were used on board of ships by the Venetians in 1539, and were in use among the Turks about the same time. An artillery company was instituted in England for weekly military exercises in 1618.

Insurance of ships was first practised in the reign of Cæsar in 45. It was a general custom in Europe in 1194. Insurance offices were first established in London in 1667.

Astronomy was first studied by the Moors, and was by them introduced into Europe in 1201. The rapid progress of modern astronomy dates from the time of Copernicus. Books of astronomy and geometry were destroyed, as infected by magic, in England, under the reign of Edward VI., in 1552.

Banks were first established by the Lombard Jews in Italy. The name is derived from banco, bench—benches being erected in the market places for the exchange of money, &c. The first public bank was at Venice, about 1550. The Bank of England was established in 1693. In 1696 its notes were at 20 per cent. discount.

The invention of bells is attributed to Paulinus, Bishop of Nola, in Campania, about the year 400. They were first introduced into churches as a defence against thunder and lightning. They were first hung up in England at Croyland Abbey, Lincolnshire, in 945. In the eleventh century it was customary to baptize them in the churches before they were used. The curfew bell was established in 1068. It was rung at eight in the evening, when people were obliged to put out their fire and candle. The custom was abolished in 1109. Bell men were appointed in London in 1556, to ring the bells at night, and cry, "take care of your fire and candle, be charitable to the poor, and pray for the dead."

How many are aware of the origin of the word "boo!"—used to frighten children? It is a corruption of Bob, the name of a fierce Gothic general, the son of Odin, the mention of whose name spread a panic among his enemies.

Book-keeping was first introduced into England from Italy, by Peele, in 1569. It was derived from a system of algebra published by Burgo, at Venice.

Notaries Public were first appointed by the Fathers of the Christian Church, to collect the acts or memories of martyrs in the first century.

The administration of the oath in civil cases is of high antiquity. See Exodus 22—10. The oath was first administered in judicial proceedings in England by the Saxons in 600. The words "So help me God, and all Saints," concluded an oath till 1550.

Signals to be used at sea were first contrived by James II, when Duke of York in 1665. They were afterwards improved by the French commander Tourville, and by Admiral Balchen.

Raw silk is said to have been first made by a people of China, called Seres, 150 years B. C. It was brought from India in 274, and a pound of it at that time was worth a pound of gold. The manufacture of raw silk was introduced into Europe from India by some monks in 550. Silk dresses were first worn in 1455. The eggs of the silk worm were first brought into Europe in 527.

Philip, of Narragansett.

SPEECH OF AN OLD INDIAN CHIEF.

Pale faces, the Great Spirit frowns upon you because you heed not the decrees of his council. The Great Spirit sends you wisdom, and you profit not by his coming. Many moons ago the red man reared his wigwam where the mighty wigwam of the pale face now stands, and he worshipped the Great Spirit in the wigwam of Nature. Now the pale faces have reared big wigwams to hold the Great Spirit; yet he is not pleased with the inventions of the pale faces, for they have no arrows of truth, no salt to bid the stranger welcome, no calumet of peace, but the tomahawk of contention ever dwells within the big wigwam the pale faces have built for the Great Mantiou.

When the sound of the axe of the white man was heard in the hunting ground of the Indian, then the Indian took up his march for the home of his fathers, the big hunting ground of the Great Spirit; for full well he knew the pale faces would conquer. The death knell in the sound of the axe taught him the strength of the pale faces, and slowly he went on before the coming foe, until he laid him down to sleep, and awoke where the sound of the battle axe is not heard. And now he returneth to his former hunting ground to sound the warhoop at the command of the Great Spirit, that the pale faces may go forth to battle in the morning, and return in the evening with many scalps taken from the head of error, hanging from the girdle of truth. Will the pale braves hear the red man, or will he call for mightier intellects to lead him on to battle, than that the Great Spirit hath been pleased to bestow upon Philip of Narragansett.

Plain Speaking.

The Earl of Oxford, in reply to the application of the Secretary of the Norwich (England) Bible Society, that he would preside at their late annual meeting, wrote as follows:

Sir—I am surprised and annoyed at the contents of your letter; surprised, because my well-known character should have exempted me from such an application—and annoyed, because it obliges me to have this communication with you. I have long been addicted to the gaming table; I have lately taken to the turf; I fear I frequently blaspheme, and I have never distributed religious tracts. All this was well known to you and to your society; notwithstanding which you think me a fit person for your President. May your hypocrisy be forgiven, but I would rather live in the land of sinners than with such saints.

I am, &c., OXFORD.

If it proves a brick yard, that hen is not for sale."

"What is the reason, said an Irishman to another, "that you and your wife are always disagreeing?"

"Because," replied Pat, "because we are both of one mind: she wants to be master, and so do I."

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JULY 25, 1857.

Troops for Utah, Wanted in Kansas.

ST. LOUIS, July 17, 1857.

THE following is the substance of an article to appear in The Democrat to-morrow: Gov. Walker has issued a proclamation asserting his intention to put down opposition to the bogus laws by force. The citizens of Lawrence are warned against organizing under their Topeka Charter, and reprimanded for exhorting other towns to organize similarly. Seven hundred troops were summoned to march against Lawrence on Thursday. It is rumored that Walker's design is only to retain the army in Kansas, thereby breaking up the Utah expedition.

ST. LOUIS, July 17, 1857.

The Democrat has advices from Kansas, stating that Gov. Walker has issued a proclamation declaring his intention to put down all opposition to the Territorial laws by force, and censuring the citizens of Lawrence and warning them not to organize under the Topeka Charter. Rumor says that 700 troops are summoned to march against Lawrence, and that it is the design of Walker to retain the army in Kansas, and to break up the Utah expedition.

We clip the foregoing from the Tribune of Saturday last, and if the article be true, what does it imply? Certainly there is more need of troops on the "borders of civilization" than there is in sending them among the "heathen" in Utah! What do we perceive in all this movement when we scan it close, and test it by a scrutinizing ordeal? It plainly shows that the whole of the excitement in relation to Utah, "murder," blood and thunder, sending troops there, resistance to laws, &c., so loudly proclaimed and heralded forth against Gov. Young and the Mormons, have been a deep designed political plot by aspiring demagogues, religious bigots, headed by charlatans and poltroons, with bribed bought tools, to do their dirty work,—get up an excitement and raise the "hue and cry" of "mad dog" against a well disposed, loyal, innocent, persecuted and oppressed people, for pecuniary and political purposes, with designs as black as ever emanated from the "bottomless pit," to carry their party sway if possible, and enrich themselves by bribery and corruption, in order to "suck some government pap" at the expense of the U. S. Treasury and the Utonians.

Let us trace up this crusade against the Mormons to its source, and see from whence it sprang. First, we find Judge Drummond (we will leave it to the editor of the Oquawka Plain Dealer to give his character) commenced writing base falsehoods, attacking Gov. Young and the Mormons, charging them with all manner of evil and crime. What was his object? Was it not to make political capital, with pecuniary considerations combined? Wonder which realized the Judge the most profit—writing falsehoods against Governor Young and the Mormons, or his Judgeship?

All Drummond's communications were directed to, and published in the Black Republican papers of New York, he at the same time professing to be a Democrat. After these papers had published his base calumny and falsehoods, with their additions, and circulated them far and near, in relation to the Mormons, and got the passions and prejudices of the people in the States excited to their highest key against them, then a call is made on Government to fit out troops and send an expedition to Utah to bring the Mormons into subjection, make them respect the laws of the United States, &c. (?) This was their hobby and the constant tune the poor miserable beggars sang in the ears of the Government continually. Drummond goes to Washington, tells the President he has just barely escaped with his life from Utah, and that all the United States officers there would be murdered, and says: Mr. President, make me Governor of Utah, and give me a good military force, and I will bring Gov. Young and the Mormons into subjection, and I will have revenge of them for the contempt with which they treated me, and also my Ada when she was "sitting by my side" on the bench. Hear with what confidence he speaks to his confederates:

"I have stirred the waters of the Saints and shall keep up the war in all time to come. A new Governor and military aid will be sent to Utah. Now mark it, and Brigham will stand from under.

"I may go to Utah as Governor; if so, look out for a merry time. I will take it with military air!!!"

Although Drummond professed to be a Democrat, he could not make the impression on Mr. Buchanan he wished; writes a letter to his lawful wife at Oquawka, Henderson county, Ill.; informs her that he must return to Utah immediately to hold a September term of his court there. We give an extract from Mrs. Drummond's letter to her brother, Silas Richards, and lady, in Utah:

"DEAR BROTHER AND SISTER—I received your letter last night, and am now seated to answer you. Mr. Drummond left here in April (1855) to start for Utah. We heard from him twice in April, and then we heard no more of him until August, after he reached Utah. We read once in the paper that he had a woman with him; he got her in Washington City, District of Columbia; her name is Ada Carroll; he never was married to her in the States. As to living in Chicago, I do not, nor never did; we were living in Oquawka when he went away, and instead of leaving us plenty, he left but little. He sent me a draft a few days ago from California—said that he was going to Utah to hold courts in September. I never have, nor never will, get a divorce from him; I never thought of such a thing in my life. We parted as husband and wife. He said he would return this fall if he could.

JEMIMA DRUMMOND."

We know that the lady Ada to whom Mrs. Drummond refers, was along with the Judge in Utah, and lodged with him, for we have seen them in that situation.

But lo and behold, instead of the Judge going to Utah, he turns up at Indianopolis, Indiana. There he stops; and the retiring hero fires off his last squib against the Mormons and the United States Government, because he could not be Governor of Utah, and forwards it to his pet paper, the New York Daily Times. Hear him: "Being a life-long Democrat, I take it that I have a right to speak plainly (and on this subject I confess I have some feelings) of my own party, and here I would state, as many others do, that the course so far pursued by Mr. Buchanan's administration in connection with Utah will, and justly should, politically damn any administration." The Judge "confesses he has some feelings." To be sure he has—couldn't be Governor. He says a distinguished senator from his own city "has stolen some of his thunder." No doubt of it. Little do the Mormons care for such thunder, whether it comes from a Judge or a "distinguished senator." But that letter from Indiana was the expiring throes of Drummond; he is past resurrecting.

But the agitation has begun, and an army must be sent to Utah. O, yes! thousands of speculators want a mess from the Government crib; and if an excitement can only be continued and also made a political question of, the Government will be compelled to send troops to Utah; we speculators and demagogues will line our pockets; we will pay our dupes and tools, Uncle Sam may go to the devil, and the Mormons too, we have made the money, and carried our points; that is all we cared for, or wished. At last troops are started for Utah, fitted out at St. Louis, yes; some two millions of dollars worth, purchased of speculators for the supply of the army, fine time for speculators. The expedition must have wagons, mules, horses, beef-cattle, harness, provisions, and all the implements of war; many a speculator has been made rich; they can afford to pay the poor scribblers well that have wrote the lies about the Mormons, and got up the excitement against them. But stop, the Mormons are attending to their own business, all is peace in Utah; a parcel of poor miserable drones have left Utah to be sure; we got the people to believe that the troops were destined for Utah, but we find there is no use for their presence there, and the Government wisely concludes there is more need of the troops in civilized Kansas, than among the heathen in Utah. For murder, bloodshed, and Buford's guerilla band of robbers are in Kansas, but Kansas is a civilized Christian country, we know it is. The fruits of Christian civilization are rampant there. So they have been in New York for some time past; they break out every little while. O, you poor deluded fanatics and heathen of Utah, pattern after us, enlightened, civilized Christians here, see the beauty of our institutions, no such beauties to be seen in Utah. But troops will soon bring you Utonians to enjoy its beauties.

But the troops must be stopped for the present. Wise policy, that. Pity the Government had not its eyes open sooner; but let the troops go to Utah, who cares; speculators will follow them like birds of prey, and when another political and pecuniary farce wants to be played, demagogues and speculators are always ready with their tools to operate, and Kansas, or some other place besides Utah, will be made the base of their operations.

We recommend that the Government and all others attend to duty nearer home than Utah, and keep their troops in Kansas; they have need of them there; send on a few to New York to put down mobs, murder, and crime; send a few to the Quarantine to protect the buildings there; direct your energies and means among civilization, and do not wish to convert the heathen in Utah to Christianity by the sword and cannon.

Celebrations.

ON the 4th, the Saints in Connecticut celebrated the Anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence, and, what between patriotic speeches, and a rich discussion of clams and the other delicious things, "too numerous to mention," enjoyed themselves so finely, that some of our neighbors have since concluded that the Mormons were common mortals of the race of Adam, and quite as patriotic as any gemmen who bawls glorious liberty on the floor of Congress, or whistles Yankee Doodle and Hail Columbia in street processions when the small aperture of his face is disencumbered of the filthy weed. Having, therefore, paid our respects to the memory of honored sires, and declared our intention of sticking close to Uncle Samuel at a future day when he may require our assistance to keep his part of the world in order, we trust we may be allowed the privilege of enjoying ourselves at another "Clam Bake" in honor of the arrival of the Pioneers in Great Salt Lake City, in 1847, without being suspected of treasonable designs. To-morrow, Friday, 24th July, the Saints at Toms River mean to have a festive time and sing the songs of freedom. Many are sorry that circumstances prevent them from joining in the celebration of Israel's deliverance, and, though deprived of gathering with the good folks of Toms River on that occasion, and sharing the hospitality that Captain Reamer has offered to all in the name of himself and friends, we are sure they wish them much happiness.

The Philadelphia Saints determined to be up with the others, have sent us the following invitation to their party. We shall be at Toms River, to-morrow, and trust to be likewise at Philadelphia at the specified time. Here is the invitation to all:

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 21, 1857.

PRESIDENT APPLEBY—Dear Brother: The Saints in the Philadelphia Branch anticipate having a pic-nic party on Monday, August 3d, when they will retire to some neighboring wood for the purpose of pleasure and recreation. You are respectfully invited, and all the Presidents and Traveling Elders in the Philadelphia and New York Conferences, and any others of the brethren and sisters who can make it convenient, to favor us with their presence on that day. I hope that you will be sure to come and bring all along that can possibly make it convenient—Bros. Stenhouse, Young, and all the good people "too numerous to mention." Owing to my circumstances, I will not be able to meet you at Toms River.

Give my kindest love to Elders Stenhouse and Dulin, not forgetting to accept the same to yourself. I pray the Lord to bless you in the cause of Truth.

ANGUS M. CANNON.

Kansas.

FOR some months there has been nothing very stirring from Kansas; but a change is now apparent. The fuss, fighting, burnings and murders, so numerous during the Presidential campaign, had got all numbered with the things that have been, and, for some time back, promises of peace, continued peace, have been day by day more flattering. Gov. Walker, whom President Buchanan regarded as the most competent to arrange matters satisfactorily to both Free State and Pro-Slavery men, seemed to be equal to the task, and was apparently getting on swimingly, when, all at once, collision, strife and bloodshed are apparent. The Free State men of Lawrence, if we may judge from the reports that have been conveyed by telegraph from the West to the East, and which are supported by a recent proclamation of the Governor, have made up their minds for hostility with the government. They have adopted a new charter for their city, setting aside the one granted by the Territorial Legislature last winter. Gov. Walker is out with a proclamation from Leavenworth, July 15, in which he warns them to desist and to proceed no further in their rebellious course, for he is determined to sustain the Territorial laws sanctioned by Congress, and approved by the President of the United States, and for that purpose has called to his aid eight companies of dragoons from Leavenworth. He has camped close to Lawrence, and by last despatch is reported ready to oppose the first steps of the newly elected officers under the new charter. The same despatch says that "the people are determined to pay no attention to him, and will not negotiate with him." He has warrants out for many of the prominent citizens of that town, and the attempt to apprehend them is expected to rekindle in Kansas civil war. The people purpose to keep clear of the troops, if possible, but if any outrage is committed by the latter, the tug of war commences.

Information Wanted.

MRS. HARRIET JONES, of St. Clair, Schuylkill, Co., Penn., desires to hear from or of her brothers William and Thomas Williams, formerly of Abersycham, Monmouthshire, South Wales. They emigrated to Utah in 1853.

Appointments.

ELDERS H. L. SOUTHWORTH, Joel Terry, Stephen H. Goddard, George Goddard and Isaac Hill, are hereby appointed to travel and preach the Gospel in the Canadas. All the Elders on missions there will counsel and correspond together as often as necessary for the good of the cause, and the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God. They will act under the direction of the Presidency at New York, and report their labors from time to time.

All these brethren will labor according to their appointments until further orders, in preaching the Gospel, baptizing those who believe, organizing Churches, hunting up the lost sheep, building up the Saints, comforting the hearts of all those who wish to do right, and counselling them in relation to their duties, gathering to Zion, &c. Always endeavoring to preach wherever a place may be open, and to labor in new places as much as possible.

They will also act as agents for THE MORMON, obtain all the subscriptions, donations, &c. they can, and remit the same to us at New York.

W. I. APPLEBY, President, &c.

Departure of More Missionaries.

ELDER JABEZ WOODARD paid us a short visit last week. He arrived late on Thursday evening and left the next day. He was in excellent health, bouyant in spirit, greatful to the Lord and the Saints for the assistance rendered to him, and the other missionaries who accompany him. They were to sail from Philadelphia on Saturday. We presume this small company closes the emigration of the hand-cart missionaries for Europe. The passing of these missionaries through the States has had a very salutary effect upon those with whom they had any relationship. They were good, honest, upright men, and none privileged with their society could fail to perceive by their course that they were destined to build up. May the Lord God of Jacob bless them, and may His ever-watchful eye follow them for good, and in all the trials through which they may have to pass, may His right hand sustain them and bring them off conquerors.

We rejoice to see the faithful elders moving to the nations, carrying life and salvation to those who sit in darkness. When we witness the life and light diffused where they go, we can afford to smile at the puny efforts of apostates to hinder the progress of that great work which is destined to cover the earth, and bring to pass the Redemption of Israel.

To Contributors.

WE are ever glad to receive correspondence and articles from the Elders for THE MORMON; but have frequently to regret that the narrow limits of our sheet force us to postpone the publication of many things sent to us. We trust that the good sense of our brethren and friends will ever be ready to excuse any seeming inattention on our part. Frequently we have had correspondence and articles in type for weeks before we could find opportunity to place them in our columns. A letter or an article kept back for a week or two should not discourage the writers.

Letters in this Office.

Letters will be forwarded by inclosing a stamped envelope, with the address written thereon.

We would advise those who expect letters to see the Herald's advertisement on Saturday, as we have already refused all unpaid.

Ravages of Grasshoppers in Minnesota.

THIS fatal scourge increases fearfully. One man from Stearns, says the St. Paul Times of the 2d, informs us that he has planted one hundred acres, from which he does not now expect to realize a single cent. The Shakopee Advocate says of them: "Our hopes of being spared from serious injury by these insects, are not so strong as they were two weeks since. The recent fine weather has had the effect of increasing their numbers to an almost incredible extent. The term of 'myriads,' when applied to designate the numerical force of these destructive visitants, fails to convey an accurate idea of their immense numbers. Already, every garden in this vicinity has been destroyed, and many persons are planting the second time, hoping the grasshoppers may have disappeared before the crops are above ground."

Military Movements.

WE have information from Fort Leavenworth that the Tenth Regiment of Infantry will take up the line of march for Utah Territory on the 18th; the Fifth Regiment about the 21st, and the Dragoons about the 1st of August. Gen. Harney will go out with the latter division, and of course in command of the whole expedition. The transportation and supplies for this expedition are all ready at Fort Leavenworth, and of the latter there is provision for a year to come. Gov. Cumming will visit Washington in a day or two to receive his final instructions, and then will hasten to Fort Leavenworth to avail himself of the military escort provided for him by the government.—[St. Louis Republican, July 15.

DOMESTIC SUMMARY.

OUR city troubles are far from being over. The litigation before the courts between the municipality appointee to the office of Street Commissioner and him appointed by Governor King to that office, continues in glorious confusion. The city man, Mr. Devlin, has, from the big police row, up to Saturday, kept possession, but Mr. Conover, the Governor's man, succeeded that day in placing him in Eldridge-st. jail. Mr. Devlin's deputy was ejected from the office, and Mr. Conover seated himself in the chair in all the dignity of a King-ly commissioner, taking possession of the books, papers, &c. There has no decision been given by the courts touching either of the disputants for office, so that, at the present time, might makes right. The strongest keeps the chair, and puts the key in his pocket. Fine times.

A strong opposition party to Gov. King is busy in getting up indignation meetings, and talk strongly of doing big things at the next election for ousting the representatives who have voted for the obnoxious laws.

The inquest over the murdered German, Miller, continues. The dailies, in the absence of sensation stories, manage to fill up considerable space with the examination of witnesses.

The negro who some months ago cut the throat of a poor prostitute in the street was executed in this city on Friday. Before he left this mundane sphere, a Catholic priest managed to get through his wool some confused, dreamy notions, which led him to write some miserable twaddle about going to his Father in heaven. The Tract Society seems hard up for conversion stories—this may probably work into a nice little tale to scare some hair-brained folks.

Captain Conway, of the packet-ship Switzerland, has this week been tried for committing rape upon a young English woman who was a steerage passenger. A cabin passenger, who was to befriend her and see that the captain married her as he promised, took suddenly sick on the way, gave out, and was committed to the deep. Having no friend on board, and the captain having many, he has come off triumphant. None deny that she afterwards stopped in his cabin all the way across the ocean; but for such freaks there is no christian punishment. The girl is ruined in body and mind, and her paramour is a gentleman—of course he is.

Kansas is getting before the public again. It is reported that the Free State men of Lawrence were determined to oppose the gathering of taxes apportioned by the Territorial Legislature. Governor Walker has shown considerable pluck, and is determined to put down every opposition; and for the accomplishment of his purpose, has made a call upon General Harney and the Utah troops under his command to halt for a little in Kansas.

The Minnesotians have commenced their troubles. The Republicans and Democrats have met at St. Paul to enter upon the business of Constitution making; but each wanting their own way, have formed separate conventions. The majority who had assembled were on the Republican side, but the Democrats were anticipating reinforcements. The Democrats have the support of the Federal officers of the Territory.

Another of the new police was killed on Tuesday. A burglar was endeavoring to effect his escape from a store where he had been surprised, when the officer came up with him, and was about to deal him a blow with his truncheon, but the former, who had already leveled his pistol at an old man who first gave the alarm, turned the weapon upon the officer and shot him dead. The murderer was immediately pursued by a young man, who was afterwards joined by an officer, and after a spirited, long and winding race through the streets, succeeded in apprehending him, after a desperate encounter and at the peril of their own lives, as, but a moment more, and he would have been in a position to have utterly precluded the possibility of an arrest, for the house to which he fled was actually an arsenal in miniature. He is a native of Palermo, Sicily, and connected with a desperate gang of thieves. Had not a numerous body of police with revolvers stood between him and the enraged populace, the latter would have hung him to a lamp post before he reached a place of confinement. The utmost precaution and secresy were necessary on the part of the police to prevent his whereabouts being discovered by the exasperated friends of the murdered man, or they would have borne him from them and administered the law a la Lynch—a code which it were well to a certain extent were administered in this very christian city of Gotham.

Archbishop Hughes having considered himself calumniated by the Daily Times in the begining of the year has been on the track of "The Little Villain," and humbled and vexed him considerably. The mitred gentleman being assured by a friend that The Little Villain "is plausible in friendship, is plausible in treachery; has much animal cunning; but was born without the instincts of a gentleman, and neither his education nor his opportunities of associating with gentlemen have been able to supply the innate and original deficiency," determined to give him a regular "keel hauling" for his future good, and for that purpose has published a lengthy letter this week in the Tribune and Herald, which is the worst dose that that contemptible clique of editors have had for a long time. It was expected that the Investigating Committee had done enough to shame them from their calumnious habits, but it seems hard to eradicate evil.

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

THE Foreign mails this week bring confirmation of the troubled state of the old world. The English press is very profuse in sympathy for the Italians. Some of the leading papers are very eloquent in their denunciation of Imperial, Royal and Jesuitical tyranny in that lovely peninsula, almost weep over the suppressed revolution, and apparently, deeply regret that, as journalists, they have not yet the long looked for satisfaction of chronicling that Bomba had been driven from Naples, Pio Nino from Rome and the troops of Austria their protector, banished from every inch of Italian soil. While there is life there is hope is an old adage. Hope for the future is not extinct, a deep rooted hatred to every ruling power in Italy, excepting Victor Emanuel, is as certainly in the bosom of every whole souled Italian as it is certain that the rulers of that country are detestable tyrants. Revolution is again for the moment suppressed; but the hope of success another day still lives.

France is a little agitated over the result of the recent elections in Paris. Louis Napoleon, either ignorant of the true feeling of his Parisian subjects toward his Imperial government, or wishful to have the appearance of being something like a Constitutional Sovereign, supported by Legislators the choice of the people, invited the latter to come to the polls and choose their representatives. The last mail from Europe brings the intelligence that three opposition candidates, among whom Gen. Cavignac, have been elected. This is regarded as a hostile demonstration to the rule of the Nephew. Some of our cotemporaries think they discover signs of another European revolution in the elections in Paris and disturbances in Italy. There is probably as great a wish to cast down crowned heads now as in 1848, but the situation of the people is vastly different everywhere. In 1848, they had liberty of speech and arms, now, they have neither. The heel of the despots must be felt a little longer.

Louis and Eugenie are expected to visit Her Majesty at Osborne—a private visit.

Prince Napoleon is jumping about and running all over creation. He had got to Plymouth on his way to Old Ireland.

The murderer of Mr. Little at the Broadstone terminus of the Midland Great Western Railway of Ireland, some six month since, has just been apprehended. Mr. Little was a gentleman highly respected, the support of an aged mother and a dependant sister. He was found in his office murdered, with the door locked inside and no trace of the criminal's entrance or exit could be found. The wife of the murderer has given the information which led to his apprehension, partly from the violence she apprehended from him and partly from the calls of conscience. The greater portion of the money then taken has been discovered where she indicated and her statements sustained by undisputed facts. His guilt is clear and from the universal respect entertained for the murdered man and sympathy for his bereaved relatives, it is likely that Mr. Spollen's days are numbered.

LATER.

By Telegraph from St. Johns, N. F., we have European news up to the 11th inst. The House of Lords had defeated the Jewish Oath Bill by 34 majority.

Thackery has been nominated for Parliament from Oxford. Disturbances in Spain suppressed. The details from Naples show there was considerable loss of life in the revolutionary movement there.

Gen. Harney and Troops.

THE appearance of Gen. Harney in Kansas with a formidable force, even before Walker's Lawrence proclamation, was exciting the attention of the settlers, (not "the people") of Kansas. The Kansas Free State, of July 11th, has the following:

GEN. HARNEY'S MISSION.—According to the statement of the Kansas correspondent, of the Journal of Commerce, Gen. Harney, the Indian exterminator, has been ordered here as a necessary part of the pacification scheme of Gov. Walker. It seems that the Salt Lake expedition is only a ruse to disguise the real design in concentrating the United States troops in Kansas and Nebraska. This opinion is strengthened by the fact that the troops are very slow in setting out on their march towards Utah. Every few days companies of soldiers are passing up the river toward Fort Leavenworth, ostensibly for Utah; but they all seem to be stopping in Kansas, or, at the most, getting up little pleasure excursions against bands of Indians northeast of Fort Riley. Should Gov. Walker attempt to use these in forcing his government upon us, he will find his pacification scheme to result very unsatisfactorily.

The correspondent of the Journal of Commerce said:—I see it stated that Gen. Harney is about to be ordered to Utah. I think it cannot be so. One of the express conditions under which Mr. Walker accepted the Governorship of Kansas was, that Gen. Harney, a man in whom he had confidence, should be appointed to the command of the troops here; and the administration would hardly take the liberty of ordering him to another post without consulting Gov. Walker, which it has not done by any intimation whatever.

Personal.

PRESIDENT APPLEBY left this morning (Thursday) for Toms River. He will remain there over Sunday.

Correspondence of Elder Jabez Woodard.

PHILADELPHIA, July 18, 1857.

DEAR BRO. STENHOUSE—In the hour of my departure on the bosom of the broad Atlantic, I must say farewell to you and your beloved family. Long years, or, at least, mighty events have rolled on since we first met amid the busy scenes of London, and afterwards stood beside President Lorenzo Snow on the Alpine rocks of ancient and lovely Italy, and, still later, preached together in the cities and cantons of romantic Switzerland. Time has not changed my feelings, but memory awakens a thrill in my breast as I think of the nations, kindreds, tribes, and tongues amid whom we have wandered. It did my heart good to gaze once more on your well-known features during my late hasty but delightful visit to New York. While I have been in the mountains you have been extensively and usefully engaged with the Press, both in Europe and in America. When shall we meet again, and what will be our occupations till then? Varied, no doubt. Well, I go to the East, and by-and-by you will go to the West; but extremes meet: both of our lives are at the service of the Latter-day work.

If you will publish this letter it may be interesting to my numerous friends in the States, and cheer the hearts of my family in the distant vales of Utah. I left them all well, nearly three months ago, and then crossed the plains in Bro. Herriman's missionary company, and on our disbanding at Florence, I went to Crescent City and neighborhood. The unusually cold and rainy weather there gave me a spell of sickness for several days, but during it I was cheered with the company of Elder Gleason, who generously placed my claims before his own, and obtained some money for me to proceed on my journey as soon as I grew better. When I came to St. Louis, Bro. Coward, whose soul is ever interested for his brethren, sent Elder Joel Terry and myself to visit the Gravois Branch. Elder Terry showed the same generous spirit on behalf of the European missionaries in general, and refused to receive anything for himself till we could be taking another stage of our journey. It was suggested that we should start on together, and that I should take charge of the brethren in conjunction with my esteemed friend Elder Bramhall. We accordingly got in motion for Cincinnati, where the brethren again contributed towards our wants; but feeling themselves short of cash, (which, by-the-by, did not abound anywhere on our route,) the missionaries wished me to continue my journey and endeavor to collect something for them in the Philadelphia Conference while they followed after.

During my stay in this Conference I had the pleasure of a short but interesting acquaintance with Prest. A. M. Cannon, which will long be cherished in my remembrance. I visited the Saints in Hornerstown and Trenton, N. J., and passed some happy days in their society.

The brethren I left at Cincinnati have come along, under the direction of Brother Bramhall, though not without considerable difficulty, and means have been provided for the embarkation of the following on the Nonpareil:

Wm. Bramhall, Frederick Roulet, Amos Taylor, Robert E. Miller, George Stanniforth, Jean Daniel Malan, Samuel Longbottom, and Jabez Woodard.

Shall I now, in conclusion, be permitted to bear my testimony to the state of affairs in Salt Lake Valley. I have been privileged to live there some years, and should still be an inmate of its happy dwellings if I had not been called upon by the Prophet of the Most High to go forth to the nations. There is one fact in my experience there which I will try and detail, although imperfectly. I dwelt in the vales of the West during the times of scarcity; but would the world believe that scene, even if it were written by an angel's pen? Well, I saw the greater portion of the harvest of a vast community swept away, and we could not send down into Egypt for grain, as Jacob did in ancient times, for we were far more distant from any store-house. We were an inland people, so the ships of all nations could not bring us food, as they did to unhappy Erin when her potato crop failed. But we lived by union, by almost universal economy, by the power and wisdom which the Great God bestowed upon us, and we divided our bread to the mean as well as the miserable, even as our Father sends his rain on the just and the unjust; and many of the men, who have now returned to the States, and are endeavoring to raise persecution against the Saints, were there, for a considerable time, supported, either directly or indirectly, by their bounty.

Who died in that famine, or what pestilence succeeded its lengthened progress? None—we answer emphatically NONE!! Who ever heard of such a famine before in the history of the whole world? How unlike Ireland, where myriads fell by starvation and sickness, though all the Christian sects were banded in benevolent efforts to save them! Well, sir, it is something to chronicle upon the annals of eternity. I could write much more on this subject, and refute objections to these views; but I am compelled to close and leave my testimony to the world as to the truth of our principles and my satisfaction with the present organization of this Church, and I know President Young and the General Authorities of the Church are men of God. Hear it, O earth, whether you will or will not believe. I remain, dear brother, yours, very affectionately, JABEZ WOODARD.

P. S.—If THE MORMON can spare room for the following, it may cheer others as it has cheered us. J. W.

MISSIONARY HYMN.

BY ELDER JABEZ WOODARD.

TUNE—"Greenville."

WHY, so far from social pleasures,
Strive ye thus from day to day,
While there lie no worldly treasures
'Mid your path of miry clay?

O'er the snows that crest the mountains,
Or the sands along the plains,
Over streams and through the fountains,
Storms around and drenching rains.

Step by step, o'er land long toiling,
Surge on surge o'er ocean cross,
When the deep beneath is boiling,
Count ye still all things but dross.

Thus some spake, and one replying,
Show'd the secret springs of power,
How on hope divine relying,
Man endures the toilsome hour.

'Tis for good that God's revealing,
For the seed that angels cast,
For the pow'r of priestly sealing,
For the day that comes the last.

For the fulness of salvation,
When we reach the Shepherd's fold;
For the bursting acclamation,
When we take the crown of Gold.

For the sequel of our story,
Changing blasphemy to praise;
For the thousand years of glory,
Bright'ning o'er the Latter Days.

For the glory that shall follow,
For the joys of endless life,
For my kindred, friends, and wife.

For the songs of heavenly measure,
For the noble angel choirs,
For the peals of lofty pleasure,
Streaming o'er their golden lyres.

Danger comes; but Death despising,
Over land and sea we roam,
While above the world's surmising,
Zion builds our happy home.

Correspondence of Elder James Thompson.

PHILADELPHIA, July 6, 1857.

EDITOR MORMON—Dear Sir: I feel great pleasure in having this opportunity afforded me of addressing a few lines to you, relative to the subject of "Mormonism," which, at the present time, is creating so much sensation throughout the so-called Christian world. It is now nearly eight years since I yielded obedience to the acquirements of God, through His commissioned servants; and, having been a strict observer of the events which have transpired since then up to the present time, it causes my heart to rejoice to know that I have been brought out from the midst of such a wicked and adulterous generation, and to have the privilege of participating in the peace, joy, pleasure, and happiness, which we, as a people, partake. The professing Christians of the present day are totally ignorant of the dealings of God with His people. Why is it so? When we look abroad throughout the earth and see and hear of the wickedness and abominations which exist, we are often reminded of the saying of the Prophet Isaiah, that "Darkness has covered the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people." Some of the ancient Prophets also spoke of a time that was to come when the people should "believe a lie readier than the TRUTH." I would here ask the question, Is not this applicable to this generation? Every individual who has a spark of honesty in his bosom, will bear me out in this assertion. We will, in the first place, look at the position of "Utah and the Mormons," a place and a people which have been brought into great notoriety, lately. It appears as if all the fiery darts of the adversary had been turned on the Utonians, and one fell blow intended to sweep them from the face of the earth. Lying editors and others have been busy in publishing slanderous, wicked, wilful and malicious falsehoods against "Utah and the Mormons." Are they injuring the cause of God? We answer, No! God has again restored to the human family, through His servant, Joseph Smith, the ancient plan of Salvation. He preached and taught principles, whereby this generation, inasmuch as they were obedient to the same, could obtain eternal Salvation in the Kingdom of God; he preached the pure, simple principles of heaven, and his testimony was rejected; he was martyred, by wicked and evil-designing men, for the cause of truth; yet this did not stay the progress of the work of God. His march has been onward and upward. Missionaries have been sent out from Zion, who have carried the "Glad tidings of great joy" to earth's remotest bounds. Thousands have embraced the Gospel and gathered to that place which God has set apart for the ingathering of His people, and thousands are yet waiting to follow their footsteps.

Some weeks ago the ship Westmoreland arrived at this port with four or five hundred Saints on board; and, on Saturday last, the packet-ship Tuscarora, with 537; both of these companies were in good health and spirits; most of them on their way to the valleys of the mountains. I was amused in picking up the Public Ledger, of Saturday, July 4, finding therein contained, an editorial article, headed "More of Brigham's Dupes;" in this, our very pious editor remarks, "Would it not be an act of religion, as well as philanthropy, for some of the missionaries of the Gospel to convert those heathens, (the Mormons,) now they are so near at hand?" We say, it would; providing they can point out and prove to us, from the Book in which they profess to believe; viz., (the Bible,) that we are in the wrong path, and that we are acting contrary to the laws of God; then, I say, and only then will we be converted to their religion. This they cannot do, neither have they the honesty to acknowledge it. They are not capable of refuting the doctrines and principles taught by us as a people; they have emanated from Him who is the Author of Nature and source of all Truth; and must, in time, reign triumphant over the whole earth. Now, we would ask, What has the "Christian" missionaries, spoken of by this worthy editor of the Public Ledger done to ameliorate the degraded condition of the human family? Have they pointed out to the people "The only way to be saved;" the "Gospel plan of Salvation;" have they taught the children of men to believe in principles whereby they can be exalted to thrones, principalities and powers; have they taught men to be baptized for the remission of their sins, and to seek after the gift of the Holy Ghost? If they have not, we want no man-made religion; for we believe in the pure and simple principles of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, which are calculated to exalt man in the scale of being and intelligence, and fit and prepare him for a Celestial Glory. What good have these very pious missionaries ever done? They have been the means of closing the minds of the people against the truth—every truth that would clash with their systems. Hence the difficulty the commissioned servants of God have, when sent to the nations of the earth, in promulgating the pure principles of the Gospel. Mormonism, in its short career, has progressed rapidly; the Elders have labored with unceasing and untiring energy to spread the truth; and the results are to be seen from year to year in the emigration of the Saints from almost every clime under heaven. Having intruded so far on your valuable space, I will conclude, hoping again soon to have the opportunity of addressing a few lines more for insertion in THE MORMON.

I remain your brother and fellow-servant in the Covenant of Peace,

JAMES THOMPSON.

Correspondence of H. L. Southworth.

ST. LOUIS, June 26, 1857.

EDITOR MORMON—Dear Brother: Having been appointed by the authorities of Zion to go to Canada to proclaim the everlasting gospel, I started from Great Salt Lake City, with the rest of my brethren the missionaries, on the 23d of April. We assembled on the Temple block early in the morning, and after listening to the counsels and instructions of some of the "Twelve," we got the word from Brother Brigham to start. There were thousands of the Saints assembled to give the parting shake of the hand to their near relations and friends, and an offering of their prayers to God for the preservation of our lives and the prosperity of our missions. A band of music accompanied us to the outskirts of the city, together with many of the Saints in carriages and on foot; in fact, they seemed as if they could hardly leave us, such was their sympathy and admiration for the first hand-cart company of missionaries that ever left Great Salt Lake City.

Though not accustomed to out-door labor, and taking a good supply of clothing, our cart being loaded to nearly four hundred pounds, yet I walked the entire distance of 1030 miles to Florence, and pulled the cart with two other brethren; and besides this, I walked one hundred miles to visit some old acquaintances in the northern part of Iowa.

On the first part of my journey I was much fatigued and lost some flesh, yet I gained it all again before we got through. We were much favored and blessed by our Heavenly Father with good weather; and I doubt whether any company ever crossed the plains with such a degree of unity and brotherly kindness. I was taken with rheumatism in one of my legs in the former part of the journey, but was healed through the administration of oil and the faith of my brethren.

I have lived in Salt Lake City nearly four years, most of the time in the 14th Ward, and only half a block from the Temple block, and all the time in the centre of the city, and I must say I have never been in a more orderly, quiet and respectable place in my life, and I have traveled more than twice the circumference of the globe. There is not a dram shop in the whole city of over 20,000 inhabitants, nor a house of ill-fame, nor a billiard-table, neither did I ever witness any gambling of any description during the whole time I was in the city. There I have passed the happiest moments of my life, and I can assure you it was no particular choice of mine to leave "that city I love so well," and to pass the "Devil's Gate," and come into "hell's kitchen," but a willingness and a desire to do as I was told, to clear my skirts from the blood of all men.

Since I have arrived in Florence, I have heard more stories, lies and slander of all kinds about the Latter Day Saints in the valleys of the mountains than I ever thought could be dreamt of or imagined. I have no doubt it is generally believed in this western country that Uncle Sam is going to completely obliterate every Mormon West of the Missouri and but the half has been told about them. While the boat, the Heloniral (that I came from Omaha in) was stoping at a small place in Missouri, called Hill's Landing, a Missourian very seriously inquired if the "United States was not going to drive the Mormons from Nauvoo," which is about as near as many are posted with regard to Mormonism.

A great excitement has prevailed with regard to the murder of Bro. Parley P. Pratt; I knew him well, he was my near neighbor in Salt Lake City, and with some of his family, was a frequent visiter at my house. I always delighted to listen to his conversation, which was without guile, and full of the spirit and power of the Holy Ghost; his words were always fitly spoken, like "apples of gold in pictures of silver," and the motives which governed his actions were as pure as ever emanated from the breast of mortal man. He died a martyr, and though the world said to him as they did to his master, "Parley raise thyself," and though his body was marred yet it shall be fair and unchanged when he receivea a double crown of martyr and king in a heavenly world. He was one of the chiefest of the apostles as well as a prophet, for he prophecied his own death, many years ago, soon after the martyrdom of Joseph and Hirum. He wrote the history of his own life, some portions of which he read to me last summer in his own house in Great Salt Lake City; it is a work full of interest and instruction, and I have no doubt will shortly be published for the benefit of his family, and I am sure it will meet with an extensive sale.

Such council as you have as President over the Eastern Conferences, with regard to the particular field of my labor I am anxious to receive as well as such other instruction as you may see fit, either by letter or through THE MORMON.

35 JEWIN STREET, CITY, LONDON, June 23rd, 1857.

ELDER T. B. H. STENHOUSE—Dear Bro., I have often thought of dropping you a few lines for old acquaintance sake, but have not been able through press of business and other circumstances to put my thought into practice. I have been deprived of the pleasure of hearing from many of my old friends through not having time to write to them. Since I last had the privelege of spending a short time with you in London, I have had a mission to Germany which succeeded admirably, so far as we had the opportunity to carry into effect the object of our mission. It was under the direction of President F. D. Richards who paid a personal visit to that country, and laid the foundation of what will yet prove a mighty work: he was accompanied by Elder Wm. H. Kimball. After organizing a Branch of the Church these brethren left just in time to escape getting into trouble. I had shortly afterwards to follow, that is in about two months. I went to Geneva, and while there found that I had been followed up; and the police in Geneva in correspondence with those whose acquaintance I had cut. Two German families, the first fruits of our labor were the next obliged to take their flight. These two families have been with us in London until their emigration; one family having gone on to the Valley, and the other to the States. Elder Maser, the head of the last named family you will no doubt become acquainted with; he is a good man and has been faithful. In Geneva I first met President John L. Smith and renewed acquaintance with President Daniel Tyler, and Elder Chislett, who received me with the greatest kindness, and with whom I spent a few days most agreeably. I saw a number of your old friends, your children in the Gospel, and among them Father Morrell, whom I remember well, through his first question always being concerning Bro. Stenhouse. Soon after, I arrived in London with Elder Tyler, I then visited Liverpool, was appointed to labor in London and have been here since. This conference, to judge by the works and spirit of the Saints, is in good condition. We have the advantage of many visits from the authorities at Liverpool; President Pratt has been with us twice and President Benson several times, and Brethren from the other Conferences come and see us occasionally. Their presence cheers the Saints, and their instructions strengthen their faith. The Reformation has caused a new spirit to take hold of the people. The Saints are more diligent than heretofore and understand that working is required as well as talking, and the Gentiles are acting upon the same principle, for they are putting forth all their strength to battle with the truth. I must not omit to mention the names of my fellow laborers in the metropolis, who are a host in themselves; most of whom you are acquainted with. Elders Thos. Bullock, E. L. T. Harrison, and our old friend Joseph Silver, C. W. Penrose and Elder Barnett. Pastor J. D. Ross is well and as active as ever in attending to business matters and watching over the interests of the Saints; we have good times and I never enjoyed myself better. There is a spirit of union prevailing through all the Priesthood and we have scarcely lost a single Saint through the Reformation who was worth anything before; so that our meetings are better attended than heretofore, although we have emigrated a large number. The Brethren are preaching in the streets, the Sisters are distributing tracts, some are being baptized and prospects are good. With best wishes to yourself, sister Stenhouse and family, I am your brother, &c.,

WILLIAM BUDGE.

The New Governor of Utah.

COL. CUMMING has arrived at St. Louis on his way to the Territory. He was formerly a merchant in extensive business at Augusta, Georgia, where he became insolvent. Subsequently he established himself as sutler to forces stationed at Jefferson Barracks, and afterwards was appointed Indian Agent, in which capacity he served at the time of his appointment to fill the post of Governor of Utah.—[Chicago Weekly Tribune, July 17.

FOR THE MORMON.

Intelligence, or Mind and Heart.

BY ALEXANDER OTT.

WHAT is more calculated to open the contemplative vein of the mind—what has a greater tendency to fill the soul with images of truth and virtue and to illuminate the same with knowledge and wisdom, than the investigation of that divine essence whose agency is so strikingly manifesting itself in the sublime economy of Nature?

Man, the necessity of whose existence was conceived in the eternal mind, being the personified realization of a divine idea, the concrete entity of an abstract will, is, when mentally and physically properly developed, a thinking being, who ought to comprehend his position in the scale of creation; but alas, how many have a mind in nuce—how many are, on account of their thoughts, like a mushroom, constantly being confined to one trivial spot, in a mental stagnation; hence the qualites and properties of the divine spark tenanting their bodies lie dormant, and do not answer the purposes of their creation. The life of such persons is merely to vegetate—that is to say, the acquirement of temporalities for the sustainance of their tabernacles is their sole aim, and an intellectual development is entirely neglected. A rational being will, however, comprehend that everything, both in the physical and mental creation, has to accomplish certain ends, and that the main object of an overruling Providence is to let every being enjoy a certain amount of intelligence and happiness.

To think is to conceive ideas, which are in strict harmony with reason, common sense and knowledge—the latter may be either acquired theoretically or empirically;—to think is not to doze, nor to imitate, but it is the full exercise of the mental powers independent of any other impulse but that of seeking truth; it is the concentration of the intellectual faculties in a certain focus, for the purpose of understanding or eliciting truisms contained in the great book of Nature. The object in mental operations must always be a conception of correct, feasible ideas, from the execution of which the thinker and society at large may receive some salutary effects, and not an indulgence in absurd, dreamy speculations, which tend to make the mind morbid, and lead man but too often from the legitimate channel of enlightened reason. Hence we have to untrammel ourselves of the powers of mere imagination, of mere feelings and impressions, because the three last characteristics of the human soul are generally disturbing the mental equilibrium, and blinding the intellect, lead to incorrect conclusions; consequently before we do a thing, we have, when in self-contemplation, to counsel first with reason, and then with the heart, because the latter suggests or approves frequently what the first condemns—hence the necessity of allowing reason the first voice As an illustration of the foregoing, I will introduce the following example: An Elder is appointed to go on a mission; here the heart will experience painful sensations at the idea of parting with the beloved ones at home—this is natural, and nature operates in every one alike, only that one man can better control his feelings than another;—well, if the Elder would listen to the voice of the heart, he would refuse leaving his family, but reason tells him to do his duty—hence if a person is strong minded, he will comply with the dictates of reason, and endeavor to subdue the emotions of the heart. Owing to our natural disposition, it may be sometimes very difficult to overcome the rising storm of the inner-man, but in the course of time we find that what appeared to us first as an evil, proved a blessing; realizing thus that reason and intelligence are our surest guides through this vail of tears, we will gradually learn to appreciate these two principles and uphold them in their solemn offices.

But is not the voice of the heart the voice of fate? well it is, if guided by reason, but if not, it may, as an enlightened friend of mine truly remarks, lead to mental derangement or insanity. A person is morally and intellectually sound when he does what is suggested by reason and sanctioned by the heart, i. e., when the emotions of the latter find a harmonious echo in the chambers of the mind; when a beautiful and correct exchange of feelings and reason is a standing principle, so that the mind may act in the capacity of an experienced, wise and kind brother, and the heart be his gentle and submissive sister, and then what is deficient in one will be made up by the other, according to the law of compensation which we find every where in Nature.

Man is so constituted that mind has to appeal to mind and heart to heart, that is to say, the one has to go hand in hand with the other, and then he will secure the esteem and affections of his associates. A heartless person may dazzle through the brilliancy of his mental powers and gain admiration, but his laurels will merely be a triumphant appeal to the public intellect, and so vice versa. Bright is the sun and pale is the moon, and still the dazzling brilliancy of the great luminary of the day is often eclipsed by the softer and weaker silver light of the moon; so the intellect of man, it shines often with the splendor of the sun, whereas the heart appears merely in the modest and gentle garb of the lovely luminary of the night, but still they both lead, if properly guided, to the accomplishment of the grandest purposes of the eternal mind, viz., to universal happiness.

A person of a sound intellect and heart will gain intelligence of himself and others; he will always endeavor to attune his mind to that key which is productive of soothing strains of harmony, joy, and happiness; he will be able to lift the curtain of Nature, and thus store his mind with useful knowledge. Knowing his disposition and that of others; understanding the laws of the mental and physical creation, he will gain power over himself, over others, and over the crude elements. Possessing intelligence, he will know what to receive and what to reject; he will understand how to act in the various phases of life; he will realize that he is a connecting link of an endless order of intelligences, and will endeavor to keep up with the wheels of Time, that seem to roll faster in the ocean of eternity, the more we approach that solemn moment when our mortal coil will be laid in the dust, and our spirits will wing their flight to new fields of action.

But, alas! that man should take so little pains in cultivating the noble impulses of mind and heart, and thus instead of realizing a heaven have often a hell here below.

FOR THE MORMON.

Violent Likers.

IT has often been a subject of amusing contemplation to me to observe the ingenuity with which persons of ardent minds heap perfections upon the individuals they take temporary fancies to, and the perseverance with which they continue for some time to add to the (often imaginary) list during the time the fancy for the favorite lasts. The individual to whom these lively-minded, warm-hearted persons take a fancy, immediately in their eyes becomes a model of every virtue and perfection. Not content with the several excellencies of character this person (whether male or female) may chance to possess, each quality is exaggerated and shown off through a magnifying glass to all the friends of these hot hearted persons, nay, even sometimes to every stranger they may chance to associate with; and not satisfied with the numbers of excellencies or accomplishments, their favorite for the time does possess, all the talents and cardinal virtues are indiscriminately huddled upon the unfortunate, and perhaps, unconscious object of their admiration. I say unfortunate, for this paragon of ideal perfection can not long maintain his superabundant collection of excellencies and virtues. He must sink under a load so heavy and so undue. Yes, this idol must fall to the ground, and I have seen instances where the idolatry of many months has ceased forever in as many minutes. Yes, I have known three or four words from the favorite himself destroy at once this unstable fabric, just as a child will blow down a card house of five or six stories high, which he himself has built up with such pains and anxiety. I have seen the whole string of virtues and charms of some favorite object tossed down and scattered on the ground in the same manner that a pack of cards is scattered on the carpet by one of these unfortunate castle builders. The child probably after the first vexation is over gathers up the scattered pack and begins to erect a fresh pagoda of cards. But in more mature age these persons of ardent minds do not so easily recover the disappointment, nor do they ever build a fresh tower of perfections on the same persons, strang with mortification at their own want of discrimination, they feel the veil suddenly removed which concealed all the faults, and who has not faults? of their idol, they suddenly fly to the contrary extreme, and contribute to him bad qualities and imperfections which in reality do not exist. These fancied imperfections spring up as quickly as mushrooms of the worst sort in the minds of these ardent, changeable, firery-minded persons, they turn from their former idol with disgust, are out of patience and angry with themselves for ever having extolled the now prostrate favorite, they vow secretly to themselves that they will never like or admire any person again, they continue cross and uncomfortable for some time, until tired of being in an inactive state of mind they see a new object upon whom they lavish the same sort of enthusiastic admiration as before. All this time the objects themselves have probably remained quite calm and unconcerned. They perhaps have never been conscious of the extravagant encomiums arising from their imaginary perfection or the dreadful degradation of their fall. Ten to one, those idols happen to be quiet, hum drum, reasonable, regular sort of persons, quite incapable of any violent liking or disliking, and never dreaming that they themselves could possibly occasion any in persons whose chief business is eating, drinking and sleeping, taking a sober walk, reading the newspaper or a novel on a week day, the bible on a Sunday, eating in a most orthodox manner, mince pies at Christmas, and roast goose at Michaelmas; putting on a winter dress on the 1st of October, though the thermometer is at summer heat, and summer habiliments on the first of April, though the snow should still be on the ground. Now, it remains to be asked which of these personages is the happiest—the plain, calm-hearted person, who leads a chrysalis sort of existence, or the fanciful firery, active, changable sort of a being above described. The Mormon Trains

ON the 1st inst. a train consisting of over thirty wagons, and on the 2nd inst. a train consisting of twenty wagons, passed through this city en route for Salt Lake City, Utah. The emigrants were mostly English, and in appearance healthy, cleanly and intelligent. They are just the kind of persons to settle a new country. The women were rather over the medium size of the American women and looked as if they could, if necessary hold the plow, or assist in harvesting the wheat and barley which grows to such perfection in Utah. Notwithstanding all that has been said about the people of Utah, we think, with the exception of their peculiar domestic institutions, they will be found to be a much better and law abiding people, than they have been represented to be, and we will be greatly deceived, if the Government of the U. S. finds any necessity for sending the large number of troops which it is said are about to be sent to Utah.—Council Bluffs, Daily Morning Bugle, July 4th.

TELEGRAPHIC.

Important from Kansas.

WASHINGTON, July 17, 1857.

The President received a telegraph despatch this morning, dated at Leavenworth yesterday, from Governor Walker, stating that a serious insurrection had broken out at Lawrence, and that he had called out the United States troops to suppress it. The Governor had started immediately for Lawrence.

The cause of the outbreak is not known, but it is supposed to have originated from opposition to some of the Territorial laws—probably the tax law.

The receipt of this news has caused some little excitement in certain quarters.

The Cabinet were in session until a late hour this evening, and I doubt not this subject was prominently before them.

The Verdict on the Steamer Montreal Disaster.

QUEBEC, July 17, 1857.

The Coroner's jury have returned a verdict of "Manslaughter" against Wilson, the owner of the steamer Montreal; Rudolph, the Captain; Derval, the pilot, and Roberge the mate. They also strongly censure Mr. Wilson, senior, the controlling agent. They recommend the stringent enforcement of the steamboat law. The parties implicated will be tried at the present session of the Court of Queen's Bench.

UTICA, July 20, 1857.

William Steers has been arrested on a suspicion of his setting fire to the State Lunatic Asylum in this city. He was sent to the asylum in 1850 from New York, where he had fired several buildings. He was discharged from the asylum last fall, but was afterwards employed there in a subordinate capacity. It it believed that he set fire to the asylum and also to the barn belonging to it, which was burned last Saturday.

House Struck by Lightning—Two Men Killed.

BOSTON, July 20, 1857.

The Plume House, Franconia Notch, Mount Washington, New Hampshire, was struck by lightning on Saturday afternoon, W. H. Smith, of the firm of Davis, Wright & Co., of Boston, and Mr. Blaudon, clerk of the hotel, were instantly killed.

Kansas News.

ST. LOUIS, July 20.

A gentleman from Kansas, on Friday, states that, at a public meeting on Thursday, it was determined to resist the United States troops, if an attempt was made to collect the taxes. A gentleman had met Gov. Walker ten miles from Lawrence with seven companies of infantry, and he said that he would use force if necessary. The Free State men were hurrying to Lawrence, and Gen. Lane has been sent for.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 20.

Both Gov. Walker and Gen. Harney have power, under discretionary orders heretofore transmitted, to detain troops destined for Utah, to preserve the peace of Kansas.

MARRIED,

At St. Louis, by Elder J. W. Coward, JOHN HEATON, of Thornhill, Yorkshire, England, to JANET SINCLAIR, of Tranent, near Edinburgh, Scotland.

DIED,

On the 26th April, at Boonville, Mo., of measles, Sister HARRIET MAHALA BABBITT, in the 28th year of her age.

She had long been a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and died in unshaken confidence in the precepts of the Gospel and in hope of a glorious resurrection. Sister Babbitt is the youngest sister of Col. A. W. Babbitt, who was murdered on the Plains last summer.—COM.

Notice to Subscribers

WE frequently receive remittances for subscriptions to THE MORMON, without the sender giving the name of the place he desires the paper to be sent to. Sometimes the name of the Post Office or town is mentioned, but not the county, and as there are several towns in some States by the same name, unless the county is designated we are at a loss to know where to direct the papers ordered. We wish all communications to us to name distinctly the Post Office or town, county, and State or Territory, as then there will be no mistake.

Notice.

THE Saints who desire to send means to their friends in Europe, can have the same attended to, by forwarding any sum they wish in current money, to this office, enclosing one dollar or more, in proportion to the amount sent, to defray the expenses of procuring Bills of Exchange, making remittances, foreign postage, &c., describing particularly to whom, and where they wish to have it sent; at the same time not holding myself responsible in any manner whatever unless the money reach me.

All subscriptions, donations, &c., for the support of THE MORMON, or Conference Fund (except the donations and Conference Funds raised in the Philadelphia Conference, which will be forwarded as usual through President Cannon) must be sent hereafter to my address; as also Tithing; P. E. Fund, and donations for the Temple from those who wish to contribute the same, so each person may be duly credited, and the means forwarded to Zion, and have their names entered in "The Book of the Law of the Lord."

No Power of Attorney, or other legal instrument of writing, going to Europe or elsewhere, forwarded to us for the purpose of sending to Washington in order to obtain the attestation of the Department, and the British Consul's Certificate and seal to the same, will be attended to in future, unless the means to defray the expenses and foreign postage accompanies the Instrument, as there is considerable expense attending it as well as labor. We would like to oblige all, and are willing to give our services when we have opportunity; but we cannot advance means to defray such expenses.

All communications intended for THE MORMON should be addressed—Editor of THE MORMON, New York. Otherwise direct to my address, Box No. 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. APPLEBY.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The four is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the 'laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les excès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

This is to inform all such persons that no such letters will be taken out of the office, by us, in future.

A Card to the Saints

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

Our Existence—Past, Present, and Future.

BY ELDER JABEZ WOODARD.

TUNE—"May Day."

Oh, we've been, yes, we've been in a bright world before,
Where we liv'd with our Father and Mother of yore;
And they nurs'd us as those that were tender and fair,
And wreath'd with fresh flow'rets our beautiful hair.

Oh, the streamlets which flow'd thro' those gardens above,
Were clear as the crystal of Ed'ns first love;
And the songs that we sang were all noble and true
As the palm trees of Heaven that over us grew.

But how many we were, and how boundless our bliss,
We cannot unfold in such regions as this;
For the vail hath come down o'er that landscape of light,
And now we are left in the shadows of night.

So our garments are chang'd and our glory hath fled,
And the sackcloth is ours and dust on our head;
And our Father and Mother are hidden on high,
And the storm-clouds are black in the wint'ry sky.

Yet we'll quickly return to the mansions of light,
Resplendant again in our garments of white;
And the face of our Father shall smile in that morn,
When the bands of the grave, asunder are torn.

So we'll tread the fair scenes that we've trodden before,
With honor surpassing the ages of yore,
While the friends that have clustered like kingdoms around,
Shall then in our trains with their glories be found.

And Thou, Father, for ever in splendor shalt shine,
And we'll toil, toil, toil for a glory like thine,
Which we left in our Eden to wander below.

FOR THE MORMON.

The Name of a Thing.

BY ELDER JOHN F. SNEDIKER.

It is indeed astonishing to see what an influence the name of the things, or in other words, popular opinion has upon mankind. It may safely be said that a large majority of the world are influenced more in their actions by the popular opinion than by any inward self-conviction, or by any love of truth, virtue, honesty, and integrity. History, both ancient and modern, affords numerous examples; in proof of this, we need not however, resort to ancient history for examples; matters and affairs of the present day afford striking illustrations of this evil propensity which has debarred so many from embracing true principles and enjoying great blessings and genuine pleasures. The artificial arrangements of society; the rules of fashion and the various customs of different nations and communities might be brought up as illustrations; but I feel to confine myself in this article to things of another nature—things which are more directly connected with the eternal welfare of man; namely, to the principles or the plan of Life and Salvation: which by some folks would be termed the subject of religion.

We find at the present day popular systems of Christian religion, or in other words, popular modes to worship the Supreme Being, and popular religious rites and ceremonies, by the observance of which, people think to obtain a future state of happiness and glory. Those, although much different in forms, doctrines, and organizations, still teach some general doctrines or opinions, said to be deducible from the Bible, which, upon strict examination, however, prove to be only the opinions of men, and entirely contrary to the teachings of the Bible. One of the most popular of these doctrines is, that divine and direct revelations have forever ceased, and that inspired Apostles and Prophets are no longer required. This doctrine, erroneous as it is, is taught and inculcated by all modern Christendom; and any deviation from it is at once pronounced a heresy and a delusion. Joseph Smith was the first man of our generation who innovated upon this popular opinion by declaring that he had received visits from heavenly messengers who unfolded great and important principles concerning the plan of Salvation unto him, and commissioned him to re-establish the ancient order of Christianity. The result of this intrusion upon popular opinion was, that, notwithstanding reformer after reformer had arisen for the last three hundred years with the avowed purpose to improve degenerated Christianity, yet, as soon as Joseph Smith made known the important facts that angels had again administered to men on the earth; that the mist of darkness which had enwrapt Christianity for ages was about to be dispelled; and that the Gospel was again to shine in all its primitive brilliancy; accompanied by all the miraculous gifts and spiritual blessings of which it was so characteristic in the days of the Apostles, the "hue and cry" of impostor and deceiver were raised by the very men who professed to be the most pious and the most ardent seekers of pure Christianity.

To say that angels had again appeared to men on the earth, was pronounced blasphemy; and to declare that the ancient gifts and blessings of the Gospel were again enjoyed by obedient and repentant believers, was stamped with fanaticism. But what were the reasons assigned for thus opposing and denouncing the restoration of the primitive order of Christianity with all its officers, powers, gifts and blessings? Was it because such a thing was contrary to Holy Writ, or even contrary to common sense and sound logic? No. But because it was contrary to popular opinion; it was because people had been falsely taught. For a man to claim to be an Apostle or a Prophet of God was blasphemy; and that everyone who professed to have received a direct revelation from God was an impostor. This was enough for the masses; priest and people went immediately to work to slander and traduce the human instrument in the hands of the Lord who made this innovation upon popular opinion. And, although Joseph Smith was but an obscure lad when he first proclaimed his testimony to men of the apostacy from Christianity, yet, the name of Prophet was odious enough in the eyes of the populace to cause them at once to heap all manner of invectives upon his head; and to apply with unrelenting severity that weapon of bigotry and persecution to him and his followers. The same spirit has continued with the people to the present day.

To talk of Scripture, reason, or common sense is vain; it seems to be enough for the majority of people to know that Joseph Smith and "Mormonism" are unpopular. There are, perhaps, none who have more striking examples of this than the Elders of this Church who have traveled among the world. The following incident of my own experience, which, by-the-way, is only one out of many of like character, may serve as an illustration.

Some time last summer I was traveling through a county of this State, (Pennsylvania,) where the Gospel, or "Mormonism," had not been preached of late years. Wishing to make as good use of the time as possible, I sent appointments for preaching ahead by every opportunity; and among the rest I engaged an old lady to make an appointment for me at the village where she resided, which she did; but did not tell the people to what particular Church I belonged. I went to the place at the appointed time, found quite a large congregation assembled, anxiously wait-to hear what the stranger had to say. In the first part of my discourse, I set forth "The first principles of the Gospel" with their attendant gifts and blessing as recorded in the New Testament, with which the people seemed pleased; but when I added that the things and principles I had laid before them had been restored again to man in this day through the administration of Angels and by direct revelation, and, that one of the main instruments through whom the Lord had brought about this restoration was Joseph Smith, their feelings changed directly; and at the close of the meeting some observed, "Had you not brought the visiting of Angels and the name of Joseph Smith in connection with your discourse we should have liked it well enough." Thus showing that the Name of Things had much more influence upon their minds than the strongest Scriptural evidence. As I said before, incidents like the above are of common occurrence. The most forcible reasoning and most positive Scriptural evidences are overbalanced in the minds of many people by popular clamor. The question with many is not, do these men proclaim the Truth? but it is, "What is the name of the party they belong to?" As the answer is, they are "Mormons," all is over with a good many folks; the ears are stopped, and the heart is closed against all further information, and the cry is, as it formerly was, "away with them! they are impostors!!" How inconsistent with their profession is the conduct of this generation: how literally do they follow in the footsteps of their fathers! Who, that is in the least conversant with the Bible does not know that the Truth was always unpopular? That almost every servant of God, who was sent among the children of men with a particular message, was sneered at and rejected by the people or generation to whom they came! Our Lord and Saviour was held in derision and called everything that was bad; glutton, miserable wine-bibber, associate of publicans and sinners, sabbath-breaker, and other such like epithets were commonly applied to him. "Can anything good come out of Nazareth?" was one of the arguments brought forth by the Jews against the divinity of Christ. Every device was resorted to by the people of that day to brand with the stigma of unpopularity the Saviour and his followers. They were everywhere evil spoken of, all manner of absurd lies were circulated concerning them, the name of "Nazarine" or "Christian" was odious enough in the estimation of the populace to justify them in deriding, maligning, and persecuting the disciples of Jesus. The eloquence of Paul was drowned by the popular clamor: "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

The strong reasoning of James proved ineffectual to convince the ceremonious Jews and superstitious Pagans. The powerful testimony of Peter was derided by terming it the effects of drunkenness. Scripture, reason, and miraculous manifestations sunk into insignificance as soon as they came in contact with the religious creeds and popular notions of the day. An Agrippa or a Felix might be convinced of the Truth by Scriptural reasonings and real Christian eloquence; but the fear of being reproached by the name of "Christian," and thus fall into unpopularity, prevented them from openly acknowledging their conviction.

A Nicodemus availed himself of the dark shades of the night to seek instructions from the Saviour in whom he secretly believed; but dared not for fear of becoming unpopular publicly acknowledge him.

The cry was then, "Away with the Christians! Do not harbor them! Do not let them into our synagogues and public halls to preach, for they belong to those despised Nazarines—that sect which is everywhere spoken against." Thus the hearts of the people were closed against the Truth, and thus they were led to reject the very principles, which, if embraced would have secured unto them an exaltation in the Kingdom of God.

Reader, have you ever witnessed anything similar to the above in this day? Have you ever known halls, chapels, and churches to be closed against men and they thus deprived of a public hearing, simply because the people called them "Mormons?" Have you ever seen a periodical thrown into the corner unread or rejected entirely, no matter how important information it contained, for no other reason than this; that on its first page stood in bold relief, the six letters; MORMON! Have you ever witnessed true eloquence, Scriptural proofs, sound reasonings, powerful testimonies, and miraculous manifestations of the power of God derided and rejected because they were produced by men, to whom was given the, (as the world considered,) reproachful name of "Mormons? Did you ever know the populace to be excited to deeds of violence towards an innocent people because somebody had said that they were a bad people, or, at least, that they had a bad name and were spoken against by the Scribes and Pharisees? [Priests.] Have you ever heard of a people in this day and in this boasted land of liberty and equal rights being persecuted, some of them killed, robbed, deprived of their rights, driven from their homes time after time, trampled upon by Governors and Legislatures, and abused in every imaginable way, for no other reasons than they had seen fit to differ from their neighbors in their religious belief, and that they contended for that same Gospel with all its powers, gifts, and blessings which were so unpopular in the days of Jesus and His Apostles? I presume that many of my readers can answer in the affirmative to all the above questions; for it is a notorious fact that all those things have occurred and do now occur right in our midst in this age of boasted civilization and enlightenment.

I would advise every candid person, then, to let the history of the past be a warning unto them against being influenced by the popular clamor, that they may not be led to reject the offers of Heaven, and to fight against the purposes of Jehovah, or, perhaps, still further to imbrue their hand in the innocent blood of the anointed of the Lord. Let all beware that the cry, "His blood be upon us and our children," be not reiterated by them against those whom the Lord has sent with a message to the inhabitants of the earth. But, on the other hand, learn to judge of things by their real merits and not by popular clamor.

PREST. APPLEBY—Dear Bro.: In my travels I now and again come across persons who, though holding a name and standing in the kingdom of the Most High God, and looking forward in anticipation of claiming the privileges pertaining to faithful subjects of the same, view many of the Gospel ordinances and counsels of the servants of God with, apparently, a great deal of indifference.

As these feelings may arise in part from ignorance of the principles thus lightly treated, perhaps a few remarks in regard to some of them might be of benefit.

I have been told by such persons, in regard to family prayer, that they did not think it compulsory with them to call their families around them regularly every day at stated times to bow the knee to God. Saying, in order to excuse themselves from this important duty, that they could find no such requirement recorded in the Bible.

But, is a saint of God to be tied to the Bible? Is the Bible all the word the Eternal Father has ever delivered to man? I answer, no; there are numerous books quoted in that same Bible, that are not now to be found, which contained the word of God as revealed to man in various dispensations. We, as members of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, have the word of God as delivered in this the dispensation of the fullness of times, through the Prophet, Seer and Revelator, Joseph Smith; and every true Saint will be free to accept, not only all scripture that ever has been, but all that now is or ever will be given: therefore that all may know their duty, and not hereafter plead ignorance, I will quote a part of:

"A Revelation given Nov., 1831," as recorded in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, Sec. 22, 4th paragraph.

. . . . . "He that observeth not his prayers before the Lord in the season thereof, let him be had in remembrance before the Judge of my people," saith the Lord.

Aside from the obligations of Christianity, there is now no compulsion for mankind to pray at all, regular or irregular, public or private; at present the Lord gives them their own free agency in these matters, (although it is written, as I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue confess to God:"—Paul.) But if they wish to assume the position, and claim the privileges of citizens of the Kingdom of God, then it is just as compulsory for them to yield obedience to this commandment, as to faith, repentance, or any other.

Remember, that "whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, is guilty of the whole:—James."

The simple act of entering into the Kingdom of God through the primary ordinances will not save a person in that Kingdom; but he that endureth to the end shall be saved.

Some have said, "when I feel the spirit of prayer I'll call upon the Lord, and not before."

To such I would say, the Lord expects you to endeavor to live in such a manner as always to retain the spirit of prayer, so that when the season thereof comes, you may be ready to perform your duty; and if by neglect of other duties you loose that spirit, that certainly does not release you from your obligations to perform this important duty; therefore to indulge in such kind of feelings is a great error.

The enemy of all mankind very well knows that "the effectual prayer of a righteous man availeth much," hence his desire, if possible, to stifle the supplicating voice of a saint before the throne of grace. If he can only get a saint to neglect some, apparently trifling, duty, (the consequence of which neglect is immediately felt in a loss of a portion of that spirit whereby we cry Abba Father,) he then quickly whispers in his ears, "now your God is displeased with you it is of no use for you to offer up your petitions at present, wait till you are approved of in your hearts by His Holy Spirit." And if he succeeds in delaying his approach to the throne of grace, he will then throw some other temptation in his way of a more serious nature, which the poor "soldier of the cross," being already much weakened, is ill prepared to resist; and thus he lures him on, from error to darkness, and from darkness to greater error, until finally the Spirit ceaseth to strive with him, and Satan laughs over his triumph.

Supposing you had a child whom you had given a certain task to perform, and through negligence or carelessness your child should fall short of what was required of it: would you not expect that child to come and ask your forgiveness, and seek a renewal of your favor? or would you feel justified to go and smilingly extend your hand, before the child had taken any steps towards an atonement or reconciliation. We, as children of God, have tasks to perform; we often come short of them, and our Father expects us to seek and implore His forgiveness.

When a saint of God cannot command the spirit of prayer, it is either because he has "done those things which he ought not to have done" or "left undone those things which he ought to have done;" and if there ever is a time when he should, like Jacob of old, wrestle with God in mighty prayer, it is then.

When does a christian stand more in need of strength than when he feels himself worsted in the fight of faith? And how is he to obtain that strength, if not by calling on the Captain of our salvation?

Prayer, however, is not a duty incumbent upon a saint simply because of its being a commandment, or because it conduces to his individual interest, but it is a duty he owes to the church in general and to his family in particular; he owes it to the church, as one member of the body politic, and as such it is his duty to seek the general interest of the whole; remembering that the body is made up of a collection of units, and that each individual unit is composed of the same weak, fallable material as himself. And if it will strengthen him, and cheer him on to his duty, to know that the prayers of his brethren are exercised in his behalf, it is reasonable to suppose that his prayers, as one of the mass, will have a like effect upon his fellow laborers.

Again: at every conference the Saints hold up their hands before high heaven, thereby covenanting that they will sustain those placed in authority over them; and in order to do this fully, faith, prayers and works must go together. Faith must be kept alive by humble prayer; and it requires a living faith to bring forth works unto salvation.

It is the duty of a Saint to pray in his family regularly "in the season thereof," because their prayers united and offered through Him, the popular head, will have more effect than otherwise, both for their benefit as a family, and for the interests of the kingdom at large. "Unity is strength."

Order is the first law of Heaven; therefore the Saints are required to keep their families, (being under the law of Heaven,) in order also: and there is, perhaps, nothing that tends more to establish this principle in a family, than for him, upon whom every eye is turned, as their proper Head, to call them together every morning and evening, at the usual hour, for the purpose of worshiping their Maker, thanking Him for past favors, and asking a continuation of the same. It has a tendency to create peace and union in every member of society, and unites every heart in bonds of love. The feelings are refined, the intellectual faculties enlarged and directed in the proper channel, in fact, every good, holy and virtuous principle is thereby encouraged.

Again, in the fore part of the same paragraph of the Revelation previously mentioned, the inhabitants of Zion are told that "They shall teach their children to pray and walk uprightly before the Lord." Of course He desires them to be taught to pray after the order of the Kingdom of Heaven, namely: "in the season thereof." Where are children to be taught this principle and to "walk uprightly before the Lord," if not in the family circle; and how are they to be taught if not by precept enforced by example?

Then O, ye Saints! let me exhort you not to neglect this important duty. In the morning, let the incense of your prayers arise like a sweet-smelling sacrifice from the family altar, that in return the blessings of Heaven may fall like the refreshing dew around your habitations: and in the evening let your voices ascend on high in songs of praise and gladness for all His mercies past; and under the sweet influences of His Spirit, your rest shall be calm, peaceful, and invigorating.

Much more might be said upon this subject, but I fear to occupy too much of your paper, knowing how many talented minds are at your command of far greater experience in the literary line than myself.

My desire is to stir up the pure minds of some, who, I fear, are waxing weary in the race, to a rememberance of their duties, that they may gird on the whole armor of God, fight the good fight of Faith, and win a crown of Glory.

Hoping that God will bless the united labors of all engaged in rolling forth the "little stone," I remain yours in the bonds of the Gospel, A. P. WELCHMAN.

Correspondence from England.

LONDON, June 27, 1857.

ELDER T. B. H. STENHOUSE—Dear Bro.: Thirteen years have passed away this day since the two great Philanthropists of this age were relieved from mortality to put on immortality, to leave their corruptible bodies and put on incorruption, having restored the Gospel to the earth in all its beauty, plainness, and simplicity, organized the Priesthood, set it in order, with all its officers, keys, powers, ceremonies and appendages, having received instruction how to do all these glorious duties by being continually instructed by an Holy Angel sent from and by the Lord Jesus Christ, who condescended also to lift the veil, so that the Prophet Joseph could behold the vision, wherein he saw the Saviour standing at the right hand of God the Father; and who received such instructions as will restore all Israel, all the household of faith, back to the presence of the Father, even the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Yes, dear brother, this is the anniversary of the day when those two good men Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith sealed their testimony with their blood, knowing that their testimony was true, but the day had brought sorrow, tears, wailings and lamentations to thousands; oh, the heartfelt agony when the news arrived in Nauvoo. I realize it again.

They are not dead, but alive, alive in the Spirit world, having carried the news of the glorious restitution of the Gospel to the earth, offering life and salvation to every son and daughter of Adam, who will obey.

The Gospel was also left on the earth, that every man might not be lost, but that sinners might have the opportunity to repent and live, the mantle that was on Joseph fell on the shoulders of Brigham Young, who had received all the keys, powers and authority, to continue to roll on the work of the Lord on the earth, which has been evidently manifested to all the world by the accelerated increase with which the Temple at Nauvoo progressed until its completion, for the capstone was put on with shoutings of rejoicing, (contrary to the prophecies of the seceders from Mormonism) the Saints, with the work, and their dead, were accepted of the Lord; endowments were given therein, angels manifested their presence therein, time and again, apostates were confounded and the wicked gnashed their teeth with rage.

When all was accomplished that was required at his hand, he, like Moses of old, led Israel into the wilderness, and also in the midst of savage Indian tribes, when his country called for 500 volunteers to fight her battles with Mexico, responded "Sir, you shall have them," and in three days the flower of the Mormon camp started under the gallant Captain Allen for Santa Fe.

Did the Lord of Hosts forsake Brigham in that trying hour? No, sir, he was inspired to gather out the little band of pioneers and start across the Great American Desert; and if he was not guided "by a pillar of fire by night, and a cloud by day," he was dictated by an angel of the Lord, to make new trails, and pass through almost inaccessible kanyons, fraught with danger, into the very heart of the stupendous Rocky Mountains, where the Saints of God could be gathered, where they might worship God unmolested, free from the gaze of a wicked and adulterous generation; disturbing no one, and being too far off from wicked men, for them easily and comfortably to go and disturb the Saints, or even annoy them in a serious manner.

As I am one of the pioneers, and lived in Great Salt Lake Valley, until Sept. 10, 1856, I do know that the Mormons strictly attended to their own business, and very quietly left others to do the same, and I do know that Brigham Young, Governor of Utah, did protect Judge Brocchus, Drummond, and other officials, from the indignity that their mean actions ought to have insured them.

None but a servant of Jesus Christ would do as Brigham Young has done, he is the friend of all good men, and succors the distressed of every clime, and a better man can not be found.

Friend Stenhouse, excuse my pen preaching to you, instead of telling you all about my little self. I am here in the heart of London, appointed to look after seven branches containing now 378 members who have been baptized since March 1st, 30 of them are new members, and I will leave you to judge of what kind my company is, having sent you over 21 in the George Washington and Tuscarora.

I am happy to report that the London Conference is in good condition, my district pays more tithing than any other district, and Pastor Ross reports his pastorate takes one fifth of the Stars now published, so you can see by these two calculations that my field of labor is one of the most extensive. I have been in the waters of baptism fifteen times, and baptized about 108, pretty fair for a little boy like me, is it not? I am glad I was in England when this busy time took place, for my brethren of the Priesthood realize that I have done a good deal for them, well, all right, having done a good work and been busy all the time, I shall return home with a knowledge that I have done my duty, and that my mission has not been in vain.

Whisper in Brother Appleby's ear, and ask him to send me one word how my family is getting on, they live on the next block to his family, and the mail has miscarried their letters to me. Let him read this, as I also intended to write him, but I am kept so very busy all the time. I attend three or four meetings every Sunday, five week night meetings, and the balance of my time I am visiting among the Saints, or engaged in the duties of branch business.

The past week we have been favored by a visit from Prest. E. T. Benson and Elder John Scott, who feel well in their labors. Pastor Ross, Prest. Budge, and the travelling Elders are well, they feel well and are rejoicing in their labors also, and you may safely put us down as doing the best we can—they send their united love to you all in THE MORMON office.

May the blessings of the Lord Jesus Christ remain with you, and enable you to do a good work in his name, that we may be preserved from evil, and meet in Zion in peace and safety. Your fellow laborer in the Vineyard of the Lord,

THOMAS BULLOCK, Missionary, 31 Pakenham-street, Gray's Inn-Lane, London.

The Name of a Thing.

BY ELDER JOHN F. SNEDIKER.

It is indeed astonishing to see what an influence the name of the things, or in other words, popular opinion has upon mankind. It may safely be said that a large majority of the world are influenced more in their actions by the popular opinion than by any inward self-conviction, or by any love of truth, virtue, honesty, and integrity. History, both ancient and modern, affords numerous examples; in proof of this, we need not however, resort to ancient history for examples; matters and affairs of the present day afford striking illustrations of this evil propensity which has debarred so many from embracing true principles and enjoying great blessings and genuine pleasures. This doctrine, erroneous as it is, is taught and inculcated by all modern Christendom; and any deviation from it is at once pronounced a heresy and a delusion. Joseph Smith was the first man of our generation who innovated upon this popular opinion by declaring that he had received visits from heavenly messengers who unfolded great and important principles concerning the plan of Salvation unto him, and commissioned him to re-establish the ancient order of Christianity. The result of this intrusion upon popular opinion was, that, notwithstanding reformer after reformer had arisen for the last three hundred years with the avowed purpose to improve degenerated Christianity, yet, as soon as Joseph Smith made known the important facts that angels had again administered to men on the earth; that the mist of darkness which had enwrapt Christianity for ages was about to be dispelled; and that the Gospel was again to shine in all its primitive brilliancy; accompanied by all the miraculous gifts and spiritual blessings of which it was so characteristic in the days of the Apostles, the "hue and cry" of impostor and deceiver were raised by the very men who professed to be the most pious and the most ardent seekers of pure Christianity.

To say that angels had again appeared to men on the earth, was pronounced blasphemy; and to declare that the ancient gifts and blessings of the Gospel were again enjoyed by obedient and repentant believers, was stamped with fanaticism. But what were the reasons assigned for thus opposing and denouncing the restoration of the primitive order of Christianity with all its officers, powers, gifts and blessings? Was it because such a thing was contrary to Holy Writ, or even contrary to common sense and sound logic? No. But because it was contrary to popular opinion; it was because people had been falsely taught. For a man to claim to be an Apostle or a Prophet of God was blasphemy; and that everyone who professed to have received a direct revelation from God was an impostor. This was enough for the masses; priest and people went immediately to work to slander and traduce the human instrument in the hands of the Lord who made this innovation upon popular opinion. And, although Joseph Smith was but an obscure lad when he first proclaimed his testimony to men of the apostacy from Christianity, yet, the name of Prophet was odious enough in the eyes of the populace to cause them at once to heap all manner of invectives upon his head; and to apply with unrelenting severity that weapon of bigotry and persecution to him and his followers. The same spirit has continued with the people to the present day.

To talk of Scripture, reason, or common sense is vain; it seems to be enough for the majority of people to know that Joseph Smith and "Mormonism" are unpopular. There are, perhaps, none who have more striking examples of this than the Elders of this Church who have traveled among the world. The following incident of my own experience, which, by-the-way, is only one out of many of like character, may serve as an illustration.

Some time last summer I was traveling through a county of this State, (Pennsylvania,) where the Gospel, or "Mormonism," had not been preached of late years. Wishing to make as good use of the time as possible, I sent appointments for preaching ahead by every opportunity; and among the rest I engaged an old lady to make an appointment for me at the village where she resided, which she did; but did not tell the people to what particular Church I belonged. I went to the place at the appointed time, found quite a large congregation assembled, anxiously waiting to hear what the stranger had to say. In the first part of my discourse, I set forth "The first principles of the Gospel" with their attendant gifts and blessing as recorded in the New Testament, with which the people seemed pleased; but when I added that the things and principles I had laid before them had been restored again to man in this day through the administration of Angels and by direct revelation, and, that one of the main instruments through whom the Lord had brought about this restoration was Joseph Smith, their feelings changed directly; and at the close of the meeting some observed, "Had you not brought the visiting of Angels and the name of Joseph Smith in connection with your discourse we should have liked it well enough." Thus showing that the Name of Things had much more influence upon their minds than the strongest Scriptural evidence. As I said before, incidents like the above are of common occurrence. The most forcible reasoning and most positive Scriptural evidences are overbalanced in the minds of many people by popular clamor. The question with many is not, do these men proclaim the Truth? but it is, "What is the name of the party they belong to?" As the answer is, they are "Mormons," all is over with a good many folks; the ears are stopped, and the heart is closed against all further information, and the cry is, as it formerly was, "away with them! they are impostors!!" How inconsistent with their profession is the conduct of this generation: how literally do they follow in the footsteps of their fathers! Who, that is in the least conversant with the Bible does not know that the Truth was always unpopular? That almost every servant of God, who was sent among the children of men with a particular message, was sneered at and rejected by the people or generation to whom they came! Our Lord and Saviour was held in derision and called everything that was bad; glutton, miserable winebibber, associate of publicans and sinners, sabbath-breaker, and other such like epithets were commonly applied to him. "Can anything good come out of Nazareth?" was one of the arguments brought forth by the Jews against the divinity of Christ. Every device was resorted to by the people of that day to brand with the stigma of unpopularity the Saviour and his followers. They were everywhere evil spoken of, all manner of absurd lies were circulated concerning them, the name of "Nazarine" or "Christian" was odious enough in the estimation of the populace to justify them in deriding, maligning, and persecuting the disciples of Jesus. The eloquence of Paul was drowned by the popular clamor: "Great is Diana of the Ephesians!"

The strong reasoning of James proved ineffectual to convince the ceremonious Jews and superstitious Pagans. The powerful testimony of Peter was derided by terming it the effects of drunkenness. Scripture, reason, and miraculous manifestations sunk into insignificance as soon as they came in contact with the religious creeds and popular notions of the day. An Agrippa or a Felix might be convinced of the Truth by Scriptural reasonings and real Christian eloquence; but the fear of being reproached by the name of "Christian," and thus fall into unpopularity, prevented them from openly acknowledging their conviction.

A Nicodemus availed himself of the dark shades of the night to seek instructions from the Saviour in whom he secretly believed; but dared not for fear of becoming unpopular publicly acknowledge him.

The cry was then, "Away with the Christians! Do not harbor them! Do not let them into our synagogues and public halls to preach, for they belong to those despised Nazarines—that sect which is everywhere spoken against." Thus the hearts of the people were closed against the Truth, and thus they were led to reject the very principles, which, if embraced would have secured unto them an exaltation in the Kingdom of God.

Reader, have you ever witnessed anything similar to the above in this day? Have you ever known halls, chapels, and churches to be closed against men and they thus deprived of a public hearing, simply because the people called them "Mormons?" Have you ever seen a periodical thrown into the corner unread or rejected entirely, no matter how important information it contained, for no other reason than this; that on its first page stood in bold relief, the six letters; MORMON! Have you ever witnessed true eloquence, Scriptural proofs, sound reasonings, powerful testimonies, and miraculous manifestations of the power of God derided and rejected because they were produced by men, to whom was given the, (as the world considered,) reproachful name of "Mormons? Did you ever know the populace to be excited to deeds of violence towards an innocent people because somebody had said that they were a bad people, or, at least, that they had a bad name and were spoken against by the Scribes and Pharisees? [Priests.] Have you ever heard of a people in this day and in this boasted land of liberty and equal rights being persecuted, some of them killed, robbed, deprived of their rights, driven from their homes time after time, trampled upon by Governors and Legislatures, and abused in every imaginable way, for no other reasons than they had seen fit to differ from their neighbors in their religious belief, and that they contended for that same Gospel with all its powers, gifts, and blessings which were so unpopular in the days of Jesus and His Apostles? I presume that many of my readers can answer in the affirmative to all the above questions; for it is a notorious fact that all those things have occurred and do now occur right in our midst in this age of boasted civilization and enlightenment.

I would advise every candid person, then, to let the history of the past be a warning unto them against being influenced by the popular clamor, that they may not be led to reject the offers of Heaven, and to fight against the purposes of Jehovah, or, perhaps, still further to imbrue their hand in the innocent blood of the anointed of the Lord. Let all beware that the cry, "His blood be upon us and our children," be not reiterated by them against those whom the Lord has sent with a message to the inhabitants of the earth. But, on the other hand, learn to judge of things by their real merits and not by popular clamor.

PRESI. APPLEBY—Dear Bro.: In my travels I now and again come across persons who, though holding a name and standing in the kingdom of the Most High God, and looking forward in anticipation of claiming the privileges pertaining to faithful subjects of the same, view many of the Gospel ordinances and counsels of the servants of God with, apparently, a great deal of indifference.

As these feelings may arise in part from ignorance of the principles thus lightly treated, perhaps a few remarks in regard to some of them might be of benefit.

I have been told by such persons, in regard to family prayer, that they did not think it compulsory with them to call their families around them regularly every day at stated times to bow the knee to God. Saying, in order to excuse themselves from this important duty, that they could find no such requirement recorded in the Bible.

But, is a saint of God to be tied to the Bible? Is the Bible all the word the Eternal Father has ever delivered to man? I answer, no; there are numerous books quoted in that same Bible, that are not now to be found, which contained the word of God as revealed to man in various dispensations. We, as members of the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, have the word of God as delivered in this the dispensation of the fullness of times, through the Prophet, Seer and Revelator, Joseph Smith; and every true Saint will be free to accept, not only all scripture that ever has been, but all that now is or ever will be given: therefore that all may know their duty, and not hereafter plead ignorance, I will quote a part of:

"A Revelation given Nov., 1831," as recorded in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, Sec. 22, 4th paragraph.

. . . . . "He that observeth not his prayers before the Lord in the season thereof, let him be had in remembrance before the Judge of my people," saith the Lord.

Aside from the obligations of Christianity, there is now no compulsion for mankind to pray at all, regular or irregular, public or private; at present the Lord gives them their own free agency in these matters, (although it is written, as I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue confess to God:"—Paul.) But if they wish to assume the position, and claim the privileges of citizens of the Kingdom of God, then it is just as compulsory for them to yield obedience to this commandment, as to faith, repentance, or any other.

Remember, that "whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, is guilty of the whole:—James."

The simple act of entering into the Kingdom of God through the primary ordinances will not save a person in that Kingdom; but he that endureth to the end shall be saved.

Some have said, "when I feel the spirit of prayer I'll call upon the Lord, and not before."

To such I would say, the Lord expects you to endeavor to live in such a manner as always to retain the spirit of prayer, so that when the season thereof comes, you may be ready to perform your duty; and if by neglect of other duties you loose that spirit, that certainly does not release you from your obligations to perform this important duty; therefore to indulge in such kind of feelings is a great error.

The enemy of all mankind very well knows that "the effectual prayer of a righteous man availeth much," hence his desire, if possible, to stifle the supplicating voice of a saint before the throne of grace. If he can only get a saint to neglect some, apparently trifling, duty, (the consequence of which neglect is immediately felt in a loss of a portion of that spirit whereby we cry Abba Father,) he then quickly whispers in his ears, "now your God is displeased with you it is of no use for you to offer up your petitions at present, wait till you are approved of in your hearts by His Holy Spirit." And if he succeeds in delaying his approach to the throne of grace, he will then throw some other temptation in his way of a more serious nature, which the poor "soldier of the cross," being already much weakened, is ill prepared to resist; and thus he lures him on, from error to darkness, and from darkness to greater error, until finally the Spirit ceaseth to strive with him, and Satan laughs over his triumph.

Supposing you had a child whom you had given a certain task to perform, and through negligence or carelessness your child should fall short of what was required of it: would you not expect that child to come and ask your forgiveness, and seek a renewal of your favor? or would you feel justified to go and smilingly extend your hand, before the child had taken any steps towards an atonement or reconciliation. We, as children of God, have tasks to perform; we often come short of them, and our Father expects us to seek and implore His forgiveness.

When a saint of God cannot command the spirit of prayer, it is either because he has "done those things which he ought not to have done" or "left undone those things which he ought to have done;" and if there ever is a time when he should, like Jacob of old, wrestle with God in mighty prayer, it is then.

When does a christian stand more in need of strength than when he feels himself worsted in the fight of faith? And how is he to obtain that strength, if not by calling on the Captain of our salvation?

Prayer, however, is not a duty incumbent upon a saint simply because of its being a commandment, or because it conduces to his individual interest, but it is a duty he owes to the church in general and to his family in particular; he owes it to the church, as one member of the body politic, and as such it is his duty to seek the general interest of the whole; remembering that the body is made up of a collection of units, and that each individual unit is composed of the same weak, fallable material as himself. And if it will strengthen him, and cheer him on to his duty, to know that the prayers of his brethren are exercised in his behalf, it is reasonable to suppose that his prayers, as one of the mass, will have a like effect upon his fellow laborers.

Again: at every conference the Saints hold up their hands before high heaven, thereby covenanting that they will sustain those placed in authority over them; and in order to do this fully, faith, prayers and works must go together. Faith must be kept alive by humble prayer; and it requires a living faith to bring forth works unto salvation.

It is the duty of a Saint to pray in his family regularly "in the season thereof," because their prayers united and offered through Him, the popular head, will have more effect than otherwise, both for their benefit as a family, and for the interests of the kingdom at large. "Unity is strength."

Order is the first law of Heaven; therefore the Saints are required to keep their families, (being under the law of Heaven,) in order also: and there is, perhaps, nothing that tends more to establish this principle in a family, than for him, upon whom every eye is turned, as their proper Head, to call them together every morning and evening, at the usual hour, for the purpose of worshiping their Maker, thanking Him for past favors, and asking a continuation of the same. It has a tendency to create peace and union in every member of society, and unites every heart in bonds of love. The feelings are refined, the intellectual faculties enlarged and directed in the proper channel, in fact, every good, holy and virtuous principle is thereby encouraged.

Again, in the fore part of the same paragraph of the Revelation previously mentioned, the inhabitants of Zion are told that "They shall teach their children to pray and walk uprightly before the Lord." Of course He desires them to be taught to pray after the order of the Kingdom of Heaven, namely: "in the season thereof." Where are children to be taught this principle and to "walk uprightly before the Lord," if not in the family circle; and how are they to be taught if not by precept enforced by example?

Then O, ye Saints! let me exhort you not to neglect this important duty. In the morning, let the incense of your prayers arise like a sweet-smelling sacrifice from the family altar, that in return the blessings of Heaven may fall like the refreshing dew around your habitations: and in the evening let your voices ascend on high in songs of praise and gladness for all His mercies past; and under the sweet influences of His Spirit, your rest shall be calm, peaceful, and invigorating.

Much more might be said upon this subject, but I fear to occupy too much of your paper, knowing how many talented minds are at your command of far greater experience in the literary line than myself.

My desire is to stir up the pure minds of some, who, I fear, are waxing weary in the race, to a rememberance of their duties, that they may gird on the whole armor of God, fight the good fight of Faith, and win a crown of Glory.

Hoping that God will bless the united labors of all engaged in rolling forth the "little stone," I remain yours in the bonds of the Gospel,

A. P. WELCHMAN.

ELDER T. B. H. STENHOUSE—Dear Bro.: Thirteen years have passed away this day since the two great Philanthropists of this age were relieved from mortality to put on immortality, to leave their corruptible bodies and put on incorruption, having restored the Gospel to the earth in all its beauty, plainness, and simplicity, organized the Priesthood, set it in order, with all its officers, keys, powers, ceremonies and appendages, having received instruction how to do all these glorious duties by being continually instructed by an Holy Angel sent from and by the Lord Jesus Christ, who condescended also to lift the veil, so that the Prophet Joseph could behold the vision, wherein he saw the Saviour standing at the right hand of God the Father; and who received such instructions as will restore all Israel, all the household of faith, back to the presence of the Father, even the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Yes, dear brother, this is the anniversary of the day when those two good men Joseph Smith and Hyrum Smith sealed their testimony with their blood, knowing that their testimony was true, but the day had brought sorrow, tears, wailings and lamentations to thousands; oh, the heartfelt agony when the news arrived in Nauvoo. I realize it again.

They are not dead, but alive, alive in the Spirit world, having carried the news of the glorious restitution of the Gospel to the earth, offering life and salvation to every son and daughter of Adam, who will obey.

The Gospel was also left on the earth, that every man might not be lost, but that sinners might have the opportunity to repent and live, the mantle that was on Joseph fell on the shoulders of Brigham Young, who had received all the keys, powers and authority, to continue to roll on the work of the Lord on the earth, which has been evidently manifested to all the world by the accelerated increase with which the Temple at Nauvoo progressed until its completion, for the capstone was put on with shoutings of rejoicing, (contrary to the prophecies of the seceders from Mormonism) the Saints, with the work, and their dead, were accepted of the Lord; endowments were given therein, angels manifested their presence therein, time and again, apostates were confounded and the wicked gnashed their teeth with rage.

When all was accomplished that was required at his hand, he, like Moses of old, led Israel into the wilderness, and also in the midst of savage Indian tribes, when his country called for 500 volunteers to fight her battles with Mexico, responded "Sir, you shall have them," and in three days the flower of the Mormon camp started under the gallant Captain Allen for Santa Fe.

Did the Lord of Hosts forsake Brigham in that trying hour? No, sir, he was inspired to gather out the little band of pioneers and start across the Great American Desert; and if he was not guided "by a pillar of fire by night, and a cloud by day," he was dictated by an angel of the Lord, to make new trails, and pass through almost inaccessible kanyons, fraught with danger, into the very heart of the stupendous Rocky Mountains, where the Saints of God could be gathered, where they might worship God unmolested, free from the gaze of a wicked and adulterous generation; disturbing no one, and being too far off from wicked men, for them easily and comfortably to go and disturb the Saints, or even annoy them in a serious manner.

As I am one of the pioneers, and lived in Great Salt Lake Valley, until Sept. 10, 1856, I do know that the Mormons strictly attended to their own business, and very quietly left others to do the same, and I do know that Brigham Young, Governor of Utah, did protect Judge Brocchus, Drummond, and other officials, from the indignity that their mean actions ought to have insured them.

None but a servant of Jesus Christ would do as Brigham Young has done, he is the friend of all good men, and succors the distressed of every clime, and a better man can not be found.

Friend Stenhouse, excuse my pen preaching to you, instead of telling you all about my little self. I am here in the heart of London, appointed to look after seven branches containing now 378 members who have been baptized since March 1st, 30 of them are new members, and I will leave you to judge of what kind my company is, having sent you over 21 in the George Washington and Tuscarora.

I am happy to report that the London Conference is in good condition, my district pays more tithing than any other district, and Pastor Ross reports his pastorate takes one fifth of the Stars now published, so you can see by these two calculations that my field of labor is one of the most extensive. I have been in the waters of baptism fifteen times, and baptized about 108, pretty fair for a little boy like me, is it not? I am glad I was in England when this busy time took place, for my brethren of the Priesthood realize that I have done a good deal for them, well, all right, having done a good work and been busy all the time, I shall return home with a knowledge that I have done my duty, and that my mission has not been in vain.

Whisper in Brother Appleby's ear, and ask him to send me one word how my family is getting on, they live on the next block to his family, and the mail has miscarried their letters to me. Let him read this, as I also intended to write him, but I am kept so very busy all the time. I attend three or four meetings every Sunday, five week night meetings, and the balance of my time I am visiting among the Saints, or engaged in the duties of branch business.

The past week we have been favored by a visit from Prest. E. T. Benson and Elder John Scott, who feel well in their labors. Pastor Ross, Prest. Budge, and the travelling Elders are well, they feel well and are rejoicing in their labors also, and you may safely put us down as doing the best we can—they send their united love to you all in THE MORMON office.

May the blessings of the Lord Jesus Christ remain with you, and enable you to do a good work in his name, that we may be preserved from evil, and meet in Zion in peace and safety. Your fellow laborer in the Vineyard of the Lord,

THOMAS BULLOCK, Missionary, 31 Paltonham-street, Gray's Inn-Lane, London.

DOMESTIC SUMMARY.

That quarrel about who shall rule New York is not yet over. The Court decided that to be the province of the Commissioners. Mr. Draper, the President of the Five, has caved in. Sent a very short note to Gov. King announcing that fact, and received quite as short a one in return, accepting the resignation. The Mayors of New York and Brooklyn, who were ex-officio members of the Board of Commissioners, then walked in, arm in arm, last week, and manage beautifully to make an equal sided division. Draper, gone from the five, and the two Mayors added, make six. Three Republicans, one American (Know-Nothing) and the two Democratic Mayors. The American taking sides with the two latter are just a match for the other three, and there they are. A vote comes, yeas 3, nays 3. Majority and minority none. Good. So stands the present state of the rulers of New York City.

The murdered policeman, Eugene Anderson, was buried on Sunday. Probably 100,000 persons were turned out on the streets to witness the procession. It was a splendid opportunity for the new Commissioners to display their forces, and they embraced it. Young Anderson seems to have been highly esteemed, and thousands came out to pay the last honors to his remains.

There has been another murder this week in the city. A respectable man left his house at half-past 10 o'clock for some refreshment for the supper table, and an hour after he was found lying dead, minus his gold watch, and his pockets empty. The Coroner says he came to his death by violence—the police think by a fit of apoplexy. Of course, they say so, lest negligence of duty be imputed to them. Fine christian city. In a public thoroughfare, at not a late hour either, for folks in that quarter go to bed like the owls at the dawn of day, a man is found lying murdered and his person robbed, and nobody knows anything of it. Christian New York.

Cincinnati was last week in an awful state of excitement. A young man, only eight months married to a beautiful young woman of excellent character and disposition, conceived that all was not right between her and his employer. He murders her, goes to his employers mansion and fires it, met the object of his hatred rushing out from the smoke, stabs him dead and cuts his own throat. Life not extinct, he was found outside the house and carried to the infirmary, where he has so far recovered as to be able to assign his reasons for his crimes. He says that he saw his employer with his wife in criminal relationship and resolved on murder. He accuses his wife of seeking to poison him, and rejoices over his deeds. Some of the inhabitants of Cincinnati have believed themselves under obligation to come out with a contradiction of such a charge against Mr. Horton, and represent him a gentleman above commiting such lewdness. The other has disciples too.

Close on the back of these murders a drunken German had scattered profusely poisoned lozenges on the streets, and more than a score of children's lives were endangered by partaking of them. One died and the others recovered.

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

The news from India is the most interesting topic in the old world. European troops have been concentrated around Delhi, taken a few guns from the rebels and calculate upon their surrender of that city at no distant day. The Commander-in-Chief, General Anson, has, since the revolt broke out, died of Cholera. Sir Colin Campbell, that brave old soldier, whose name is an honor to the British army, has been sent from England, on a few hours notice, to succeed General Anson in the command of the army.

The British government speaks with confidence of their ability to entirely and promptly suppress the uprising; but this is greatly doubted. From the most recent news it is certain that well planned preparations for revolt had been more or less entered upon over a great extent of country. Twenty-three native regiments have joined the movement. The "rebels" have committed numerous outrages and great fears are entertained for the safety of European travellers or those living apart from the military stations where they could be protected.

We cannot but feel grateful to the Lord for counseling, through His servant Brigham, all the Elders that were on the East India mission to return to their families in Utah. Many a precious life has been preserved by this timely counsel, and we doubt not that these Elders, their familes and the Saints who embraced the Gospel in that distant land and who recently left for Utah, will praise the God of Jacob for the light of revelation manifested through His Prophet.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says the conspiracy recently discovered was the most serious of any the public have knowledge of, in the character of the persons concerned, the extent of its ramifications, and the objects proposed—which included the assassination of the Emperor and a revolution throughout Southern Europe. The details of it were creeping out. The members of a provisional government were already named by the conspirators, and the plans were pretty near perfected when the discovery was made.

Auld Scotland has been recently occupied with the trial of a young lady charged with the poisioning of a young Frenchman who had once been her lover, and her seducer. Miss Madeline Smith was the daughter of a very respectable architect in the city of Glasgow, who had met with M. L'Angelier and gone through all the stages of madness so frequently displayed by passionately fond young ladies and corrupt coxcombs, who lie in wait to deceive the artless and unsuspecting. Miss Smith, in the course of time gets the offer of marriage from a respectable gentleman, and hastens to get rid of her Frenchman. The latter possessed her letters and threatened to expose their illegitimate relationship to the world; Miss Smith invited him to call again and again and gave him cocoa and coffee which made him sick. Finally he was found crumpled up at his own door stiff and dead. He was to have seen her that night; but that he did, there was no evidence. She denies it, and her defence through out that he had poisoned himself from disappointment. She had several times bought arsenic and that shortly before he was taken suddenly sick and suddenly died; but that, she used as a cosmetic. She has had a nine days trial and been acquitted. Her father was rich, and influential, L'Angelier was little known and probably without wealth or influence: the Scotch folks have great sympathy for a ruined lassie and quite capable of exercising their proverbial qualities of "good haters" at a foreign coxcomb. They sympathized with Miss Smith and loudly hurrahed in the court when the verdict "not guilty" was read. We confess to experiencing considerable pleasure when we hear of one seducer less in the world, and whether Miss Smith was guilty or not guilty, his criminal course was not too early stopped. The young lady came to this city, on dit, last week. The following from the Herald of Wednesday is not unworthy of being read, and pondered over:

"This case, we have said, contains an important moral lesson to all young, ardent and thoughtless females in all large cities. We know that with what dangers young women are environed in our fashionable hotels and boarding-houses. Romantic reading, shopping, promenading and other frivolous occupations engage all their time, and the tasks and habits thus engendered make them too often easy victims of some of the swarms of adventurers of all nations who are on the watch for the slightest indication of laxity or indiscretion on their part. Under no other system in the civilized world are the opportunities for seduction greater than that system of hotel and boarding-house life which American society encourages. When such a liaison as that of L'Angelier and Madeline Smith could be carried on in her father's house and in a Scotch city, where social formalities are so strict, how comparatively easy can such things take place in other cities, with persons who know little of the sanctities that surround a home, and who grow up with the smallest possible subjection to parental supervision! Every community is infested with gay, fashionable, smooth-tongued villains, who regard the ruin of a woman as one of the most laudable and honoring deeds that they can accomplish. If they happen to speak in a foreign tongue, so much the greater chance of their success; for the mystery that invariably hangs around their past, and the interest that attaches to one with whom we have to converse in broken English or French, exercise a remarkable influence in their favor. These and all such wretches who plume themselves on their gallantries, cannot be given too wide a berth by all who would profit by the lesson of the unhappy fate of Madeline Smith and her seducer."

The Utah Mail.

The mail which left Great Salt Lake City on the 2d ult., arrived at Independence on the 19th, and was delivered in this city on Saturday, 26th. The quickest trip across the plains—a fact which reflects the highest credit on the Utah contractor, Mr. Hiram Kimball, and his energetic and undaunted assistants.

It was rumored in Washington a few weeks ago that the Department intended to break the contract with Mr. Kimball, on the charge made by some of the pinks that have been out there, that they failed to receive their letters. We trust that the rumor is unfounded. The Utonians have suffered enough from former contractors, and now that the mail really can be counted on, in a reasonable time, we do hope that it is not to fall back into the hands of speculators like the former contractor.

The charge of opening or retaining letters is so absurd, when placed at the door of the contractor, that we are loathe to believe the government so awfully foolish as they unquestionably would be if they offered to break their present contract on that ground. Furthermore, the present contractor really had nothing to do with the mail at the time these accusers complain. If there be any such intention on the part of the government, it can only be regarded by the Utonians as a studied effort to insult them. There is no foundation for such a charge and we trust that some disposition may be manifested on the part of President James Buchanan and his advisers, to preserve whatever confidence the inhabitants of that Territory may yet have in their righteousness and uprightness in the high positions to which the nation has for the moment called them.

Notice to Missionaries.

All Elders sent on missions from Great Salt Lake City to preach the Gospel, either in the Canadas or in the Eastern and Middle States, are requested to report themselves forthwith to the Presidency of the Church for the Eastern States, &c., at New York. That they may receive their licenses, have their names published, counsel given them, and their field of labors assigned them, so that all things may work together in union and harmony, and we may know where each is laboring, and of the fruits of their labors, &c.

We wish all the missionaries to whom we have referred to attend to the foregoing immediately.

W. I. Appleby, President, &c.

Important Documents from Utah.

Great Salt Lake City, U. T.,
June 26th, 1857.

I have read with surprise the reports of some of the government officials sent to this Territory to fill various offices, and I am astonished at the mis-statements and false assertions therein contained; more especially am I surprised at those put forth by General David H. Burr, who was sent here as United States Surveyor General.

Now, having been some ten months in his employ as clerk, copying maps, field notes, accounts, &c., I am tolerably conversant with his accounts, disbursements, &c. I feel in duty bound, as a citizen of these United States, and as a man of honor, to throw some little light upon the proceedings of this United States official.

General David H. Burr has done things that, if properly brought to light, would show great frauds upon the United States Treasury—receiving pay for work he never did and for expenses never incurred. When he hired me I made no stipulation with him as to my salary; but when the quarter was up I signed a voucher for two hundred and fifty dollars, and supposed that I would receive that amount per quarter, which, even in the eastern States, would have been but a medium compensation; but when I came to settle with him at the end of ten months, he only allowed me two dollars per day, also deducting for days when I was necessarily absent, and Gen. Burr of course pocketed the difference. But this is a small matter.

According to the statements of the surveying party, not one in fifty of the mile and quarter section stakes were ever set, or mounds raised, nor the corners ever seen by the surveying parties, although reported in the field notes, which lines never were run, although notes have been sent to Washington, certified to as true copies of the original field notes. I know for a fact that Mr. Herrman Oehure, compass-man, had to fabricate section line field notes in camp, while the rest of the hands were asleep, and complained much to me of the tax on his imagination and sleep, because Mr. Troskolawski "jumped" so much.

It was undoubtedly this fact which caused General Burr to report to Washington that the stakes had been torn up by the people of Utah.

Residents here offered to furnish Gen. Burr all his stakes of cedar wood, and deliver them at the points he shold designate, at a cost of three dollars per hundred; yet in his report he asserts that he was obliged to keep a considerable number of mules and men at a great expense to provide stakes, &c.

At one time I spoke to General Burr of the law in relation to running lines from south to north, beginning on the east section of a township. He answered me, looking suspiciously at me, that he had a right, as Surveyor General, to allow his deputy surveyors to run their lines as he pleased.

The incidental expenses for surveying, as sent in his returns to Washington, have been greatly exaggerated; for instance, one item, while I was with him, was two thousand dollars for clerk hire, while his actual expense was not five hundred dollars, as I was the only clerk at that time, and other expenses were charged in proportion, and a great many were charged which were never incurred at all. And the chain carriers, mound men, axe men and other hands, received twenty-five dollars per month. In the year 1855 Mr. Troskolawski, with a party of fifteen or sixteen men, surveyed about two months. In the year 1856 there were three companies out under Mr. Troskolawski, Mr. Frederick Burr, and David A. Burr, (alias Mr. C. L. Craig.) The first surveyed about ten weeks, the two others about four months, including days they were not able to run, although the field notes' dates have been extended much further by General D. H. Burr; and in this short period this vast country is pretended to have been surveyed according to law.

A man by the name of C. L. Craig has signed the contract for the surveys in Rush and Utah Valleys. All persons who know Mr. Craig know that he never was a surveyor or a man capable of superintending or carrying out a survey. This Mr. Craig lent his name at the rate of fifteen hundred dollars per annum, for signing contracts which were executed by David A. Burr, a lad eighteen years of age, son of Gen. Burr.

After the Rush and Utah Valley surveys were returned to the office, I one day asked Mr. Craig relative to something that was omitted in one of the maps of those surveys. He said to me, "Damn it, you know I know nothing about surveying; I have only lent my name because David A. Burr is too young to be recognized by the government as a qualified surveyor." Gen. Burr asserts that his surveying parties have been molested by the Mormons while surveying; this is untrue. The presiding officers of said settlements told the people to render the surveyors all the aid needed by them, and to treat them with respect. But there were in a few instances some trouble occasioned by surveying parties throwing down, and leaving down fences around fields of grain, thereby allowing cattle to get in and destroy their crops; also they turned out their own animals into their fields, and when they were requested to be more careful, cursed and swore, and said they were United States officers, and they would do as they damned pleased.

While in Gen. Burr's employ he gave me great credit for the workmanlike manner in which I executed everything he gave me to do; and he discharged me from his service, accusing me of having expressed, out of the office, my views and feelings in regard to the manner he made the surveys and to his frauds upon government—to which I plead guilty.

I do not make the foregoing statement as a mere surmise; they are facts with which I am well acquainted; and should a committee of investigation be appointed to search into the disbursements and acts of Gen. David H. Burr in this Territory, I hold myself responsible to prove all I have asserted and much more.

Charles W. Moeller.

Territory of Utah, Great Salt Lake County, ss.—On this thirteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, before me, J. W. Cummings, Clerk of the Third Judicial District Court of the United States, in and for the Territory of Utah, personally appeared Charles W. Moeller, to me well known as a person of respectability and credibility, and whose signature, in his own proper handwriting, is attached to the foregoing statement, who, being by me duly sworn according to law, declared upon his oath that the matters set forth in the foregoing statements are true in every particular.

In testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said court, at my office in Great Salt Lake City, Utah Territory, this thirtieth day of June, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven.

J. W. Cummings, Clerk.

I, J. W. Cummings, Clerk of the aforesaid Court, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the statements made before me by the said Charles W. Moeller the day and year above written.

In testimony whereof, I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court at my office in G. S. L. City, this 30th day of June, 1857. J. W. Cummings, Clerk.

Territory of Utah, Great Salt Lake County, ss.—On this 18th day of June, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, before me, J. W. Cummings, Clerk of the Third Judicial District Court of the United States, in and for the Territory of Utah, personally appeared Thos. Wetmore Cooke, who being by me duly sworn according to law, on his oath declares that he was chain carrier in a company under Frederick Burr (son of General David H. Burr,) out surveying Salt Lake county south of the base line, also Cache Valley, from the 1st day of April, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six to the thirteenth day of August in the same year (1856.)

That in surveying Great Salt Lake county, he positively declares that many of the lines were never run, the stakes were never set, and the corners never seen by the surveying party. That he was frequently called upon to guess the distance to some point, such as a creek, fence, foot of a mountain, &c., and his "guess" was set down in the field notes as correct measurement by the chain.

And further, that in surveying Cache valley, the surveying party not only "jumped" many lines, but omitted entirely to survey that portion of the valley west of Bear River in said valley, and did not cross the river at all. And further, he declares that C. L. Craig was not a surveyor, and that he heard David A. and Eugene Burr (sons of David H. Burr) joking and laughing at C. L. Craig because he could not set a stake correctly with the instruments, although they had tried to teach him to do so.

He further says that his wages were twenty-five dollars per month, and that he was out with this party all the time they were surveying Great Salt Lake county and Cache valley, and received pay for three months and a half, being the entire time they were out, including lost time, journeying, wet days and windy days, and one week at one time while hunting horses. Thomas W. Cooke.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this thirteenth day of June, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven.

In testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, at my office in G. S. L. City, U. T., the day and year afore written.

J. W. Cummings.

I, J. W. Cummings, Clerk of the aforesaid Court, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the affidavit of Thomas W. Cooke, made before me the day and year above written.

In testimony whereof, I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of the Court, at my office in Great Salt Lake City, U. T., this 30th day of June, A. D. 1857.

J. W. Cummings, Clerk.

G. S. L. City, U. T., June 29, 1857.

To the Hon. the Commissioner of the General Land Office, City of Washington, D. C.

Sir—I beg leave to call your attention to this statement of a conversation had in September last with Mr. Charles Mogo, who has a contract under General David H. Burr, in the surveying of the public lands in Utah.

I became acquainted with Mr. Mogo in the summer of 1855, he having crossed the plains that season in the capacity of a teamster in my employ, and obtained a sub-contract as surveyor in the spring of 1856, under David A. Burr or C. L. Craig, which contract ended with the summer months.

In the month of September Mr. Mogo informed me of having obtained a very lucrative contract from the Surveyor General, and was then fitting out for the execution of the same. He expected to make a very large sum of money (the amount not recollected) but I think some thirty thousand dollars. I inquired how it was he having come to this Territory as he had, should be able to obtain contracts out of which so much money could be made. He answered, "General Burr and myself are partners in the contract."

Very respectfully yours,

Wm. H. Hooper.

Territory of Utah, Great Salt Lake City, ss.—On this twenty-ninth day of June, A. D. one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, before me, J. W. Cummings, Clerk of the Third Judicial District Court of the United States, in and for the Territory of Utah, personally appeared William H. Hooper, whose signature, in his own proper hand writing, appears to the foregoing statement, to me well known to be a person of credibility, who being first duly sworn according to law, upon his oath says that the matters contained in the foregoing statement are true; that the conversation with said Charles Mogo did take place at the time and in the manner therein stated, and that he believes that the statements made by said Mogo in said conversation are true.

In testimony whereof, I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court, at my office in G. S. L. City, U. T., the day and year above written.

J. W. Cummings, Clerk.

I, J. W. Cummings, Clerk of the aforesaid Court, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the statement and affidavit of William H. Hooper, made before me the day and year above written.

In testimony whereof I hereunto set my hand and affix the seal of said Court at my office in G. S. L. City, U. T., this 29th day of June, A. D., 1857.

News from Washington.

Movements of the Utah Military Expedition.

Washington, July 25, 1857.

The President and Cabinet have ceased to have any apprehensions of bloodshed in Kansas. Gen. Harney and staff will leave in a few days for Utah. The troops generally are in fine health and spirits, and amply supplied for an active campaign. Col. Thomas, Assistant Quartermaster General, is ready to return to head quarters.

Gov. Cummings says it is uncertain when he will leave for Utah. He may be detained yet some time.

Among other advices, the following was this morning received by the War Department:—

General Orders No. 11.

Fort Leavenworth, July 15, 1857.

I.—The General Commanding announces to the troops of his command the following assignments of staff officers to the army for Utah. All orders and instructions given in the name of the General Commanding by any of the officers designated in this order will be promptly obeyed:—

1. Captain Alfred Pleasonton, acting Assistant Adjutant General, and Chief of Staff.
2. Captain S. N. Hancock, Assistant Quartermaster Commissary's Department.
3. Captain Harry F. Clarke, Commissary of Subsistance.
4. Surgeon Madison, Medical Director.
5. Major Franklin E. Hunt, Pay Department.
6. Brevet Captain Jesse L. Reno, Ordnance Department.

II. The following assignments are also made, viz:

1. Hospital steward, William B. Banks. To report to Surgeon Mills.
2. Military storekeeper, S. W. Montgomery. To report to the senior Quartermaster serving with the troops. By order of General Harney.

A. Pleasonton, Captain Second Dragoons, Acting Assistant Adjutant General.

In a letter dated July 18, Capt. Pleasonton states that second Lieut. Lucius L. Rich, of the Fifth Regiment of Infantry, has been appointed Gen. Harney's aid-de-camp.

Instructions of the New Governor of Utah.

Washington, July 28, 1857.

The instructions to Gov. Cumming were completed to-day. They are brief and specific. He is to see that the laws of the United States are faithfully executed. No man in Utah is to be affected for his political or religious opinions, but held responsible for his conduct. Should the civil authorities be unable to enforce the laws, military force is then to be employed while Gov. Cumming's powers are ample for all practical purposes, much is confided to his directions.

Thomas H. Dunn, of Miss., has been tendered the appointment of Secretary of State for Utah, but there are some doubts whether he will accept.

Utah Affairs.

Washington, July 29.

Judge Stiles, District Attorney Hockaday, and Marshal Dotson, Federal officers for Utah, join in a card emphatically contradicting the reports from that Territory, extensively published in the newspapers, which charged David H. Burr, late Surveyor General of Utah, with having committed frauds upon the Government, overcharging incidental expenses, and falsifying the position of the Mormons.

A report is in circulation that Brigham Young has written a letter to President Buchanan, expressing his gratification at the prospect of being relieved from the Governorship of Utah, and promising that the Federal officers to be sent thither will be kindly treated, provided they attend to their legitimate business.

St. Louis, July 29, 1857.

The Republican publishes the affidavit of Curtis E. Bolton, Deputy Clerk of the Supreme Court of Utah. It is addressed to Attorney General Black, and the seal of the Court attached to it. Mr. Bolton declares that the statements of Judge Drummond are false regarding the destruction of the records of the Court—that they are all safe in his custody—not one missing, and that no person has ever disturbed them.

[We very well know when the reports reached here in relation to the burning of the records that they were false; gotten up by our enemies at Utah in order to cover up their own black deeds and to raise prejudice and excitement against the Mormons, and endeavor to bring them into collision with the Government, if possible.

We are personally acquainted with Mr. Bolton. His relatives reside in New York, are wealthy and influential. Mr. Bolton is and has been our Deputy as Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States for Utah some two years past—an efficient, upright, and honorable man.—Ed.]

Hanging—Heaven.

Three men were hung at St. Louis a few days ago, and each expressed his strong convictions on the gallows that he was going immediately to heaven, and that the crime he had committed had been the means of bringing him to his Saviour. The minister who filled them with this idea no doubt did it with the best intentions, but the propriety of such teachings may well be questioned. [Ex.

[There is a mistake somewhere. Jesus when on the earth said: No murderer can inherit eternal life. Perhaps "the minister who filled them with this idea" has created a new Jesus with new notions to suit the times! "Strong convictions on the gallows" are nice things for tract societies. "A pet sinner," as Billy Burton would call some denizen of Five Points, Rotten Row or Petticoat Lane, is a great treasure—when collections are wanted. Three converted murderers, with strong convictions about "going immediately to heaven," must be stout evidence that the money was well spent and more would be useful! If our Memphis cotemporary can, with these few hints, doubt "the best intentions" and "the propriety of such teachings," he must be very dull and a stranger to the poor little woodchuck story—the good old tone!—Ed.

Train for Utah.

The Salt Lake train under charge of Mr. Stewart left here for the plains on Wednesday last. The train consists of twenty-five horse and mule teams. It left Salt Lake City in April, arriving here some weeks since. The train was freighted here with merchandize. The animals were thoroughly recruited, and Stewart expects to reach Salt Lake City in fifty days. He has relays of animals on the route which he thinks will enable him to make the trip in unusually quick time.—[Squatter Sovereign, Atchinson, July 11.

A Large Tent.—Mr. J. H. Landell, of Newark, N. J., has received from the Government and is executing an order for 100 of the new army tents, recently noticed. They are designed to accommodate about 2500 men, and will be sent to Utah. Mr. Landell has one or two other orders for tents of this character. They are constructed from Colt's duckcloth, made at Paterson.

Wood's Meeting.

There will be a three days Wood's Meeting of the Church of Latter Day Saints held on the lands of Moses Ivins, Esq., near Hornerstown, Cream Ridge, Monmouth County, New Jersey, commencing on Friday, August 28, and continue over the following Sabbath.

The brethren composing the "Brass Band," under their leader, Elder Eardley, from Trenton, N. J., will be present on the occasion, and entertain the audience with some of their favorite sacred airs.

Presidents of Conferences, Presidents of Branches, Travelling Elders, and lay members of the Church, adjacent, that can make it convenient, as well as the public in general, are respectfully invited to attend. R. D. Treseder,

President of Hornerstown Branch, &c.

☞ The columns of The Mormon are open to the correspondence and articles of the Elders; but, while we believe in according full liberty to all, we hold ourselves irresponsible for the particular sentiments of any.

Sunday Meetings.

The Saints meet every Sunday for Public Worship in Philadelphia at Mitchell's Hall, 312 Fourth Street—or York Avenue, above Vine, at 10 1-2 A. M. 3 and 7 1-2 P. M.: in New York, at Brooks' Assembly Rooms, 361 Broome Street, at 3 and 7 P. M.

Notice to Subscribers

We frequently receive remittances for subscriptions to The Mormon, without the sender giving the name of the place he desires the paper to be sent to. Sometimes the name of the Post Office or town is mentioned, but not the county, and as there are several towns in some States by the same name, unless the county is designated we are at a loss to know where to direct the papers ordered. We wish all communications to us to name distinctly the Post Office or town, county, and State or Territory, as then there will be no mistake.

Notice.

The Saints who desire to send means to their friends in Europe, can have the same attended to, by forwarding any sum they wish in current money, to this office, enclosing one dollar or more, in proportion to the amount sent, to defray the expenses of procuring Bills of Exchange, making remittances, foreign postage, &c., describing particularly to whom, and where they wish to have it sent; at the same time not holding myself responsible in any manner whatever unless the money reach me.

All subscriptions, donations, &c., for the support of The Mormon, or Conference Fund (except the donations and Conference Funds raised in the Philadelphia Conference, which will be forwarded as usual through President Cannon) must be sent hereafter to my address; as also Tithing; P. E. Fund, and donations for the Temple from those who wish to contribute the same, so each person may be duly credited, and the means forwarded to Zion, and have their names entered in "The Book of the Law of the Lord."

No Power of Attorney, or other legal instrument of writing, going to Europe or elsewhere, forwarded to us for the purpose of sending to Washington in order to obtain the attestation of the Department, and the British Consul's Certificate and seal to the same, will be attended to in future, unless the means to defray the expenses and foreign postage accompanies the Instrument, as there is considerable expense attending it as well as labor. We would like to oblige all, and are willing to give our services when we have opportunity; but we cannot advance means to defray such expenses.

All communications intended for The Mormon should be addressed—Editor of The Mormon, New York. Otherwise direct to my address, Box No. 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. Appleby.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The four is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui régie l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? On devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconqu demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Pére et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

Never Say Fail.

BY 'CHARLES SWAIN.

Keep pushing—'tis wiser
Than sitting aside,
And dreaming and sighing,
And wailing the tide;
In life's earnest battle,
They only prevail,
Who daily march onward,
And never say fail.

With an eye ever open,
A tongue that's not dumb,
And a heart that will never
To sorrow succumb,
You'll battle and conquer,
Though thousands assail;
How strong and how mighty
Who never say fail.

Ahead, then, keep pushing,
And elbow your way,
Unheeding the envious,
All asses that bray;
All obstacles vanish,
All enemies quail
In the might of their wisdom
Who never say fail.

In life's rosy morning,
In manhood's fair pride,
Let this be your motto
Your footsteps to guide;
In storm and in sunshine,
Whatever assail,
We'll onward and conquer,

Correspondence from Utah.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY,
June 20th, 1857.

MY OLD FRIEND STENHOUSE, I have been informed by a friend that you have arrived in New York and taken up your abode in that city. As I am anxious to renew our former acquaintance I proceed to introduce myself by a few lines. No doubt but you will be very much surprised to hear from me from this place, but strange events are daily taking place in this little world of ours.

Three years ago I took a notion to try my fortune in the Western country, and, consequently, left Cincinnati in May 1854 for some place in the West. On my journey through Iowa, I came upon a small company of Mormons traveling en route for Utah; after journeying with them a few days I concluded to go on with them and try my luck in their new country. It would not be interesting at this late date to give you an account of my trip over plains, deserts and mountains; suffice it to say, that 60 days brought me here in good health and spirits. I have not been so successful as I expected, indeed, I believe that had I remained on the Frontiers my financial condition would have been very different from what it is. This is the hardest kind of a country to get along in—which you can very readily perceive when I tell you that the only business carried on to any extent is farming. And farming is nearly the worst kind of slavery. No rains fall in the valleys from April to the falling of the snow, consequently water has to be conveyed in canals from the mountains as the snow melts, in in June and July, to irrigate the fields. You can form no idea of the immense labor spent in keeping those canals in repair and making new ditches on the farms every year. A farm that would employ one man in the Eastern States, would take eight men to attend to one of the same dimensions here, and the price of grain is not much higher than in the East. Nothing under the heavens induces the people to toil—toil—toil under such adverse circumstances, but the love they have for their religion. I verily believe that a very great many persons could not be employed to perform the same amount and kind of labor for gold, in any other country. The saying of Brigham Young that "this is the best country on the globe to make good Mormons" is true, for there is not the first thing to induce them to stay here but love of their peculiar principles.

To one who has been brought up in the noise and bustle of large cities, and whose ears are familiar with the London, New York and Cincinnati cries, to take up his residence on the "tops of the mountains," as this country is called, cannot but think that he has strayed away from the world he used to inhabit, and taken refuge in a world of perpetual Sunday. I have heard more noise, and seen more immorality, in any one hour in Water-street, Cincinnati, (and not a very great deal either) than I have heard or seen in this city during my three years sojourn. This statement I would suppose could scarcely be credited, it looks so tall; but it is just as true as two and two make four.

June 30th. The mail which left Independence, Mo., on the evening of June 1st, arrived here at noon, June 23d, to the great delight of the citizens. They have been so much humbugged with the late contractor, McGraw, that they fully appreciate the efforts of the present contractor, Hyram Kimball, in giving them a mail in double quick time. During McGraw's contract, we could only get six mails in twelve months, and took forty days to perform each trip.

This mail has brought up a large batch of news. It appears that there is a tremendous excitement got up in the East against the Mormons, and that the editors are barking like so many little curs, at something—but what, they know not. The Mormons seem to take the matter very much as the Newfoundland dog who all the time was annoyed while passing a certain place by a few little curs following it up barking, and making a great demonstration of a deadly attack. One morning they got at their old game as usual, and, "Wallace" concluded to teach them better manners; he very quickly turned round, put his foot upon the neck of one of the curs, and lifting his hind leg * * * * * and coolly trudged along, while the little yelpers sneaked away to their hiding places.

Judge Drummond seems to figure pretty extensively as a bellows blower. This is the same Judge whom Judge Kinney turned out of his hotel on learning that the lady who accompanied him and whom he had introduced into society as his wife, was a well known lady at Washington, and while there, though not a broker by profession, gave considerable accommodation, until she nearly became bankrupt, and then entered into partnership with the horse trading Judge, expecting to recruit her capital in a traveling expedition to Utah. Whether she gained much in the speculation is not known, but it is known from the quantity and quality of drugs swallowed by her "dear husband" that his health was declining in consequence of the partnership. This lady was one of the Utah correspondents who had so much fault to find with the Mormon morals. After the Hon. J. F. Kinney had acted so much the part of the gentleman, and would not associate on the bench, or anywhere else, with the high moral toned Judge—the enthusiastic democratic politician, (who bragged that he would live to preside over the United States)—the honorable horse trader—the highly intelectual gamblêr—and very gentlemanly libertine, he took his leave of— oh no, not his gifted, amiable, virtuous and christian lady, certainly not—the Mormons he left, because they could not appreciate the the principles which governed his life and acts. He left, threatening vengeance on the Mormons. Why? What did the Mormons do or say to him? The sister of his real wife, living here, exposed him, and she was a Mormon.

The next we hear of this modern patriot is, that he had decided in Carson Co., Utah Territory, that polygamy is illegal, but as he did not sit on the bench there, and gave no such decision, the question as to the legality or illegality, morality or immorality of Polygamy was not tested.

Shortly after he arrived in California he wrote to Gen. Burr and others here, that he had commenced the war on the Mormons, and would use them up. It is scarcely necessary to say that W. W. Drummond's statements are utterly false—that he is a low, sneaking contemptible liar, as I believe that ere this he has been exposed by his own relations. Such a man cannot go long unpunished.

Gen. D. H. Burr has also been giving strong evidence against the people of Utah. He has an object to be gained. He expects that it will assist his financial condition very materially. He has a great deal at stake and must play his cards well. He has reported to the land office as having surveyed thousands and thousands of acres which have never been seen by any one of his surveyors. It is however known here how many men he has had employed, the time they have been employed, and the number of acres he has actually surveyed, he knows this and afraid that the authorities here would report him, after reading his report, to the Department, has charged the Mormons with destroying all evidence of survey by pulling up stakes, &c. &c. &c. I understand that the Department has suspended his accounts because of their glaring inconsistency. This is well, if it will lead to a thorough investigation of his official acts, as the proof is on hand by which the Government can save at present at least $40,000.

I have read a long letter in the "New York Daily Times," of May 20th, 1857, signed "Vigo." Now this "Vigo" is Dick Thompson, formerly managing clerk to Gilbert and Gerrish, merchants here, while the members of that firm were doing business in the east. In 1856 they concluded that their business here was not up to the mark and that something was out of joint, consequently Mr. Gerrish made for this place so late in the season that he was saved from death among the snow on the mountains by almost a miracle. He would not stay during the winter at Fort Bridger knowing that every day's absence from his business was a loss to the firm. Subsequently Dick was discharged as unworthy their confidence. This is "Vigo" another Utah correspondent, and his statements are quite in keeping with his general charactter. He left here for the east about the 24th of April. Mogo is still alive and kicking, he is one of Gen. D. H. Burr's partners.

You have now before you a short history of a few of the contributors to the press upon the affairs of Utah. The eastern editors never have been duped to the same extent as at present, they have been completely "taken in and done for." I cannot help sympathizing with the people here, when they are so grossly abused—let them have fair play and an open field.

I believe that I shall remain here this fall and winter, and therefore expect to hear from you.

I remain, as ever, yours truly,
MONTAGUE STANLEY.

Another Shot from the Mormons

THE leading men in Mormondom do not intend, it would seem, that their assailants shall go unanswered; and, accordingly, they have sent forward to the Government at Washington duly authenticated documents, which, if true, must make some parties feel very awkward. We do not feel at liberty to withhold the following, which has the official seal of the United States Court at Salt Lake City to mark its authenticity, and which has been communicated to us for publication:

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.

To Hon. Jeremiah S. Black, Attorney-General of the United States, Washington, D. C.:

SIR: My attention having been drawn to the letter of Justice W. W. Drummond, under date of March 30, 1857, addressed to yourself, tendering his resignation as Associate Justice for Utah, wherein my office is called in question, I feel it incumbent upon me to make to you the following report. Justice W. W. Drummond, in his "fourth" paragraph says: "The records, papers, &c., of the Supreme Court have been destroyed by order of Gov. B. Young, and the Federal officers grossly insulted for presuming to raise a single question about the treasonable act."

I do solemnly declare this assertion is without the slightest foundation in truth. The records, papers, &c., of the Supreme Court in this Territory, together with all decisions and documents of every kind, belonging thereto, from Monday, Sept. 22, 1851, at which time said Court was first organized, up to this present moment, are all safe and complete in my custody, and not one of them missing, nor have they ever been disturbed by any person.

Again. In the decision of the Supreme Court, in the case of Moroni Greeno, the which decision was written by Judge Drummond himself, I find the following words: "That as the case for which Greene was convicted seems to have been an aggravated one, this Court does remit the costs of the prosecution, both in this Court and in the Court below." Greene was provoked to draw a pistol in self-defence, but did not point it at any one. He was a lad of 18 years old. Much feeling was excited in his favor, and he was finally pardoned by the Governor upon a petition signed by the Judges and members of the bar of the United States Court, the Hon. Secretary of State, and many of the most respectable citizens of Great Salt Lake City.

Again. In relation to the "incarceration of five or six young men, from Missouri and Iowa, who are now (March 30, 1857,) in the Penitentiary of Utah, without those men having violated any criminal law in America," &c. This is an utterly false statement. But I presume he alludes to the incarceration, on the 22d of January, 1856, of three men, and on the 29th of January, 1856, of one more. If so, these are the circumstances: There were quite a number of persons came here as teamsters in Gilbert & Gerrish's train of goods, arriving here in 1855, after Winter had set in. They arrived here very destitute, and at that season of the year there is nothing that a laboring man can get to do. Some of these men entered the store of S. M. Blair & Co., at various times in the night, and stole provisions and groceries. Some six or eight of them were indicted for burglary and larceny; three pleaded guilty, and a fourth was proven guilty. The four were sentenced to the penitentiary for the shortest time the statute allowed for the crime. And just as soon as the Spring of 1856 opened and a company was preparing to start for California, upon a petition setting forth mitigating circumstances, the Governor pardoned them, and they went on their way to California. It was a matter well understood here at the time, that these men were incarcerated more particularly to keep them from committing further crime during the Winter.

Since that time there have been but four persons sent to the penitentiary for forgery and petty larceny for terms of 30 and 60 days, to wit: one on the 19th of November, 1846; two on the 24th of November, 1856; and one on the 26th of January, 1856. So that on the 30th of March, 1857, and for several days previous there was not a white prisoner in the Utah penitentiary, nor is there at this date.

I could, were it my province in this affidavit, go on and refute all that Judge W. W. Drummond has stated in his letter of resignation by records, dates, and facts; but believing that the foregoing is sufficient to show you what reliance there is to be placed upon W. W. Drummond's word, I shall leave the subject.

In witness of the truth of the foregoing, I have hereunto subscribed my name, and affixed the seal of the [L. S.] United States Supreme Court for Utah Territory, Great Salt Lake City, this twenty-fifth day of June, A. D. 1857.

CURTIS E. BOLTON,
Deputy Clerk of the United States Supreme Court, in the absence of W. I. APPLEBY, Clerk.

[St. Louis Republican, July 26.

The Mormons and Their Faith.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.,
July 1, 1857.

It has been said, "tread upon a worm and he will turn;" so, as there seems to be such an ardent desire among many to blot out the Mormons, or, as they should be called, the Saints, for believing and practicing the family religion of Lamech, Abraham, Moses, Gideon, David, Solomon, and many others of old times, and of relying upon the words of Jesus Christ, as truth, when he said, "There is no man that has left house, or land, or wife, for my namesake and the gospel's, who shall not receive manifold more in this present time," &c., I propose, as an offset against the term "polygamy," that all those who wish to fight against the law of God, in the Old and New Testament, or the rules of pagans and heathens, be called, as appropriately, gogamites or polygogamites. The French use "agog" for hot desire; the Welsh "gog" for ardent desire; and John, the revelator, who understood matters fore and aft, spoke of "Gog" and "Magog" as the last enemies of the Almighty; so it may be well, as "coming events cast their shadows before," to (Shakspeare like) call things by their true names. The gogamites, or polygogamites, show by their faith and works whose kingdom they belong to, according to scripture. Fair play is the jewel. When God and the government are in union, virtue exalts the nation; and so, when Satan and the people wrangle for blood, sin brings destruction. Let the one without sin shoot the first gun; and let the wrath of God consume the people or nation that treads upon the rights of the innocent; and let not only the honest patriots of the United States, but the noble minded of the world, say—Amen!

Wise men foresee good and evil, and prepare themselves accordingly. As a faithful editor, if "Gog" is now preparing to show off a little as a specimen of the great day, you are the man to tell it in the Empire State, and publish it in the streets of Washington, lest a gaping world point the finger of scorn, and say, "The asylum of the oppressed" was cemented together with soft soap, and slipt down—how are the mighty fallen! GABRIEL.

What are We Coming to.

IF it can be claimed in behalf of our country, that we are gifted with a more progressive and enterprising spirit than the people of any other land, it can also be said, at the present period, that we are more reckless as to the condition of society, and more regardless of human life than any other civilized nation. It needs no long argument to prove this. Its evidences are all around us, and we regret to add, they are increasing with every hour.

Murders have become so common that the journal that endeavors to lay them before the public assumes the appearance of a Police Gazette, and from their multiplicity, homicides, robbery, forgery, incest and rape have become of such trivial importance, that they are deemed scarcely worthy of notice. Men appear to have been seized with a desire to murder their kind, as with a mania; and like the Thugs they seem to be actuated by no motive save the destruction of human life. The slightest provocation from a stranger leads to the use of the most deadly weapons, and the least disagreement in family affairs to estrangements, jealousies and divorce. The laws of society appear to be disregarded. Husbands and wives form new associations, and scarcely hesitate a moment as to the means by which they can rid themselves of old ones. The gratification of selfish desires appears to be the ruling propensity of the age, and whatever stands in the way of this must be destroyed.

All fear or respect of the law seems to be trodden from existence; and, with the knowledge of almost certain death before their eyes, men scarcely pause to consider before the work is done, and in this manner the calender of crime swells from page to page and volume to volume. Where the citizens of neighborhoods have risen in their own might and undertaken a reformation, the effort has proven a fruitless one, changing, perhaps, the character of the crime, but not affecting its magnitude.

From some cause, known or unknown, the whole country appears to be adrift upon a sea of moral depravity, and neither the law, justice, humanity or mercy appear to exercise any control. To what must we attribute such a condition of society? Are religion, self-respect and common sense so powerless or obsolete that their influence is no longer felt.

It speaks but little better for society if we argue, in case of murder, that the victim deserves the punishment from the hand that strikes him down, and base it upon the ground that a personal wrong should be followed by a personal retribution, for it is the promulgation of that very doctrine that brings about such a disastrous state of society, makes the law a dead letter, robs the weak of protection, makes might right, and destroys every sense of that security for the possession of which men gather themselves together and agree to abide by the rules and regulations adopted for the welfare of the whole.

We repeat it, the condition of society in this country is, at the present period appalling in the extreme to any considerate man. Crimes of the most horrible character are of weekly occurrence, while those which the community have baptized with fashionable names are so plentiful that they scarcely attract a passing notice, though it is an established fact that these latter form the stepping stone to the former, or constitute the causes from which they, in nine cases out of ten, originate. The civilized countries of Europe or Asia present no parallel to our own in this respect. And yet, our growth in this respect is a matter of merely a few past years. Ten years ago a case of poisoning was rarely perpetrated, and such an act was considered sufficiently horrible to attract the attention of the entire Union. Now instances of the kind occur in respectable families, and are scarcely thought worthy of notice beyond the locality in which they transpire. Massachusetts and Connecticut, the land of steady habits, appear in the catalogue of crime to vie with the past history of Arkansas, and the cruelties of savage border life are identical with those of the most thorough civilization.

These are facts too evident for denial and too plain to justify any attempt to evade a knowledge of their existence. It is rather a remedy we should seek, and such a one as, based upon the causes of the evil, should eradicate them, and thus prove effectual in the future. Whether it arises from false education; a hitherto unexampled increase in the growth of an entire lack of control over our passions; a disregard of religion and morality, because the multiplicity of doctrines taught or the dissentions existing among those who teach; or a disrespect for the law, engendered by the struggle for office and the fraud practiced among those who engage in it—whether any or all of these, a radical change is needed, beginning among the people, and carried by them to a successful termination.—[Cincinnati Daily Times, July 24.

An Overheard Conversation between Billy Williams and Burton.

BILLY WILLIAMS was a comedian, and one of the best natured men alive. The conversation is thus related:

Billy was sitting in his usual seat and was endeavoring to make himself agreeable to those around him. Burton, who delighted in quizzing Billy, made some enquiries of him relative to a horse belonging to Mr. Hamblin, which seemed to arouse Billy, and he thus commenced his reply:

"Now, Burton, I'll tell you all about that 'orse; you see, when I first arrived I said to 'Amblin, 'Tom, I wants an 'orse; I 'ave always been used to 'ave an 'orse, and I would like to 'ave one.' 'Billy,' says he, 'you know Maxeppa, he has earned me a great deal of money, and I will not permit him to be misused; but if you want to ride him you may, and my stage manager, Tom Flynn, will go with you to the stable.'

"So down I goes to the stable with Tom Flynn, and told the man to put the saddle on him."

"On Tom Flynn?" says Burton.

"No, no, on the 'orse. So, after talking with Tom Flynn awhile, I mounted him."

"What! mounted Tom Flynn?"

"No, the 'orse; and then I shook hands with him and rode off."

"Shook hands with the horse, Billy?"

"No, 'ang it, with Tom; and then I rode off up the Bowery, and who should I meet in front of the Bowery Theatre but Tom 'Amblin, so I got off and told the boy to hold him by the head."

"Hold Hamblin by the head?"

"No, the 'orse, and then we went and took a drink together."

"What! you and the horse?"

"No, me and 'Amblin; then I mounted him again and went out of town."

"Mounted Hamblin again?"

"No, the 'orse; when I got to Barnum's, who should be there but Tom Flynn—he'd taken another 'orse and rode out ahead of me, so I told the 'ostler to tie him up."

"Tie Tom Flynn up?"

"No, 'ang it the 'orse; and we had a drink there."

"What! you and the horse?"

"No, me and Tom Flynn. Now, look here, Burton, every time I say 'orse you say 'Amblin; and every time I say 'Amblin you say 'orse. Now I'll be 'anged if I tell you anything more about it." Billy felt his dignity insulted, and no coaxing on the part of Burton could induce him to finish the recital.

[There is something to be learned from the two Billys, and we recommend it to those who require the lesson. Face the music.—EDITOR MORMON.]

Love Your Parents.

CHILDREN should never delay obeying their parents, because they are busily doing something which they desire to finish. How very naughty to say, "Wait, mother; I will come directly;" or, "I will do it pretty soon."

This is self-will, which is entirely contrary to the teachings of the Bible. You must honor your father and mother, if you would live long and be happy.

Many children have been cut down and laid in an untimely grave, merely from a single act of disobedience. We very often see accounts of boys being drowned, particularly on the Sabbath, from going skating or fishing, contrary to the commands of their parents.

Little girls are often burned to death, or injured in some other way, from the cause.

Is it not a beautiful sight to behold a well-trained family of children, all willing and anxious to render that obedience which God's holy book requires, and which nature itself teaches us is right?

If children are taught obedience to parents, they will find it much more easy to submit to the teachings of God's Holy Spirit.

You may think lightly of grieving your kind parents while you have them with you; but in all human probability, though the young, too, may die, you may be left an orphan.

Then, when all is dark before you, a father's earnest voice, a mother's tearful eye seem ever present. Oh, disobedient child! whoever you may be, reflect upon the possibility of your parents being taken away from you! How could you bear the terrible accusation of conscience! "Remorse, remorse," would be unavailing. Those fond beings, who loved you more tenderly than anything else on earth, are gone; and, so far as we know, cannot hear the repentant tones, or see the falling tear, of their heart-broken child.

Love your parents, dear children. Rest assured you will never look back with regret upon one single sacrifice made for mother's or father's sake.—[S. S. Visitor.

INNOCENCE is a flower which withers when touched, but blooms not again though watered with tears.

Mormonism and Its Opposers.

We publish elsewhere a letter from Elder Rideout, who has been traveling and preaching in Virginia, and received, as it appears by his letter, a "coat of tar and feathers" from some of the "most respectable" citizens of Smyth county.

Here is the account of the affair as given by the Abingdon (Va.) Democrat:

"A MORMON IN TROUBLE.—The Abingdon (Va.) Democrat learns that a disciple of Joe Smith got himself into a scrape recently in the neighboring county of Smyth. It appears that he had been preaching his odious doctrines for some time in a certain neighborhood, until the people got tired of hearing them, and they requested him to desist. This he refused to do, and he was told he must, or take the consequences. His perseverance at last wore out the patience of the community; a number of the most respectable citizens collected, and treated him to a coat of tar and feathers. This hint was sufficient, and the last seen of him he was striking the most direct course for Tazewell."

If a "number of respectable Citizens" would waylay one defenceless man, and tar and feather him, for no other cause than because he preached gospel truths, and which they with all their learning and wise men could not refute by argument, scripture, or reason, what must we think of those who are not called "respectable?" If the Democrat calls such men (?) the most respectable citizens, Good Lord deliver us from his ideas of "respectability," and the country or counties where such "respectable citizens" reside. How rampant is the spirit of mobbing, persecuting, and murdering the Saints and servants of God in this generation. Truth always did dissect error, made Satan mad, and all his emmisaries, from the days of a martyred Able to Jesus, and from his day to the present. The truth proclaimed by Jesus and his followers, which the Priests and learned men of that generation could not refute, brought down the ire of the corrupt, wicked, and self-righteous Saducee, Pharasee, &c., upon his innocent head, and never rested until they had shed his blood, and the blood of his followers. Just so it is, and has been in this last dispensation. Ever since the day that Joseph Smith the martyred Prophet of God, when only sixteen years of age, proclaimed to the world that an Angel from Heaven had spoken to him—revealed the everlasting Gospel—again in its fulness, and restored the Holy Priesthood, has driving, burning, traducing, mobbing, tarring, feathering, murder, &c., of the Saints been all the arguments this generation, with all their boasted light, intelligence, wisdom, and profound erudition, could bring forth to oppose Mormonism or militate against the truth revealed, and preached by the Mormons. The doctrines proclaimed by them are invulnerable, and they are at the defiance of the world to refute them, by scripture, reason, common sense, or philosophy.

They have thrown down the gaunlet, and do again, to all the world, to meet Mormonism upon its merits, and refute it, if they can. The poor mean, contemptible maligners who oppose it very well know they cannot, nor dare not, meet Mormonism on its principles, only by falsehoods, mobbing, and murder. These are all the arguments they can bring forth. Do the Mormons care? No. They very well know the truth they preach and practice makes Satan mad and brings persecution—always has, and always will, while wickedness reigns. The doctrines preached by the Mormons are called "odious." What is it that makes them so odious? Is Bible doctrines and Bible truths become so odious to this enlightened generation? Are the doctrines preached, believed in and practiced by all holy men of God from Adam down to Jesus, and since, so long as the Church of Christ or the Priesthood of God was on the earth become so odious to this church-going, mobbing generation? No doubt but if Heaven was opened, and they could only be privileged to look therein, and see Abraham and all the Holy Prophets and Saints of God there, they would say it was a corrupt place, composed of Polygamists and harlots. We have no doubt if the Devil himself was asked to-day why he was cast out of Heaven, (see Rev., chap. 12, 7 to 9 v.,) his answer would be, because they were corrupt there, they admitted Polygamists to enter there, and he, being holy, and a particular friend to long faces, long prayers, tract and missionary societies, and the author and stern upholder of Monogamy and christian institutions for those of easy virtue, could not think of keeping company with such beings, or abiding in such a place.

Say the clergy and editors, "Expose the iniquities of this system of abomination—let the people know and understand it." In reply we would say that is the very thing the Mormons wish, and are endeavoring to do all the while, to "let the people know and understand" what they believe and the glorious truths they have received, and of which they are in possession; and they very well know, when the honest in heart hear it, they will believe them and soon embrace them; neither will they care for the whining of priests or the yelping of editors, in relation to "exposing Mormonism." Hundreds who have apostatized from the Mormon Church since its first organization to the present, and others also, have tried to expose it, with all the help of hireling clergy and a prostituted press combined; wrote book after book, and published falsehood after falsehood; and what have they all amounted to in relation to retarding the spread of the work or the onward rolling of the Kingdom of God, with all the mobbing, driving, lying, and murdering besides? Answer. Nothing. No person, let him be who he may, that has undertaken to persecute the Mormons, and write books concerning them, traducing them, &c., but what it has proven a curse to him, in a pecuniary point of view, and the author has soon fallen and become a disgrace and reproach before all honest men. We have seen it, we know it, and we say in the name of Israel's God, it shall be so to every one who does it, except he repent.

If a servant of God belonging to the Mormon Church comes among the Gentiles, goes into their cities and towns, although he may be filled with the spirit and wisdom of the Almighty, and commissioned to bear as glad tidings as ever the archangel Michael was commissioned to bear from the realms of glory to a lost and ruined world, can he get a place to preach or lay his head scarcely? No! What treatment will he receive? Mobbing, tarring, feathering, murder, &c., will be his lot. But let a poor miserable traducer and seceder come into their midst, as full of filth and corruption as a cesspool, and go to lecturing and publishing lies concerning the Mormons, and such an one will be received by priests, editors, and people. O, yes, what a "nice man," "good scholar," "writes a fine book," "read it," "go and hear his lectures." Clergy embrace him, editors applaud him, publish his stuff and advertisements gratis—hail fellows well met. Does not all this go to prove that Satan is good to his own, that birds of a feather will flock together, and that the world loves its own and speaks well of them. But can you mix water and oil? Verily, no.

We are heartily tired at being compelled every week to have to answer or notice some ridiculous article against Gov. Young and the Mormons. Indeed, to answer all would require a standing army of writers, and keep in operation all the printing presses in New York. We know that Mormonism is a "thorn in the side" of this apostate generation, and something new to cope with. The devil has not had anything like it to contend with since the days of Jesus, and this generation never had. Hate it, despise it, kick it, or drive it, spurn it, or love it, still Mormonism is just the same—upward, onward, and eternal. In the short space of twenty-seven years it has gone almost to every country and clime, with all the combined powers of hell and earth arrayed against it, because God is its author, upholder, and protector, and this generation will yet have to acknowledge it, and that by the potent arm of Almighty power. It is known by millions of holy beings in the eternal worlds, and by hundreds of thousands on the earth, that Mormonism (so called) is true; we know it, and dare testify of it, and have known it for almost seventeen long years, and all the slander, mobbing, or murdering, of our enemies, cannot dispossess us of this fact. Our Elders are nearly all over the world, and Mormonism is still forward.

We also know Gov. Brigham Young; have known him for some fourteen years; and we do know him to be a good, upright, honest man—no better man can be found on this earth. He is a father, friend and protector to all that will do right. Indeed we never had an earthly father that treated us any more kindly than he has. We love him, honor and respect him; and will at all times take his part, and advocate his goodness, defend and maintain his rights, and feel to have that love for him, if necessary, that Jesus says, "no greater love can a man have for his friend than to lay down his life." He will treat every person with respect who deserves it; a true friend to the oppressed; a protector of the weak; and the fearless advocate of truth; the uncompromising enemy of hypocrisy and vice, be it displayed in the palaces of the high, or in the hovels of the low. He is not afraid of men nor devils, come life or come death, when the rights and privileges belonging unto him and his brethren are being infringed upon and taken away. And the people over whom he presides will uphold and support him, because they love him; and that love is deep rooted and abiding, by long experience of his integrity, virtue, wisdom, and fatherly kindness; and the same can be said of his counsellors, Presidents H. C. Kimball and Daniel H. Wells. They love justice, mercy, truth and liberty, and devoted lovers (as is every true Mormon) of the Constitution of the United States, believing it to be a Revelation from God to man.

The Mormons ask the rights that sacred instrument guarantees unto them, and nothing more.

We know there never was a people lived upon the earth who have been more maligned, abused, and persecuted than the Mormons are—deprived of their constitutional rights, and almost every other right.

We know our rights and privileges, and we feel like maintaining them; and with all our heart wish to extend the same privileges to others. Let them believe in what they please, worship whom or what they please, so as not to infringe upon the rights of others, freely and without persecution. We wish to treat everyone with respect, and to extend the Olive Branch of Peace, and pour in the oil of love and friendship wherever it is due; but whenever we, or the cause we advocate, which we know is a righteous one, are attacked, we expect to reply.

As it regards the Latter-Day work, or the rolling forth of the Kingdom of God, the fulness of the Everlasting Gospel called Mormonism by the world, restored to earth by the administration of an Holy Angel, in fulfilment of Prophecy, (see Rev., chap. XIV., 6 & 7th v.,) being overcome, or its progress stopped, or impeded, although the powers of darkness, and of this world combined, may be arrayed against it, to drive, mob, murder, and shed the blood of innocents, still, the work is bound to go ahead, until "This Gospel of the Kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations;" and then, (as Jesus said,) "shall the Lord come."

Mr. Kimball and the Mail Contract.

We are informed by telegraph from Washington that the Postmaster General has canceled the contract with Mr. Hiram Kimball for carrying the mail.

If he can find a man that will perform his contract with the Government in carrying the mail any better than Mr. Kimball has done, we should be pleased to see him. Since Messrs. Ferimorz Little & Co. discontinued carrying the mail, until Mr. Kimball received the contract, no regularity was observed; nor could any definite dependence be placed in the arrival of the mails between Independence, Mo., and G. S. L. City.

Under the contract of Mr. McGraw (the previous contractor to Mr. Kimball) there were no mails sometimes between those two points from November until June of the following year. But not one regular trip has failed since Mr. Kimball commenced, always making the trip within the time limited.

The mail of July last, that left Salt Lake City July 2, arrived at Independence on the nineteenth, making the entire distance in 17 days. Can the Department produce another man who will perform his contract more faithfully? It cannot. Why then want to displace Mr. Kimball and revoke his contract, after he has been at thousands of dollars expense in erecting mail stations along the route, and stocking the same with a relay of animals? Is it because Mr. Kimball has not done his duty? No. What then? A vindictive, jealous, envious spirit rankling in the bosoms of demagogues, and politicians seeking for office and "Government pap."

But Mr. Kimball is charged with being "under Mormon influence," and heretofore "opening the mails." The Mormons wish Mr. Kimball to fulfil his contract, and deliver the mail accordingly, and to this end use their "influence." This is all the "Mormon influence" exerted, or Mr. Kimball is under, and nothing more.

We would like to know how a mail contractor can open the mails; he is not in possession of any keys; all he has to do is to deliver the mail to the Post-offices at their proper destinations—there the mail is assorted, locked up by the Postmaster, and delivered to the carrier or contractor again, and by guards conducted again to its proper destination.

We are personally acquainted with Mr. Kimball, and we know him to be a high-minded honorable gentleman, one that would sooner be numbered with the silent dead, than condescend to stoop to the low mean dirty tricks, of which no doubt his maligners are guilty.

But he is a MORMON, and that name is enough for this generation. Like as it was in the days of the Saviour, when the innocent were brought to face their accusers, and could find no manner of crime of which they were guilty. The cry of "They or He is a christian" was sufficient to take away his rights, and condemn him to death. Just so it is at present in relation to the Mormons. Mr. Kimball no more ever opened the mail than we did, and his accusers know they are telling unblushing falsehoods when they assert it. Mr. Kimball has fulfilled the contract on his part in every particular; let the Government do the same. Fair play, and no partiality, Mr. Postmaster General.

Departure.

Another Act in the Burdell Tragedy.

Our city is once more in intense excitement. It is seldom otherwise; but some things tell so much better than others, and hold out so well that even in an ever-excited city, there are times more interesting than others. We are again, then, in an interesting time. Mrs. Cunningham, or Mrs. Burdell, whichever folks choose to call her, is once more before the public, and has, by months of manœuvering, placed on the stage of life a new and interesting act—an appendix to the Burdell tragedy of last winter.

Her right to Dr. Burdell's estate has been contested by his blood relations, ever since she made out her claims to be his legitimate wife. The case was within a little of being settled, and the expected decision, generally believed to be in her favor—from lack of evidence to prove the contrary, though the moral conviction of the community remained unchanged—trickery and deception to secure the murdered man's property.

According to law, she, on a favorable decision, would be entitled to a third of the estate, as she had no heir to claim the whole. It now turns out that heir or heiress she was determined to have. This week, the whole arrangement for this interesting denouement has been placed before the public. Though our paper is not intended to be a record of Gentile crimes; yet many of our readers were doubtless interested in Dr. Burdell's murder last winter; we, therefore, place before them the arrangements for the detection of Mrs. Cunningham, as presented to the press by the District Attorney—Mr. Hall—on Tuesday.

It will be remembered that shortly after the conclusion of the trial of Mrs. Cunningham for murder, a rumor prevailed that she was with child by Dr. Burdell, and that in due time a living pledge of the union would be produced. The rumor was not traced to any direct source, and was not generally believed, until her counsel, Judge Dean, in concluding his speech before the Surrogate, on July 3, used the following language, as appears from the Times report of the following day:

"If it were true that in the ordinary gestation a child should be born to Harvey Burdell, then not only the ties of blood and nature, but all the dictates of humanity, demanded that the Court should lean in favor of that innocent unborn child, rather than in favor of those who have no direct claim upon the property. He would say nothing of the consequences of a decree of bastardy in advance. With consequences we have nothing to do," &c.

This announcement was, however, received as authoritative that Mrs. Cunningham was enciente, and as she soon after began to appear in public, it was noticed that her form gave corroborating evidences of the probabilities outlived by the learned Judge, her counsel.

A few days after this public announcement of "contingencies"—this "casting of beforehand shadows," Dr. Ubl was sent for by Mrs. Cunningham to wait upon her. It will be remembered that Dr. Ubl had been her medical adviser previous to the date of the murder, and had attended her during the inquest, and was a prominent witness in the three investigations which grew out of the murder and the claim for the property. Dr. Ubl accordingly went to see her, and was informed by her that she was enciente by Dr. Burdell, and "expected" about the middle of August, and desired him to become one of her medical attendants upon the accouchement. Dr. Ubl consented. In a few days he called again, and advised with her about her condition. Upon pressing some certain medical inquiries his suspicions became aroused. Up to this time Dr. Ubl had rather favored the idea that Mrs. Cunningham was entirely innocent of the charge of murder. He visited her again, and his doubts became almost certainties. He immediately laid the whole matter before David E. Wheeler, Esq., his counsel, who as directly told him it was his duty to go to District Attorney Hall, (whose firm of Brown, Hall & Vanderpool have offices in the Broadway Bank, immediately adjoining the office of Mr. Wheeler,) and make a necessary affidavit. Dr. Ubl immediately called on Mr. Hall—this was about the date of July 10—and stated the facts, asseverating, however, that he would not make an affidavit, as he did not wish his professional delicacy or confidence to be at issue. Mr. Hall told him that if such a thing was contemplated by Mrs. Cunningham it was a very serious felony, and referred the doctor to that section of the Revised Statutes which says:

"Every person who shall fraudulently produce an infant, falsely pretending it to have been born of parents whose child would be entitled to a share of any personal estate, or to inherit any real estate, with the intent of intercepting the inheritance of any such real estate, or the distribution of any such personal property from any person lawfully entitled thereto, shall, upon conviction, be punished by imprisonment in a State prison not exceeding ten years."

Mr. Hall further argued with the doctor that he might have it in his power to prevent the crime accomplishing its guilty fruits, or from being an undiscovered mystery; that under the strange circumstances surrounding this woman and her world-wide notoriety, and the unfortunate results which might flow to the community if her crimes should baffle detection, it was the duty of every man to do all in his power to thoroughly expose her. Dr. Ubl said he would reflect upon the matter. He did so, and on the following day told Mr. Hall that he would place himself entirely at his disposal and at those of the authorities, and engage in any plan which Mr. Hall might project. The advice of the District Attorney was that he should go, and concealing his doubts and suspicions, learn from Mrs. Cunningham her full views and arrangements. Upon another interview Mrs. C. admitted to him that the approaching confinement was a humbug, and "the unborn child" of her counsel's eloquence an elegant myth, and offered him $1,000 if he would undertake the job of finding a child and assisting at the "accouchement." Whereupon Dr. Ubl apparently assented, and returning to the District Attorney reported. The latter functionary said he had a great many things on his hands—that these things worried him more or less, and that therefore the sooner the crisis was reached the better. He then laid down this plan: That Dr. Ubl should invent the fable of a California widow for a patient, whose husband being away had been indiscreet, and was ready to present her lord with a "responsibility" for which in law he was not responsible; that being sent for to go to California, she was anxious to bestow it upon any of those kind ladies who are perpetually advertising for "infants to adopt," and was as anxious to conceal her shame as any lady might be, to be sure that the "real mother" was never to "turn up" like Pillicoddy's wife, and reclaim the lost heir. This mystical matter was to be located near by in Elm street; that on any convenient day a child should be "borrowed" for a few hours from Bellevue Hospital, and sent for to the Elm street place of refuge of the distressed California widow by Mrs. Cunningham; that the latter should be in travail for a few hours, and then while in possession of the "little stranger" suddenly be restored to a delightful convalescence, with a variety of minor dramatic touches (for which the District Attorney is said to be famous) not necessary now to be mentioned.

The plan was given to Mrs. Cunningham, who was highly pleased with it, and became impatient to have the denouement. Dr. Ubl asked her when it would be most convenient for her to become a mother. Thursday, July 28, was the shortest time for the "ordinary gestation," (as spoken of by Judge Dean,) under the theory of the marriage before the Surrogate, and so the first week in August became the settled time.

On the 1st day of August Mr. Hall found it necessary to find another physician who should take charge of the child and care for its health, whilst it was in a state of loan, and also to obtain the infant. He sent for his most intimate friend and his own personal physician, Dr. de la Montagnie, of Fishkill, a prominent man of that region, and also for Messrs. Governor Washington Smith and George Kellock, of the Almshouse, and to them counted his plans. The doctor promised to lend his aid, and came down to New York for that purpose. Governor Smith, with District Attorney Hall, had an interview with Mr. Warden Daly, of the Bellevue Hospital, on Monday last, and examined into the state of the "lying in" ward. It was found favorable. The child would be forthcoming.

Dr. Ubl and Dr. De la Montagnie were then brought together by Mr. Hall at his office, and after a consultation started out to find fitting apartments whereto might come the messenger of Mrs. Cunningham with a basket, and wherein (in the apartments and not the basket) has to be the mythical widow of California. Elm street was found to be particularly full of "apartments," but there were none private enough except some in the house of Mr. ——, a lager bier gentleman of No. 190 Elm street. Dr. De la Montagnie being unprovided with such baggage Mr. Hall lent him one of his wife's trunks marked "K. L. H.," which rendered necessary (lest suspicion being excited by the inmates they might impart it to the bearer of the child when she should make her appearance basket in hand) the taking of a name corresponding to the initials. The name selected was "Karl L. Herring." (It may be here remarked that the doctor from Dutchess county has a remarkably German appearance and will do credit to the Saxon race anywhere.) A card with that name upon it was given to the worthy host of 190 Elm street—rooms were selected—and by 12 o'clock, noon, of Monday, August 3, the first act of the drama of "My Little Adopted" was over.

The police entered the apartment of Mrs. Burdell at 1-2 past 12 o'clock, on Monday night and in spite of the great suffering of the recently confined lady, took the "blessed baby" and remitted it to the care of her bona fide mother in Bellevue Hospital. Of course the lady of No. 31 Bond street acted well her part and suffered intensely, did an amount of twisting and groaning that must have, in spite of the gravity of the occasion, been very ludicrous to the officers of Justice.

It would occupy more space than we can consent to devote to the subject to show in detail the carrying out of the well-executed plan for the detection of the crime—sufficient will be a few lines. Mrs. Cunningham is arrested and confined in her house in Bond street—Dr. Catlin, her medical adviser and who waited upon her at her accouchment, is likewise arrested and in close confinement. This new act promises to be interesting for the public, but damaging to the interests of Mrs. C. and Dr. C.

Vindication of Ex-Surveyor General Burr.

From the Washington Union.

WASHINGTON CITY, D. C., July 27.

We have noticed in the St. Louis Republican of the 23d, what purports to be correspondence from Utah, comprising charges against David H. Burr as Surveyor General of Utah. Respecting which charges, we take pleasure in assuring the friends of General Burr and the public at large, that they are the fabrication of evil-disposed persons, intended to reflect upon his character as a public officer, in consequence of the independent manner in which he has regarded it his duty to report officially to the department in Washington. We know that he is entirely incapable of committing an unjust or fraudulent act by thought, word, or deed, either in private or public life. These slanderous charges would be deemed unworthy of notice, if the utter worthlessness of the perpetrators were as well known to the public as to ourselves. Nothing but a sense of duty to one whom we regard privately as a gentleman, and in his public capacity as a faithful officer, has induced us to lay this card before the public.

GEORGE P. STILES,
JOHN M. HOCKADAY.
P. K. DOTSON.

The N. Y. Daily Times published on Monday a despatch stating that President Buchanan had concluded to retain Stiles, Hockaday and Dotson in their present offices; we have, therefore, concluded to supply the Utonians concerned with the above; they may find it serviceable, when the three returns to the Territory. It is amusing to hear the trio give a good character to Burr. Poor Burr must be very low when he has to get a helping hand from that quarter! The same despatch states that as "he had become particularly obnoxious to the Mormons, it was thought advisable that he should not return"—very kind sentiment, and after that, listen—"the administration have entire confidence in his integrity!!" How very kind and considerate not to re-appoint because he is obnoxious. That really is more than we expected; we feel overwhelmed at the courtesy extended; but after all, David H. Burr is no worse than the crowd of the appointees to Utah. His son, David H. Burr, has started for G. S. L. City to take charge of the books and papers of the office, and deliver them over to Col. Jack Hays or his successor, whoever he may be.

Appointments.

ELDERS JOHN N. WAKELY, William Carter, and William H. Lee are hereby appointed to travel and preach the Gospel in the Canadas. All the Elders on missions there will counsel and correspond together as often as necessary for the good of the cause, and the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God. They will act under the direction of the Presidency at New York, and report their labors from time to time.

All these brethren and those heretofore appointed on missions there, will labor, according to their appointments, until further orders, in preaching the Gospel, baptizing those who believe, organizing Churches, busting up the lost sheep, building up the Saints, comforting the hearts of all those who wish to do right, and counselling them in relation to their duties, gathering to Zion, &c. Always endeavoring to preach wherever a place may be open, and to labor in new places as much as possible.

They will also act as agents for THE MORMON, obtain all the subscriptions, donations, &c. they can, and remit the same to us at New York.

W. I. APPLEBY, President, &c.

Arrival.

ELDER WILLIAM H. LEE arrived here on Saturday, on his way to Canada. Bro. L. has been visiting his friends in Michigan, and is satisfied that his labors have been beneficial to many. He re-baptized several old members of the Church, and added one to the number of those who start for Salvation.

Elder Lee informs us that he had met with Thomas B. Marsh, of early Mormon history, at Florence, on his way to Utah. The old gentleman was abundantly satisfied that there was Salvation in the track he had forsaken, and returned to it with the humility of the Prodigal Son.

The Mormon Mail Contracts, &c.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Aug. 2.

It will be remembered that Postmaster-General Brown, last Spring, cancelled the contract with the Mormons for carrying the mails over the plains. He has decided to give out a new contract for this service, and, it is said, contemplates putting it in the hands of a man thoroughly competent to perform it faithfully, and who is entirely divested of Mormon influence.

DOMESTIC SUMMARY.

THE Board of Commissioners continue their game of opposition. On Saturday the three Republicans presented their man to supply the place of the retired Mr. Draper, the two Mayors had their man and the Know Nothing stuck to his man through no less than one hundred and seventy-one ballotings. They adjourned till Monday and resumed the operation and had patience enough to go through one hundred and seventy-two more ballotings and adjourned as before without coming to any final vote. On Tuesday the three Republicans were present; but by concert of action the three others manage to get sick or very busy at the same time and by their absence prevent the Board from acting. So here they stand.

A shocking tragedy occurred at the Sea View House, Navesink, on Saturday morning last. The bar-keeper had been successful in gambling with the book-keeper the previous evening, and the latter is now in prison accused of cutting the throat of the former to recover his losses.

On Saturday evening three young men from Hoboken got very badly used in a city grog and prostitution shop, one of whom died on Sunday from his wounds.

Another case of stabbing is added to the long list. In a drunken quarrel between two brothers, the one stabbed the other with a sailor's knife.

The inhabitants of the Fourteenth Ward presented last week, E. A. Willoughby, the young man who captured the assassin of Officer Anderson, with a splendid gold watch and chain as a mark of their esteem. The subsequent murder of Mr. Van Liew, which we noticed last week, has stirred up the inhabitants of the Fifth and Eighth Wards to look after their own safety and the protection of property; they have consequently organized a Vigilance Committee. Whether the New York Vigilants will be as free in the use of hemp as were the Vigilants of San Francisco remains to be seen. They profess merely to assist the police; but expect the authorities to punish crime to their satisfaction. The San Franciscians began as temporately; their New York imitators may end as gloriously as their prototypes. Whether or not, life and property are insecure in New York, and if a Vigilance Committee can diminish the crime of Gotham their will be little grumbling on the part of well-disposed citizens.

Mrs. Cunningham's plot for a generation of Burdells is the engrossing subject of interest. Catlin has turned State's evidence and has furnished the District Attorney with a few "kinks." Rich disclosures are anticipated.

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

BERANGER, the national poet of France is dead. His spirit left its human tabernacle on the 16th ult., and the Imperial government, afraid of an uprising at the funeral of this object of the people's adoration, suppressed the news of his death from circulating, by every means in their power, and hastily, the next day, hurried him off to his last resting place. The Prefect of Police issued his proclamation early in the morning, and the streets were filled with armed soldiery. No less than 50,000 soldiers were on the qui vive in the city and surrounding country, ready to march at a moment's notice. From the poet's residence to the Church, where the Catholic rites were to be gone through over the corpse, the streets were filled with the people, in spite of the measures of the government, to witness the last of their friend and idol; but by deception, the funeral cortege, of somewhere about 100 persons, invited by the government, passed through a by-street and thus the masses were duped and chagrined. Louis must feel insecure when he could not allow his subjects to join in mournful silence a funeral procession; but like the son of Erin "none knows himself better than himself." He knows his weakness, and none know it better.

Three Italians have been arrested recently, charged with the mission of assassinating the Emperor. The disclosures they have made compromise seriously Mazzini, Ledru Rollin and other revolutionary magnates presently sojourning in London. It is not improbable that Louis will require from Victoria, as a pledge of her friendship, the withdrawal of British protection from those gentlemen, as he required from her, two years ago, in the case of Victor Hugo, whose poetic effusions disturbed his peace.

General Cavaignac, M. Goudchaux and M. Carnot, the Republicans, recently elected in Paris for the Chamber of Deputies, refuse to take the oaths to the Imperial Government, so their elections fall to the ground. The will of the Parisians, however, has been demonstrated in their elections, and that is something.

The British Commons and Lords are again engaged on the admission of Jews into Parliament. Baron Rothschild had resigned his seat for the city of London; but the Cockneys would elect him again—determined to battle and tire out the mitred heads and old women of the House of Lords.

Miss Madeline Smith is the people's subject for the moment. The canny Scotch are about getting up a substantial testimonial in her behalf—something in the shape of pounds sterling, and that ranges among the fives and tens of thousands. Her father had spoken of leaving his "heather hills;" but the tradesmen of Glasgow are about to present him with an address of sympathy for his misfortune, and to kindly request him to stay among them, which is likely to be effectual. L'Angelier is hated for the ruin he has caused to a respectable family. The soul of the people revolts against the monster's desolation, probably, because she is Miss Madeline. The virtuous daughters of Adam are alike precious jewels in the sight of the Great Father, and should find equal portection from the destroyer. Let none forget Burns:—

"Is there, in human form, that bears a heart,
A wretch! a villian! lost to love and truth!
That can, with studied, sly, ensnaring art,
Destroy sweet Jenny's unsuspecting youth?
Curse on his perjured arts! dissembling smooth!
Are honor, virtue, conscience, all exiled?
Is there no pity, no relenting ruth,
Points to the parents fondling o'er their child?
Then paints the ruined maid, and her distraction wild!"

Serving Out an Unwelcome Governor.

THE telegraphic despatch that announced the arrival of Gov. Walker and troops at Lawrence recently, stated that the difficulty between the Governor and the Free-State men of that town originated over the collection of the Territorial taxes which they were determined to resist. Subsequent information, however, shewed the difficulty to have sprung from the creation of a new charter instead of gathering the taxes. As the latter have still to be gathered and the Governor has force to back up the collector, the Free State men have hit upon a notion that promises to be troublesome to Mr. Walker and the administration. Gov. Robinson at a recent public meeting gives the hint to the Free Soilers:

"The people of Lawrence have never had a municipal government. Recently they organized a local government, for the purpose of bridging the ravine, watering the streets, making sidewalks, and attending to other local matters. Now, when Governor Walker heard of this movement, he issued a ridiculous proclamation against it, and marched to Lawrence with several companies of soldiers. When he came to the town, he sent word that he had arrived, but nobody took any notice either of him or his manifesto or his soldiery. He soon found that he had put himself into an awkward position. He found that the people had committed no offence recognizable by law, because as there existed no local government of any kind in Lawrence there necessarily could be no usurpation of office—the misdemeanor with which he charged. The administration once arrested the speaker (Gov. Robinson) for usurpation of office, but were finally obliged to withdraw it, because before they could prosecute him, they must acknowledge that there was such an office as State Governor—and, rather than do that, they abandoned the suit. The present case was exactly similar. Gov. Walker had found out this fact, and was trying to get out of his ridiculous situation. He believed he would be grateful to the Free State men to help him out of it; but they refused to do so, or to notice him even, and there he was obliged and would be obliged to stay, on the open prairie, like the excellent but procrastinating Micawber, 'waiting for something to turn up.'

"If he attempted to collect taxes the people would refuse to pay them. They would be obliged to proceed in the usual way—to advertise the property—to get customers to buy it—and then to sell it. No Free State men would buy the property thus advertised. He ventured to say that no Pro Slavery men would dare to come into Lawrence and bid for such property. [Cheers.] But, if they did so—if Walker placed troops enough to protect them—the Free State men would bid for the property till it went so high that it was worth more than its value and the tax, too. Then they would, perhaps, be unable to pay for it! There was no law to prevent men from bidding for property, even if they had no money to pay for it! [Laughter.] A thousand would be prepared to do this, so that before Walker got through with Lawrence, the next Presidential election would come off. [Laughter.]"

If Free State men are determined and can carry out that game, it is high time that a successor to Mr. Walker was looked up for the latter, will bolt some fine morning—no Governor can stand that game long.

Utah.

A RECENT despatch from Washington states that the new Governor, Col. Cumming, would not leave for the mountains till the middle of September and the Administration was satisfied with the present state of Mormon affairs. We "guess" if the electric wires had extended from the "Federal City" to the "City of the Saints," just the place where it should be, the nation would have been saved the Dollars on the Harney expedition.

Arrival of Emigrants.

ROBERT GAISFORD, Robert McKay, James Wilson, and Andrew McMaster and their families arrived at New York in the Isaac Wright on Saturday last, after a passage of 44 days, all in good health.

Wood's Meeting.

THERE will be a three days Wood's Meeting of the Church of Latter Day Saints held on the lands of Moses Ivins, Esq., near Hornerstown, Cream Ridge, Monmouth County, New Jersey, commencing on Friday, August 28, and continue over the following Sabbath.

The brethren composing the "Brass Band," under their leader, Elder Eardley, from Trenton, N. J., will be present on the occasion, and entertain the audience with some of their favorite sacred airs.

Presidents of Conferences, Presidents of Branches, Travelling Elders, and lay members of the Church, adjacent, that can make it convenient, as well as the public in general, are respectfully invited to attend.

R. D. TRESEDER,
President of Hornerstown Branch, &c.

President Alexander Ott.

BRO. OTT returned this morning (Thursday) from a visit to Haverstraw, Rockland Co. and to Arnoldtos, Ulster Co., N. Y. He speaks very flatteringly of the good works and labors of the Saints in both places for the support and spread of the Work of God, and reports having recieved an attentive and courteous hearing from strangers generally.

Notice to Subscribers.

As the Six-Months' subscription to the Third Volume of THE MORMON will expire with one more number, we hereby notify all whose subscriptions terminates with the twenty-sixth number, and who wish their subscriptions renewed, will please forward the same to us, as all papers will be discontinued, as the subscription expires, unless renewed.

It behooves us necessarily to adopt the foregoing rule in order to continue the publication of the paper.

☞ The columns of THE MORMON are open to the correspondence and articles of the Elders; but, while we believe in according full liberty to all, we hold ourselves irresponsible for the particular sentiments of any.

Editorial Correspondence from the Plains.

CAMP, ELM CREEK,
15 Miles above Fort Kearney,
July 9th, 1857.

BRO. APPLEBY—Dear Sir: I embrace an opportunity now offered of addressing you a few words. The first hand-cart company is about five miles ahead of us, and we are now camped with Capt. Walker's company, which is the first ox-train company, and is principally laden with goods belonging to the last year's hand-cart emigration; a few teams have joined in with them. All the emigration is moving on well, their cattle are in good order, and they are moving generally from eighteen to twenty miles per day. The camps are all healthy, and a spirit of union and harmony prevails. Just before we left Florence, a company of eighteen wagons arrived with apostates. From what little we saw of them, Utah is a great deal better without them; they are composed of such as could not endure the late revival and purging among the Saints, and, like the dross when subject to the refiner's fire, they have floated off. You need feel no trouble about them or their influence, for they exhibit themselves wherever they go; they overflow with wormwood and gall, their mouths are full of cursing and bitterness, and they are a disgrace to any decent society.

We left Florence on the 1st, and visited Genoa, our new settlement, on Saturday afternoon, where we were honored by a military escort and an address (the particulars of which hereafter.) Genoa is a beautiful location, the land rich and fertile, and a sufficiency of timber with care for all necessary purposes. There is about eighty men there, most of whom have families, and they have taken up claims; they have enclosed two large fields, containing about seven hundred acres, about four hundred of which are in crop. Although laboring under many disadvantages, they have made better improvements than any other settlement within fifty miles of them. Their gardens were better and more forward than any we have seen in the western country. Among other vegetables, we were treated to green peas. We held a conference there, and appointed Brother Alburn Allen as President, and Nathan Davis and Henry Peck as his counsellors. Bro. Wm. Felshaw was appointed President of Florence, Nebraska, and Western Iowa, with Alburn Allen and John Gleason as counsellors. We organized a land company in accordance with the provisions made by the Territorial statutes of Nebraska for the legal protection of the citizens and their claims. A new steam saw mill is also erected, to which a grist mill can be attached when necessary.

It may be well here to inform you that the spirit of "border ruffianism" is rampant in most of the western country, and "Regulators" and mob law seem to bear rule. At Independence, Mo., Bro. James Gamel, who was with a company of Texians on their way to the valley, was mobbed by a band of ruffians in front of the public square at the instance of Mr. McGraw, the former mail contractor, who told him "if he was not gone in fifteen minutes he should hang on that tree," pointing to one in the vicinity. Gamel immediately fled, as he saw a number of ruffians armed with revolvers; they followed him on foot and on horseback, firing at him as he ran; by leaping fences, he, however, evaded them, although he had as many as fifty shots fired at him; he afterwards swam the Missouri river and escaped, and is now with us. Threats were also made against Bro. Erastus Snow. In consequence of this and other appearances of hostility, we selected a guard of our own brethren who have accompanied us to this place. We expected here to join the mail, en route for Utah, but the river is impassable, and we can only correspond through the medium of two or three good swimmers. We were informed that this said McGraw is superintendant for the construction of the military road, and acting as government agent on said road; that twenty men were going on as an advance surveying party, and that about one hundred were to follow them. Bro. Gamel says that some of those in the advance party were the men who fired at him; but as he is preparing a statement of the affair, and will forward it with the next mail, I must leave this matter with him.

We are now going to dismiss our guard. As we have none of the beauties of western civilization, and nothing but the Indians to contend with, we think we are perfectly safe; but thus far we thought it prudent to be prepared both for civilization and the Indians. We take this public manner of acknowledging the kindness of our brethren who volunteered to come with us, several of whom were hand-cart missionaries, and also to those who fitted out horses and teams from Bluff City, Crescent City, Florence, and Genoa. We say God bless and prosper them all in their undertakings; and as they have stepped forward in this emergency, we pray that they always may find friends and protection in every emergency.

My kind regards to Bros. Stenhouse, Dulin, Clinton, Cannon, and all the good Saints.

As ever, yours in the E. C.,
JOHN TAYLOR.

[We regret that a press of matter already in type prevented us from publishing, last week, the foregoing letter from the pen of President Taylor. Our readers will, doubtless, feel with us grateful for his deliverance, and likewise the deliverance of President Snow, from the hands of murderers who have followed them for hundreds of miles. Long may their precious lives be spared to roll on the Kingdom and to bring honor and glory to Zion. —ED.]

Correspondence from Elder W. Lancaster.

FAIRFIELD, Franklin Co., Ia.,
July 20, 1857.

BRO. APPLEBY—Dear Sir: I deem it expedient, as I have a few leisure moments this morning, to drop a line to you and let you know the prospects of Mormonism here in Indiana, as I have lived here in this State since the last extermination of the Saints at old Nauvoo. I have endeavored through the summer and fall of every season to preach and testify to the people of the glorious Gospel of the Son of God where I could get an opening. At this time there seems to be as good an opening as I ever knew in the State, and the people have as good a feeling towards the Mormons as I ever knew them to have. The reports of Judge Drummond, and others of the same character, together with the false statements which others have circulated through the Gentile papers, have done no harm. The people have read and have become satisfied that there is a possibility of such accusations being lies; therefore the greater part of the people seem free to investigate the matter for themselves. Yesterday I had an appointment some seven miles from where I live, at a school house called Whitelock. I arrived there some twenty minutes before the appointed time; the people were just commencing to gather in. I hitched my beast in a suitable shade, then walked towards the old log hut that had stood the storms for the last twenty years or more, and took my seat on the trunk of a large beach tree, whose branches overshadow the ground for some yards around, pondering in my mind, at the same time, the peculiar notions that they had of the Great Giver of all good. The school house was soon approached by two rude looking young men, who were directly followed by a number of others, and of course my curiosity led me to see the inside of the old rustick, and see if I thought it to be a suitable place for the assembled crowd to be comfortably seated; but at the first glance I saw that it would suit nothing, without it was the rats and mice that then occupied the room. I proposed taking the benches under some trees that stood near by, which was readily done. Our sanctuary was soon erected, and the ladies all well seated; the gents on logs, trunks of trees, and some took choice to seat themselves on the grass. The scenery to me now was delightful; all seemed to be in silence, while the western winds stole their way through the lovely foliage that hung over our heads, and shielded our bodies from the mighty heat of the sun. It seemed as if every throb of the heart and every beating pulse was waiting patiently for me to commence my defence of the gospel of Christ. I arose and referred to them (as gentlemen and ladies) that I would give them a brief account of the rise of this Church and the principles by which it was organized, and I would then proceed to preach to them the first principles of the doctrine of Christ. The remarks that I made in reference to the organizing of the church through Joseph the Seer did not set well with some of them; finally the spirit that got hold of them carried them away, and I saw them no more. I then proceeded, and took for a starting point some of the words of the Saviour to the Apostles, "Go ye unto all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, baptizing them in the name of the Father," &c., confining myself to the words, my name, and proved to them that such signified authority to act.

I labored two hours and twenty minutes without one dissenting voice, with one exception, while I was speaking of the ordinance of the laying on of the hands, by proper authority, for the gift of the Holy Ghost; and observed, for that I was once "egged." A voice on my right remarked, that was right, amen. I turned myself and directed my discourse to him, and said: Sir, there are two things that you don't believe and there is one that you do. You don't believe in the Constitution of the United States; neither do you believe in the Gospel of the Saviour; but you believe in mobs. I closed this interview by showing that we live in a day when the Great God of the heavens was revealing himself to man as in former days. I left an appointment for the next Sabbath. I then gave them into the hands of the Lord by dismission, praying that the Lord would bless them according to their desires. I also called their attention to the Mormon (the same I had along,) and desired that they should become subscribers and investigate the truth. Two men presented themselves—one took the Book of Mormon to read, the other the paper, and said he would see about the matter.

I got on my beast and left for home. I had not got far away when I saw them standing about in groups, probably consulting the matter. I rode on about two miles, and met a man that I had some acquaintance with. He asked me where I had been. I told him I had been over at the Whitelock school house preaching Mormonism. He replied that he would like to hear me himself, and that he would make arrangements to that effect. These are some of the prospects that are here. By the insertion of this you will do a kindness to me. The brethren will know of my address. As ever, yours,

WRIGHT LANCASTER.

GREELEY AMONG THE MORMONS.

OUR facetious cotemporary, Picayune, has just changed its Shanghai dress for one more elegant and fashionable. Pic. comes out well; looks something more substantial than formerly; is rich in illustrations and jokes. Having had its fling last week at Greeley and the Mormons, with pen and pencil, we could not resist the temptation of placing a not bad likeness of the Editor of the Tribune before our readers, as they are doubtless somewhat interested to see that peculiar man, whose paper has so freely booted, as Pic has it, the peculiar institution, and for that purpose we have been courteously accomodated with the annexed wood-cut from the Picayune office.

"SUCH a man as our dear, good friend Horace Greeley, who ever goes on in his mild, good, blundering way, reminds us always of the b'hoy who said, "If I don't have a muss I shall spile." Greeley must have an ism or he'll "spile." Having Faith large (we speak phrenologically), with firmness and perceptives small, he generally goes in in favor of anything new which may turn up. But in certain cases, for reasons best known to himself, he is found in the opposition. His present position is one of antagonism to a new theory. He is down on Mormonism, and when he does come down, he comes down like a brick church. As an illustration of his thoroughness, the earnestness, and no half-measureness with which he goes into anything, we annex a picture made by our artist, who most fortunately happened to be residing in the neighborhood, and had frequent opportunities of studying Horace in private life. The picture represents the great Ismist wreaking his vengeance on the rural Mormons—the Polygamists of the farm yard. Poor Greeley! he cannot bear the sight of a rooster, and will never have fowls for dinner. We understand he will shortly return to the city, as he objects to living in a Mormon settlement, even of birds, and the farmer with whom he boards will not allow him to chase the fowls."—[New York Picayune, July 25.

Correspondence of I. M. Coombs.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, July 24, 1857.

PREST. W. I. APPLEBY—Dear Bro.: I hail you from the "Queen City" (so called) of the West, hoping that a few items from this part of the country may prove interesting to you. I arrived here on the 10th inst., and have, since then, been laboring among the Saints, teaching them the principles of the kingdom and pointing them to Zion as the only place of refuge, from the judgements of the last days. I find a good spirit among the few Saints who still remain, and have enjoyed myself very much in their society. Most of them are anxious to gather to the mountains and will, I think, succeed in doing so next spring. The gathering is my principal theme in my teaching among the Saints for I feel that it is of paramount importance at the present time. I often wonder how people can profess to be Saints and yet never exert themselves to gather out of Babylon. They love the principles of the Church, they say, and intend to gather after awhile if the Lord will just wait till they get a few more dollars so that they can go in their carriages and have plenty to come back with if they should wish to. Oh! yes they are good Saints, but then, really, they can't see any particular necessity of going to the mountains yet. As long as old Babylon holds together, and leeks and onions are in abundance they just want to stay and enjoy it, but when the Lord sends upon her, in their fury, His long delayed judgements then they intend to rise up and flee to Zion. What foolish wisdom is herein displayed, Waste their lives in inglorious ease among the Gentiles, and then expect to reap the reward of the faithful and obedient who have borne the heat and burthen of the day Nay, verily, as sure as there is a just God they will be disappointed. They will be found among those who knew the will of God and did it not. The way is now open for the poorest amongst this people to gather home, if they feel disposed to do so, and those who are able to go with hand-carts, and still hang back, hoping to get a better fit out, are doing nothing less than tempting the Almighty, and must take the consequences of their disobedience on their own heads. I find some among the Saints who despise the hand-cart scheme, and who think it rather too hard a way to travel so far, and yet they profess to have faith in God and to know that this is His work. To my mind this is a flat contradiction. If I have faith in God I will have faith to go to Zion with a hand-cart, and it will not require any great stretch of faith to do it either. The most that will be required will be the works and they will be just in proportion to my strength and ability to perform. I have no idea that the Lord or His servants will ever be so unreasonable as to require of me something I can not do. If we understand anything of the principles of eternal truth we know that the judgements of the Almighty await this generation for rejecting His Gospel, and killing His Prophets, and that the only way to escape these judgements is to flee to Zion. If we know these things we are not going to be so particular as to the manner of going. If the Lord gives us means and does not command us to use it in some other way, we can go in a carriage and four, or with an ox train. But if our means are limited we shall, peradventure, be obliged to go with a hand-cart, or with a bundle under our arms, as the case may be, and, if we feel as we ought to, we will be filled with gratitude that we are permitted to go even in that manner. Ancient Israel during their forty years wandering in the wilderness had no carriages to ride, that I can read of, nor yet had the Nephites in their eight years travel, and yet some Saints in these days complain when they are required to take a forty days journey with hand-carts. Now, let them ask themselves this question "who is to be benefitted by me taking a hand-cart and pulling it to Zion?" and when that question is answered in their own minds correctly they will be ready to get into the harness and start. Well so much on hand-carts.

The "Queen City" has been the theatre of another terrible tragedy during the past week, which causes no little excitement, especially among the editorial gentry who are making quite a spec out of it.

The columns of the various papers are filled with the horrible intelligence that a murder has been committed, a suicide attempted, and it is expatiated upon with holy horror. A stranger to the city and its morals might be induced to believe that this is the first murder that was ever committed here, but the truth is, there is scarcely a day passes but some one is killed or robbed, but then the most of these are among the lower classes and it does not pay the editors to say much about them. But in the present instance a rich man is the victim, and the more fuss they make about it the more dimes they get. If this is the "Queen City" of the West in point of moral, I think I should prefer a habitation on the tops of the mountains or in the midst of some vast desert, where no man is. Were the earth to open and swallow it up with its filth and abominations I should think it a just judgement from the Almighty. Do I wish this city to be thus destroyed? Yes, and every other wicked city just as soon as the Lord sees that they are ripe for it. Of course I had rather see a people repent as did the inhabitants of Ninevah, than to see them destroyed in their sins as were the Sodomites, but this people will not repent, save it be a few, and that few must follow the example of Lot and flee to a place of refuge if they would escape, and those who remain must be destroyed. I don't want to be less just or more merciful than God is, if He says that this generation justly deserves damnation at His hands for their disobedience and wickedness, I say amen, and will not ask Him to hold His hand one moment. I have compassion for my fellow man, and cannot bear to see even a brute suffer. I can mourn with those who mourn, and sympathize with those who are in distress, be they friend or foe, but at the same time I am a lover of justice and wish to see every one rewarded according to his merits.

It has been a long time since the gospel was first preached in Cincinnati, and there is not one within the limits or in the regions around about who have not had the privilege of obeying it if they had wished, and yet at the present time there is but about sixty in this city who have a name and standing in the Church. Well, Bro. Appleby, I feel that my garments are unspotted with their blood, and to leave them in the hands of a just God. I have read a letter from Bro. D. O. Rideout, he is laboring in the State of Virginia, and is doing a good work there though much opposed. My love to Dr. Clinton. I am as ever yours in the covenant of eternal life.

ISAIAH M. COOMBS.

Correspondence of Elder Wm. G. Mills.

G. S. L. CITY, U. T., June 30, 1857.

ELDER T. B. H. STENHOUSE.—Dear Bro.: I was happy to receive a note from you by Marshal Heywood, and felt pleased that you remembered an old acquaintance; and to know that you and family are well and so far on the way to Zion. I am happy to learn by "THE MORMON" that you are engaged in the defence and extension of the truth in connexion with that mighty periodical; and knowing * * * for such a position, I wish you every success that your most sanguine wishes could suggest.

It is more than two years since I saw you last in Liverpool, when commencing my travels to this place, and I am happy to say that the brightest hopes, most lofty desires, most joyous anticipations that the fire and spirit of poetry had swelled and excited in my soul have been more than realized since my arrival. I have preached in Babylon about Zion, tuned my rude harp to the theme, swelled my loftiest tone, and swept the sweetest chord in praise of its beauties and worth, yet I feel that poetic breathings and fancies, raised by the zeal of an honest heart and esthusiastic spirit who love the truth are all surpassed by the blessings, position, condition and prospects of the Saints of God, gathered in this portion of His vineyard.

It is said relative to some circumstances, that "there is more truth than poetry" in them, but the highest wrought feelings and pictures of a blessed people in a mundane State of which the imaginative may conceive, cannot impart a correct idea of the privileges and blessings enjoyed here. Reality is greater than the ideality.

I have the pleasure of being acquainted with President B. Young, and his Counsellors, H. C. Kimball and D. H. Wells, (as well as formerly with the lamented J. M. Grant,) and I know them to be everything that God could require of men, of prophets, of leaders; and tho' I always entertained of them the most exalted opinion for their integrity, benevolence and wisdom, yet the more I become acquainted with them, and hear their counsels and teachings, and observe their holy course of conduct, the more I love them; and my bosom swells with gratitude to God that we have such men to lead this people. I never was a man-worshiper, nor an imitator of others, yet I feel at times almost to worship and adore them for the goodness, truth, and virtue displayed through them. I verily believe if the Saints would obey their precepts, and follow their examples in all things, God would dwell personally with us. Altho'

"God knows we're no' the things we should be,
Nor are we e'en the things we could be."

Yet there is more peace, honesty, happiness, virtue, goodness, and integrity in this place than in the whole world besides; and I am happy that I can bear such a testimony by the spirit of truth. Those who are acquainted with me, I flatter myself, will give me credit for truthfulness.

The reports and statements, that are now going the round of the newspapers against us, are only the breathings of disappointed, wicked, unprincipled and lying persons who design to injure an honorable and industrious people. This is no place for lovers of iniquity; we have no means here to gratify the lustful desires, mean propensities, and viciated customs of christians. All is right here to those who love right, and the dishonest are soon detected, hence their corrupt systems cannot feast on good things. Some eyes can see nothing but evil, like Satan did in heaven, or like the man gazing at the sun affects to despise it because there are dark spots in it. We despise them all and regard not their vile machinations and designs.

Peace prevails here, wisdom and right equisess rule, God blesses and the devil hisses, and we will continue to prosper if we do right.

I may as well state that considering everything, I have done well since I came here, and I hope to do better; my way has opened well, and I feel in good spirits; indeed, thro' all the hard times, and change of circumstances to which every new comer is liable, I must say that sister Mills and myself never felt so happy in all our lives as we have since the moment we entered this valley: we feel we are at home.

Wishing you every prosperity and blessing commensurate to your calling, and with love to sister S., in which sister Mills, and brother and sister Chislett join,

I remain, yours truly, W. G. MILLS.

PREST. APPLEBY—Dear Brother: No doubt you would be glad to have a few lines from me, as I am one of the laborers in the vineyard of the Lord. On the 21st of April last, I left Cincinnati, Ohio, with the intention of visiting Prest. J. M. Grant's old field of labor, according to previous appointment. On my way I visited a Branch of the Church at Syracuse, Meigs county, Ohio; I found them in a state of confusion, having been visited by apostates. I called on them to repent and do their first works; over fifteen renewed their covenants. I and the teachers labored faithfully with the rest; but they claimed to follow Strang. I organized the Saints anew, placed Elder Jas. Powell in the Presidency, and sixteen were cut off from the Church. The Branch was trimmed up; and those who renewed their covenants, when I left were in a prosperous situation, and the Spirit of the Lord was with them. I visited a Branch in Minersville, in the same County, where the greater part of the brethren renewed their covenants. I organized them, and placed Elder Joseph Josephs in the Presidency. I then visited a Branch in Mason City, Mason Co., Va.: the majority of the Saints in which renewed their covenants, and some obeyed that would not before: I placed Elder William Ivens to preside over them. The Spirit of God was in their midst, and they were in a prosperous condition when I left. I arrived here the 22d of May, and have been laboring faithfully ever since, meeting with much opposition on every hand. The Lord has blessed me in my labors. The Saints in this country have been left several years without a visit from a traveling Elder, and have got considerably behind the times, and had almost lost the spirit of the work. Some had gone very near astray, and denied the faith. Mormonism seems to be very unpopular with some, and especially with those who were inspired by the devil, begin to persecute and carry around their handbills, and oppose me in my arguments. This begins to inspire new life into many of the Saints, who began to renew their covenants, and some others that believed obeyed. The Saints are becoming united with a determination to live for the sake of Truth. Mobs are striving to put a stop to my preaching, and in some places the people gather together in masses to see what will be done. I have been hindered from preaching once; the mob came to the meeting house on Sunday with tar, feathers and a rail, to give me a short ride, but they did not carry out their desire. I preached to them, and then walked away through the mob unmolested. A few days ago when crossing the hills alone, four armed men waylaid me, and tarred and feathered me a little.

This violation of the law has caused great excitement in the country, the honest and moral men of Virginia despise such a principle, and my friends have increased in great numbers. This kind of persecution helps to move on the car of Mormonism; these men that mobbed me were long-faced, sanctified Methodists; they objected to my preaching because it set the people in confusion, the greatest crime I had done was I had baptized a brother-in-law and a mother-in-law of some Methodist members. This was the reason they waylaid a stranger and violated the law of a free and republican government.

The work is prospering, and will advance faster with persecution than without it. I have organized a Branch in Burks Garden, Tazewell Co., and placed Elder Peter Litz in the Presidency; likewise a Branch at Ward's Cove, in the same county, with Elder Harvey Ward in the Presidency; and also a Branch, called Chestnut Ridge Branch, under the Presidency of Elder Absalom M. Young. These brethren are worthy of praise for their kind treatment to me. I rejoice to see the Kingdom of God moving on; and I desire your prayers, and those of all the Saints.

I subscribe myself your Brother in the Gospel, DAVID O. RIDEOUT.

Notice to Subscribers.

We frequently receive remittances for subscriptions to THE MORMON, without the sender giving the name of the place he desires the paper to be sent to. Sometimes the name of the Post Office or town is mentioned, but not the county, and as there are several towns in some States by the same name, unless the county is designated we are at a loss to know where to direct the papers ordered. We wish all communications to us to name distinctly the Post Office or town, county, and State or Territory, as then there will be no mistake.

Sunday Meetings.

THE Saints meet every Sunday for Public Worship in Philadelphia at Mitchell's Hall, 312 Fourth Street—or York Avenue, above Vine, at 10 1-2 A. M. 3 and 7 1-2 P. M.; in New York, at Brooks' Assembly Room, 381 Broome Street, at 3 and 7 P. M.

Notice.

THE Saints who desire to send means to their friends in Europe, can have the same attended to, by forwarding any sum they wish in current money, to this office, enclosing one dollar or more, in proportion to the amount sent, to defray the expenses of procuring Bills of Exchange, making remittances, foreign postage, &c., describing particularly to whom, and where they wish to have it sent; at the same time not holding myself responsible in any manner whatever unless the money reach me.

All subscriptions, donations, &c., for the support of THE MORMON, or Conference Fund (except the donations and Conference Funds raised in the Philadelphia Conference, which will be forwarded as usual through President Cannon) must be sent hereafter to my address; as also Tithing; P. E. Fund, and donations for the Temple from those who wish to contribute the same, so each person may be duly credited, and the means forwarded to Zion, and have their names entered in "The Book of the Law of the Lord."

No Power of Attorney, or other legal instrument of writing, going to Europe or elsewhere, forwarded to us for the purpose of sending to Washington in order to obtain the attestation of the Department, and the British Consul's Certificate and seal to the same, will be attended to in future, unless the means to defray the expenses and foreign postage accompanies the Instrument, as there is considerable expense attending it as well as labor. We would like to oblige all, and are willing to give our services when we have opportunity; but we cannot advance means to defray such expenses.

All communications intended for THE MORMON should be addressed—Editor of THE MORMON, New York. Otherwise direct to my address, Box No. 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. APPLEBY.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

WE believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the transgression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The four is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaitraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Évangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent, ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaitre Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaitre que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence. ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les excès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

A Card to the Saints.

AS Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

FOR THE MORMON.

Famine for the Word.

Behold the days shall come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the Lord.' Amos, viii, 11.

Thus speaks the prophet—mighty man of God,
Allow'd by high decree of heaven to hold
The key whose mystic power can loose the seal'd
Portals of the dark advent'rous future,
And from her womb, to our astonished gaze
Pluck out in embryo, the hidden things
Jehovah in His councils hath ordain'd
For after time to bring by natural birth.

Famine! O my God, 'tis a fearful thing!
To fall in company with lank hunger,
And on us feel his meager closing jaws,
While in his sallow, deep, and sunken eye
Reflected, sits the ghastly form of death,
With arms extended, waiting our embrace!
How terrible in its excess, is thirst!
All moisture from burning lips departed;
And mouth become as a glowing cavern,
Where tongue within, that once obedience paid,
Lies now apart, in painful silence wrapt,
Refusing service to its former lord,
Who, now, to death would fain indite a prayer,
To haste deliv'rance by his welcome power!
O, tormenting power of craving hunger!
O, parching and burning fever of thirst!
Keen and dreadful to mortals are thy pangs:
Strong to the pulling down of tenements
Of earthly mould, wherein, (tho' brief the space)
Our spirits have a temporal abode!
Here ends thy petty power. The spirit freed
From clay, no longer yields to thy control.

But a famine more terrible than thine,
Whose dire effects unto its subjects cling
E'en still beyond this sublunary sphere,
Awaits the haughty nations of mankind,
Who now in gross and sensual pleasures wrapt,
Have turned idolaters, and worship gold,
While they reject the hearing of God's word,
And rudely slay His servants to them sent.
"Famine for hearing the words of the Lord!"
To us, prophetic vision now portrays
The sore perplexity and sad distress
Of men and nations, in that awful day,
When mother earth convulsed with inward fires
Heaves, throbs and throes, like one by anguish torn,
And darkly, blindly reeling to and fro,
Wakes consternation in the hearts of men!
Dark gath'ring clouds in heaven's high arching dome,
Conceal from mortal gaze the handiwork
Of God's artillery, whose dreadful power
Is brought to bear on proud rebellious man!
The congealed missiles fast descend,
Sure and swift messengers of death to some—
Others blaspheme their God and ling'ring die—
And forced by circumstance to heed her call,
To retrospection yield, and straight are wrapt
In grief and floods of tears.
Their thoughts are roused,
And as by circumstance, a by-gone dream
Is sometime snatch'd from dim forgetfulness,
They trace on mem'ry's page, half remembered,
Halt forgotten, the humble form of some,
Who, although poor and by the rich despised,
Boldly proclaimed a message from their God;
The which, they said, should follow judgments dire.
On those who heeded not this heavenly call.
Fanatic—Imposter—Blasphemer! were
The bitter names upon them heaped in scorn,
By those who loved the riches of the world,
And bowed adoring at foul mammon's shrine.
Their voice is no more heard; but they, with such
As were obedient to the Gospel's call,
Are gathered to the chambers of the Lord
That are "exalted far above the hills"
Oh, gold! thou thing of naught—that wast a god!
How sunk and fallen from thy late estate!
But yesterday, thou held'st the proudest throne
Within the power of mortals to bestow—
The heart of kings, and noblemen of earth!
Now, art thou cast despised into the dust;
And gloom and melancholy like a pall
Hang brooding o'er thy sometime willing slaves!
Anon, startled by some new-born terror,
They shriek, and wildly hastening to and fro,
Cry famine! Oh, the terrors of famine!
O Lord, in mercy give us food! we die!
Not for "that bread which perisheth," they cry;
For round them most profusely is it strown!
They thirst—but not for water that doth spring
From woodland dell, or Horeb's smitten rock;
For such abundant flows beneath their feet!
The soul is famished for the word of God;
That heavenly food that feeds the "inner man"
With hope and joy that lasts eternally!
By anguish torn, they rove "from sea to sea"
And "from the north o'en to the east" they come,
In eager search for servants of their God!
"Young men and virgins" fainting by the way
Shall weep and cry aloud—but cry in vain!

BY ALEXANDER OTT.

How often do we not fancy dissonances in the music of Nature, whose solemn anthem peals upon our ear, and banish thus those thoughts which, like fairies in silent and lovely dances, weave chains of light around us and strew in our path bright flowers of hope and happiness—how often do we not misconstrue those results or effects arising from a harmonious exchange of mind and heart! Is it reasonable to find fault with the physical structure of a flower, that is breathing its lessons of praise and gratitude? Is it consistent to mis-interpret an idea that has arisen like a starbeam in the dark chambers of the mind? Do we really know what we pretend to know? and do we realize what is essential to make up the intellectual and moral vacuum in us?

The above questions are of more importance than many imagine, perhaps, and crave the serious attention of every thinker. In order to judge correctly a physical or mental performance or phenomenon, we have to examine critically its effects and causes, and so likewise the moral and intellectual value of a person has to be ascertained by a fair investigation, not only of his actions, but also of his motives, from which the former spring. A motive is the focus of an action, that is to say, as well as the rays of light have to gather in a certain point or focus to produce an image or bring an object before the eye, so have ideas, those mental radii, to be concentrated in a certain focus, in order to be productive of a phantasmal picture, which flashes upon the soul and prompts man to execute or realize the beau-ideal of his heart. For instance, a young man has made up his mind to engage in literary pursuits; the laurels which he anticipates earning in the temple of fame are inscribed in flaming characters upon his mind; in fact, that phantasmal picture of his future greatness appears to him in such vivid colors, that it assumes the form of a motive and prompts to action, to an energetic exercise of his physical and mental powers; and when in the pursuit of his lofty plans, he may often to the ordinary and superficial mind appear absurd, yes, even foolish; his intoxicating pleasures of getting on the fiery Pegasus, up the steep Parnassus, may lead him in quite a different channel; he may rush in an abyss and perish, but still his motives are commendable, no matter whether his exertions were crowned with success or not. If anything is to be blamed in the failure of such an enterprise, it is the wrong means, which did neither correspond with the motives nor with the expected ends. From the above the reader will see, that without knowing a person's motives he could not form a correct idea of his character.

The foregoing is often strikingly illustrated in the man of genius. How do the waves of high aspirations roll over his slumbering passions? how do the visions of future greatness pass over the tablets of his mind? in what beautiful colors are those scenes painted on the broad canvass of his imagination? and with what rapture does he bathe himself in the light of his future glory? Yes, these phantasmal pictures unlock the secret chambers of the soul, throw fresh incense on the altar of his heart, and arouse him to the accomplishment of his lofty plans. He sees nothing but the magnificent panorama of his creation; but alas, through how many scenes has he to pass before the mighty metamorphosis is completed? Every sigh of the gentle breeze appears to him as a tone of thrilling harmony; every sound is a soul-melting strain that moves in whispering melody over the accordion of his heart. And all these intellectual trances often lead genius either to the pinnacle of mental excellence or to destruction. Have then pity with the poor student, and remember that his motives were laudable and praiseworthy.

Shall we judge a person by his words? Oh, no; words are often but imperfect and incorrect interpreters of dispositions and human feelings. Circumstances, modesty and hypocrisy may often induce a person to disguise the secret feelings of his heart with blandishing words; even the tone in which they are uttered may be only an assumed one; the smile that accompanies them may be a forced one, and conceal a hell or the gnawing cankerworm in the inner man. Further, want of circumspection or reflection, want of experience and knowledge, may often cause a person to speak what he does not mean, and think what he cannot or does not express. How strange that man should belie himself, but still it is true; it is a rare occurrence to meet with a man who speaks as he feels and feels as he speaks.

How often is not a sharp word, a sarcasm, a satyrical remark, uttered without any meaning, only from a natural disposition, but in a wrong place and at a wrong time, the cause of strife and bloodshed among acquaintances and even friends?

Judge, then, not rashly the actions of a man, but know first his motives; open the vein of sympathy, and drop its soothing balm in the sore heart, and be assured that flowers of affection and gratitude will often spring up in a mind that was considered barren.

Correspondence from the New Settlement.

Genoa City, Monroe Co., N. T., July 1st. 1857.

Editor of The Mormon.—Dear Sir: According to the instructions of Presidents J. Taylor and E. Snow, I take up my pen (as Historian of the Nebraska Mission,) to inform you of our progress and prospects. As already published in The Mormon, through a communication from Bro. A. L. Cunningham, we left Florence for this place on the 11th day of May, and reached our destination after a tedious travel of 5 days. In consequence of the lateness of the season the feed was poor, scarcely a blade of grass a finger long was to be seen, nevertheless all arrived in safety and commenced putting in the plow. We have very little wheat; but intend to sow liberally in the Fall. Our farm lies south and south east of the city, it contains about 750 acres bounded on the south by the Beaver River, south east by the Loup Fork, north and west by a sod fence. This farm is occupied chiefly by the Florence and St. Louis companies; the Alton company are not included in the above, but are located 14 miles north, in a bend of the Beaver River, containing 100 acres. Our crops are of the most flattering character; corn, potatoes, buckwheat, and garden stuffs are looking finely, and if our corn escapes the early frosts that are peculiar to this latitude, it is the opinion of some of our best judges the yield of corn will be from 60 to 70 bushels per acre. We have our saw-mill in operation, and expect enough lumber will be got out this season to help us put up houses sufficient for our present population. We have a brick yard in full blast, and expect soon to be able from such auxiliaries as saw-mills, brick yards, and willing hands, to build a city not a whit behind any other in Nebraska. The city of Genoa is about 102 miles from Florence, contains about 400 acres, 10 acres in a block, from centre to centre of streets, 8 lots in a block, 18 rods long, 9 rods wide; the streets cross at right angles, 4 rods wide. It is laid off on a beautiful eminence near the bluffs on the north, gradually descending to the east, south, and west. As the ground is a little the highest in the centre, standing on the public square, you have a fine view to the east, some 20 miles. Looking to the south, the Loup Fork presents itself with its ever shifting sand bars, and zigzag course, spotted with Islands of Cottonwood, Box elder, Willow and some Cedar; still farther in the distance you see the bluffs rising, the dividing ridge between the Loup Fork and Great Platte Rivers. Strain your vision a little more, a dark blue line presents itself, that is the bluffs. Beyond Platte, some 30 miles off, south west, groves of timber, the Loup, Bluffs, and a sea of grass meets your eye. At every turn west, bluffs in majestic grandeur, covered with ancient ruins, telling us plainly, without any translation, that their occupants understood the arts and sciences; for we have found specimens of both copper and earthenware, being another link in the great chain of testimony of the authenticity of the Book of Mormon. I will now give you a statistical item and then leave the subject to be resumed upon our further progress. We number 97 men, 25 momen, 40 children, 42 yoke of oxen, 20 cows, 6 horses, and some two dozen chickens, 20 hogs and 2 cats, and dogs plenty.

We are expecting plenty of sport in the Fall for we are surrounded with all kinds of game. Our streams are teeming with fine fish, and hope soon to have both time and inclination to indulge.

Yours truly, Henry J. Hudson.

Mr. Douglas and Mormon Magnates at Variance.

In his Springfield speech Judge Douglas advocated the abolition of the Territorial Government of Utah upon the ground that its inhabitants are mainly "alien enemies of the United States Government." We have before us a copy of President Appleby's address at the Mormon celebration of the Fourth of July, held at Norwalk, Connecticut. President Appleby repels the accusation of Judge Douglas with great indignation. We copy a portion of his remarks:

"Our loyalty has been impugned. Here let me say what I know. I am a Latter Day Saint; have been for seventeen years. For seven years past I have resided in Utah. I have known Gov. Young for fourteen years; been with him by day and by night; and I know him to be a Patriot from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet. He loves the Constitution and the laws of the United States, and teaches all his people to do the same. We are all interested in preserving the Union. Then why this discord? I will tell you. It is politics. We don't go into politics. We ask the rights the constitution gives us—no more. Yet we are called aliens and traitors. Did we ever refuse to answer the call of our country? No; but when that gallant battalion of 500 young men, the flower of our camp, on the plains of Iowa, was summoned to fight the battles of their country against Mexico, they went. From Iowa to Santa Fe, and from there to California, they marched—done their duty nobly, and came back, having lost their all. And they would do the same again to-morrow, if required, in spite of all that has been said and done unto them, and I know it. We are the best friends of this country and its laws. And here I prophesy, to-day in the name of Israel's God, that the time will come when the Latter Day Saints will be the only people that will uphold and protect the Constitution of the United States, and be willing to defend it with their life's blood, (here a murmur of "Amen" arose from the congregation)—discord and desolation will come upon this land, and no man can stay them."

What has Judge Douglas to say to that? It looks as though President Appleby had him. Then again what answer can Judge Douglas return to the following declarations of "Brother" Macintosh, who followed President Appleby:

"Brother Macintosh, of Utah, ex-Secretary to Brigham Young, was then introduced, who spoke in behalf of the foreigners of the Mormon church. He was born in Scotland, but was now a citizen of America. He had his papers in his pocket and showed them to the gentleman from the New York Herald that morning. Nine-tenths of the foreigners in Utah are naturalized, and go through as strict a course of naturalization as any one in the States. For himself he would say that he had to stay one year in the Territory before he could get his papers, though he had declared his intentions in due form long before. But he had children in Utah (and he wished he had more of them) who claim this as their native land; but they would not be more faithful to the laws than he was. When the Mormons endorsed the laws they did not endorse corrupt administrators of the laws. The speaker thought that all our "presiding men" were cipnes, that all the evils of the country arose from our pusillanimous public men, who don't know where the next dime is to come from when they go out of office. We had some good men once. Jackson, for instance, was a good old stick. Bro. Macintosh spoke warmly in favor of the loyalty of the Mormons."

The reporter of the New York Herald had some private conversation on the same subject with President Appleby, as appears by the following:

"Mr. Appleby assured our reporter that the necessity of becoming citizens of the United States was universally enjoined on all emigrants to Utah. That neither Gov. Young nor any of the Elders desired that their people should be any other than loyal citizens of the Republic. He could testify to the naturalization of thousands, whose papers he had himself signed, as Clerk of the Supreme Court, within a few years. Mr. Macintosh stated that he was a Scotchman from Perthshire, only in the country since 1849, and produced his naturalization papers in proof of citizenship."

This is a very curious quarrel in which our Senator has involved himself. So far, the Mormons have decidedly the advantage of him; and unless he can produce satisfactory rebutting testimony, he cannot advocate the abolition of the Utah Government in the United States Senate next winter, upon the ground that most of the people of Utah are unnaturalized foreigners.—Chicago Weekly Tribune.

The Question of the Mormons.

If evidence were wanting to show the peculiar difficulties which environ the Mormon question, the speech of Senator Douglas, delivered a few days since, would supply the deficiency. In that speech, which bears evidence of mature reflection, the Senator states that the Mormons were erected into a Territory of the United States on the erroneous impression that they were citizens owing allegiance to this government; and that the natural course to take with regard to them is to repeal the Territorial Act, resume possession of the Territory in the name of the United States, and hold the Mormons liable to the laws of the United States in the nearest District Courts; namely, those of California.

The violent cutting of the Mormon knot has afforded the political opponents of Senator Douglas a plausible opportunity of charging him with renouncing his well-known doctrine of Squatter Sovereignty. And no wonder; for really it is stretching the facts rather too far to interpret them as constituting a deliberate renunciation by the Mormons of their allegiance to the United States Government—or rather, to find in them evidence that the Mormons never became or intended to become citizens, but have been always and are still alien enemies.

The facts as established on reliable evidence, will bear no such construction, justify no such assumption. For years the Mormons have undoubtedly been self-confessed and tolerably peaceful citizens. They have never pretended, nor has anyone ever charged them with owing allegiance to anyother authorities than those of their Territory and those of the United States. Until latterly, they invariably spoke of the United States Government as loyal citizens should. Brigham Young accepted a commission from the President, which he has never resigned, and under which he still holds over. Other United States officers have for years exercised their functions in the Territory without disturbance. Till the late riots, no single occurrence in the history of Salt Lake settlement can be said to have shaken the bond which united that Territory to the Union. Where, then, is the evidence of alienage? Where the ground for disfranchising these people?

This scheme of repealing Territorial Acts is open to grave objections. Suppose a new Territory, carved in any future year of grace, out of New Mexico, and organized on the basis of the Kansas and Nebraska acts; suppose that Territory peopled with slaveholders, and prepared for admission to the Union with a slave Constitution; and suppose a Congress strongly imbued with hostility to the extension of slavery; how convenient a precedent this scheme of Senator Douglas' would be for the passage of an act repealing the Territorial Act, of the new Territory, and leaving the offending slaveholders in the attitude of "alien enemies!".

If this confederacy is to last, the blessings can only be secured by unswerving adherence to the great principle of local self-government which underlies all our institutions. Once violate principle—once concede to the higher authority the right of encroaching upon the inferior, and over-stepping the fixed limits of its administrative sphere to make itself sovereign—and the tie which connects the commonwealth of this continent will be weakened and ultimately severed. Neither cities, Territories, nor States will adhere to a confederacy which costs them their independence; the most that can be expected of them is just that degree of subordination to the general authority which is compensated by the benefits of the confederation.

The Mormons, there is reason to believe, are in contumacy. They have assaulted our officials; let us hear their story before we utterly condemn them. They marry several wives; let us teach them better. It is said they are plotting sedition; let us guard against this by sending a few soldiers to keep guard at the new Governor's door. But this lately popular idea of crushing out the Mormons, and dashing furiously upon them with horse and foot, because sensation stories have been published about Brigham Young's wives, is not up to the mark of the common sense of the age. Such absurdities as polygamy in a country where the men out number the women, and the poorest can afford to marry, only need, to explode them, time and a little fresh air. As to rebellion against the United States, we suspect the bulk of the Mormon community have far too much to do to make an honest living to have time for such foolery. They are thinking a great deal more of the grasshoppers than of Uncle Sam's troops. So far as we can judge, on the facts as known at present, though the new Governor of Utah will, undoubtedly, have a hard task to perform, the ultimate difficulties of Mormonism may be surmounted by a temperate exercise of discretion and firmness, and by the effect of time, without violating any such vital principle as the inherent sovereignty of the people of each and every separate community within the United States.

[Harper's Weekly

[From the time the speech was delivered and the above was published, we presume the Senator and the publisher have both learned that "no officials have been assaulted," and the Mormons are quite as "loyal citizens" as ever they were. Instead of time "exploding" Mormonism, it manages to explode the calumnies of those who have unnecessarily meddled with it.—Editor Mornon.]

Be Gentlemen at Home.

There are few families, we imagine, anywhere, in which love is not abused as furnishing the license for impoliteness. A husband, father, or brother, will speak harsh words to those he loves best, and those who love him best, simply because the security of love and family pride keeps him from getting his head broken. It is a shame that a man will speak more impolitely, at times, to his wife or sister, than he would to any other female, except a low and vicious one. It is thus that the honest affections of a man's nature prove to be a weaker protection to a woman in the family circle than the restraints of society, and that a woman usually is indebted for the kindest politeness of life to those not belonging to her own household. Things ought not so to be. The man who, because it will not be resented, inflicts his spleen and bad temper upon those of his hearthstone, is a small coward and a very mean man. Kind words are circulating mediums between true gentlemen and ladies at home, and no polish exhibited in society can atone for the harsh language and disrespectful treatment too often indulged in by those bound together by God's own ties of blood, and the still more sacred bonds of conjugal love.—[Ex.

Counsels for the Young.

Fight hard against a hasty temper. Anger will come; but resist it stoutly. A spark may set a house on fire. A fit of passion may give you cause to mourn all the days of your life. If you have an enemy, act kindly to him, and make him your friend. You may not win him over at once, but try again. Let one kindness be followed by another, till you have accomplished your end. By little and little, great things are accomplished. Whatever you do, do it willingly. A boy that is whipped to school, never learns his lesson well. A man that is compelled to work, cares not how badly it is performed. He that pulls off his coat cheerfully, strips up his sleeves in earnest, and sings while he works, is the man for me.

Rules for Home Education.

1. From your children's earliest infancy inculcate the necessity of instant obedience.

2. Unite firmness with gentleness. Let your children always understand that you mean what you say.

3. Never promise them anything unless you are quite sure you can give them what you say.

4. If you tell a little child to do something, show him how to do it, and see that it is done.

5. Always punish your children for wilfully disobeying you, but never punish them in anger.

6. Never let them perceive that they can vex you or make you lose your self-command.

7. If they give way to petulence and ill-temper, wait till they are calm, and then gently reason with them on the impropriety of their conduct.

8. Remember that a little present punishment, when occasion arises, is much more effectual than the threatening of a greater punishment should the fault be renewed.

9. Never give your children anything because they cry for it.

10. On no account allow them to do at one time what you have forbidden, under the same circumstances, at another.

11. Teach them that the only sure and easy way to appear good is to be good.

12. Accustom them to make their little recitals with perfect truth.

13. Never allow tale-bearing.

14. Teach them self-denial, not self-indulgence of an angry and resentful spirit.

If these rules were reduced to practice—daily practice—by parents and guardians, how much misery would be prevented—how many in danger of ruin would be saved—how largely would the happiness of a thousand domestic circles be augmented! It is lamentable to see how extensive is parental neglect, and to witness the sad and dreadful consequences in the ruin of thousands.

Swiftness of the Deer.

Formidably armed as the stag is, with his brow bayonets, provided with powerful hind quarters to drive them through his antagonist, and a heart, when he is driven to extremity, to charge hound or horse, horseman or footman, his great endowment for self-preservation is his marvellous swiftness. And, certainly, the Great Artificer only could have devised and executed the wonderful machinery of bone, muscle, sinew, elastic cartilage, and springy hoof, that confers a rapidity of motion on the flying animal superior to that of many birds. The same consummate mechanism enables the stag to clear spaces and obstacles, when pressed by the hounds, which would appear quite incredible—impossible—if the instances were not most satisfactorily authenticated. Gesner relates that two stones, near Frankfort, testified the enormous leap of a hunted stag, sixty feet, and that over a loaded wagon. In the New Forest there was, and perhaps is, a spot called "The Deer Leap." The stag was shot, and, collecting all his strength in the mortal agony, cleared a space of somewhat more than eighteen yards. Those who saw this surprising feat commemorated it by setting up two posts, marking the commencement and termination of the death-bound.

Mormonism.

On the 6th of April, 1830, the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was organized. By the command of the God of Abraham, through instructions imparted by holy angels and the guidance of the Holy Ghost, the young, inexperienced and uneducated Joseph Smith, with five others, to whom the Lord had revealed Himself, met and covenanted to abide henceforth by the laws of heaven, to submit themselves in all things to the will of Jehovah, and to be guided in their lives, in all relationships with the Church and the rest of mankind, by every word that might proceed from the Father and the Son. With this small number, without parade or observation, was the kingdom of the Most High God organized among men in this generation; but, from that moment to the present, what interesting facts have been added to the world's unwritten history of the 19th century! what a work has been accomplished! The testimony of Joseph Smith has been heard by the "civilized" nations of the earth. Every State, every county, every town, and even every village, of this Union has, at some time or other, by one means and another, by friend or by foe, heard of "Mormonism." Where the Elders have been, success has crowned their labors, and the present inhabitants of Utah are, it may be said in truth, from nearly all parts of the world. Thousands and tens of thousands who, before they heard of Mormonism, wept because the heavens were as brass over their heads, now rejoice that the prayers of the faithful, humble, honest, have been heard before the throne of Divine Majesty, and the suppliants are the recipients of His Holy Spirit that leads and guides in the way of righteousness. Faithful Elders have proclaimed to rich and poor, learned and unlearned, pious and vicious, that not only was mercy extended to men, but that the hosts of Heaven were once again joined in labor with the servants of God on the earth to bring about the redemption of Israel promised to the Fathers. How much the testimony of the prophet Joseph and his brethren has been rejected, and themselves insulted, is a matter with which we have little to do presently; but two things are certain: those who have listened to them, and crucified every evil habit to which they had formerly been enslaved, are this day rejoicing in the light of heaven, and those who rejected their testimony are still in the gall of bitterness, the bonds of iniquity, enslaved by the corruptions of a wicked and perverse generation, and without hope of anything but rioting, confusion, strife, and bloodshed—such is the picture of this nation.

The nations of the old world have likewise heard the testimony of the servants of the Lord. Great Britain, the parent of our own nation, has been faithfully warned. Relying on the testimony of the Holy Ghost and the power which cometh from above, men, unlettered and unaided by human pelf, have there entered the camps of sectarianism, lifted up their voices, shaken the stronghold of venerated tradition, and released from the bonds of false piety and canting, ranting righteousness, many an honest soul. Infidel France has heard the Elders of Israel, and choice spirits from that nation now rejoice in their deliverance from the chilling gloom of sceptical theories. From the north and south of sunny Italy some praise the Lord God of Jacob for their deliverance from the superstitious bonds of Catholicism and the false freedom of bastard Christianity under the name of Protestantism. Free Switzerland—proud of the patriotic deeds of her Tells, and in whose valleys and over whose rugged hills and mountains her sons and daughters may roam unchallenged in liberty—has not withheld her portion of evidence of the mighty power of the Gospel of Jesus restored in these latter days. Free men by birth and by every association of life, nevertheless some have gladly bid adieu to the rugged snow-capped peaks of surrounding mountains, to the rich products of lovely valleys, and to endearing associations, in order to gather in Zion, and strengthen Israel. The kingdoms, empires and duchies of Europe have been trodden by the Elders of Israel, and "one of a city and two of a family" have saved themselves from the bonds of tyrants. The Indies, East and West, have heard the testimony of Truth. The frozen regions of the north have not kept back their sons and daughters: from Norway, Sweden and Denmark, thousands have flocked to the standard of Zion. From the gold fields of Australia, and in the cities around the Elders of Israel have preached and administered, and had souls as seals of their ministry. On the barren rock of Gibraltar, and on Malta too, has Mormonism been honored, and been a blessing to the sons of Adam. The islands of the Pacific and the islands from afar have given up their quota to the great work of salvation. China and Africa have had the visit of the Elders. The last bloody battle field of the first nations of Europe had its missionaries; and when the moment of rest came for the fatigued and worn-down soldier, there might be seen the Elder of Israel, full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, ministering to the sick who had faith in Jesus and his administrations. Undaunted, although hundreds fell daily in their camp, or in that of the enemy, our brethren moved along and bore testimony to the mission of the prophet Joseph. Jerusalem, the city of cities, once the city where sojourned and administered the heavenly King Jesus, has likewise been visited and blessed by an Apostle of our generation. In short, wherever "civilized" men dwell, there has the testimony of Joseph Smith been reiterated and backed up by those to whom the Lord has revealed Himself; and as the angel of the Lord told the young man Joseph, there has his name been held in reverence by the pure in heart, and there too, at the mention of his name, have the wicked foamed and raged.

The unlettered boy from the plough, the minister from the pulpit, the mechanic from his bench, the lawyer from the bar, and men of every calling and profession, between the first and the last, have been engaged in this great work, and have been the missionaries who have wandered to the ends of the earth. In their labors no human attainments have enriched Mormonism, no weakness of man has been a barrier to its progress. It has stood, stands, and shall stand throughout all time and eternity, independent of man. The most eloquent have not been the most successful missionaries; neither have the stammering tongues been the least honored. Neither eloquence or ignorance have been qualifications for preaching, nor have either hindered or advanced it; but the Lord has worked mightily with the humble, confiding heart that trusts in Him, and by this means and this only has the Gospel been preached to men of other tongues, and the testimony of the Spirit extended from people to people.

Mormonism has lived through opposition—bloody persecution at home here in these very States, that, banded together, is called the asylum of the oppressed; and abroad, its representatives have trodden a thorny and cheerless path, but it has accomplished a mighty work. It is still in its infancy, though it has spread east, west, north, and south; and whatever men may say or men may think, it has its mission, and no power can hinder it. The little stone that the prophet Daniel saw rolling from the mountain without hands, is now on mission, and roll it must, till it fills the whole earth, till every son and daughter of Adam shall be free from the bondage of sin and death—if they wish it.

We hear of apostates belching out the fire of vengeance that consumes their souls, and they are going to do mighty things—pshaw! Poor blockheads, have they not learned that "whosoever falls on that stone shall be broken, and on whomsoever it falls it shall grind them to powder." Are they dull and slow to learn? Have they never heard of Hulbert, John C. Bennett, of Rigdon, Page, Adams, and company, and a host of such worthies—who were all, individually, going to do mighty things—to stop the Mormon car? What have they done—with Lilburn W. Boggs, Tommy Ford, to help them? And what now does a poor, puny, lazy loafer in the ever-excited city of New York think to do by lies and caricatures? Aye, what can he do? Or, all combined, what can they do? Show their folly and furnish the world with another demonstration of the declaration of Heaven—TRUTH SHALL PREVAIL. Mormonism is the work of Jehovah; Christ, ancient apostles, ancient prophets, and patriarchs, work with it, and the sooner that all righteous men become convinced of this fact the better for themselves. One word of advice in parting, we give to every body who may have anything to do with it: keep your eyes clear, and don't get in its track. Better far to work with it than against it; and all men in authority had better deal gently with the Mormons, than, without cause, deprive them of their rights.

Mormon Slanders Repelled by a "Primitive Mormon."

"EDITORS COMMERCIAL: It is with surprise that I have discovered a disposition manifested by you and by many officers, for some days past, to give credence to the affidavits and protestations of some of the enemies of Brigham Young against some of the expelled Federal officers of Utah. It has been the uniform practice of B. Young and his confederates, ever since they departed from the original doctrines of Mormonism, to defame and vilify the character of every one, man or woman, that oppose them in their iniquitous course. That these officers should receive a share of their villainous abuse might have been expected. Thousands who have held on to the holy principles of primitive Mormonism, have always received the same intolerant misrepresentation and defamation at their hands. For many years they secretly taught and practiced polygamy, but publicly protested that they did not, and said that we (primitive Mormons) slandered the servants of God when we charged them with such acts. During the last four years they have acknowledged the truth of our previous allegations. In this way, and in various ways, 'they have made lies their refuge, and under falsehood have they hid themselves,' just as the prophet Isaiah foretold concerning them. After they have spent so many years in a career of heaven-daring infamy and crime, it is wonderful, indeed, that any reliance should be placed upon any of their statements, especially in this case, where the Government is preparing a scourge against them. Concerning Judge Drummond's character I know nothing, but I have seen no charges made against him but those which were produced by Salt Lake influence. His statements concerning the depravity of Utah have been generally corroborated by numerous witnesses, and his statement concerning the destruction of the records of the United States Court at Salt Lake by fire has been testified to by many persons besides Judge Drummond, and the isolated statement of the Deputy Clerk of that Court to the contrary is contemptible, even if the statement of the latter is true, for, if the records are in his possession, they might as well have been burnt as to be withheld, embezzled, or stolen by him. That murder, or the innocent shedding of blood, is taught and practiced by authority in the Salt Lake Church, is a conspicuous fact. In the Fall of 1845 I heard B. Young, in the Temple, at Nauvoo, publicly declare that they were going to a land where none should live to come back to tell tales. The 'Danite Band,' or 'Destroying Angels,' (names of their own selection,) were organised for the purpose of murdering obnoxious persons. They often threatened to make catfish bait of their opponents before they left Nauvoo, and since that time they would threaten to 'salt them down.' In a sermon lately preached by Brigham Young, and published in his own paper, the Deseret News, he told his adherents that it was their duty to sacrifice the lives of their friends who were beginning to apostatize, that they might be saved before they were wholly lost. In relation to Mrs. Babbitt, I will state that she is peculiarly situated. Mr. Babbitt left a large estate in Utah, and it may be that her friends have induced her to believe that the Danites had no agency in her husband's murder. They may have done this, knowing that she would be robbed of that property if she should undertake to denounce the instigators of the bloody deed. I am fully convinced, by the circumstantial evidence that I have had access to, that Mr. Babbitt was murdered by the agency of the Danites, whether the Indians perpetrated the act or not.

"My acquaintance with the deceased as a brother-in-law increased my facilities in forming my conclusions, and I did so months before such an opinion was made public by any one, and I told Mr. Babbitt several years since that I anticipated such a catastrophe. ISAAC SHEEN.

"Cincinnati, August 1."

We publish the foregoing in order to show what a spirit rankles in the breast of apostates and seceders from the truth; when what little light they once enjoyed becomes darkness, how great that darkness is? Judas like, they want to betray and lie about their best friends, raise excitement, and thus shed the blood of innocence directly or indirectly. Indeed, it is quite amusing to read Mr. Sheen's effusion. Who is this Mr. Sheen? Where does he hail from? Why all this acrimonious spirit, this ebullition of malignity, manifested? We will endeavor to inform our readers who this pure, holy, and immaculate Mr. Sheen is. He formerly resided in Philadelphia, Pa.; was a member of the Mormon Church—always full of enthusiasm, and wishing to set himself up to be somebody, thinking himself some great one, with the bump of self-esteem highly developed. Among other vagaries and absurdities, he conceited that he was a literal descendant of Aaron by blood, and therefore had the right and ought to be the President of the Aaronic Priesthood in the Church; and to such an extent did this insanity and other monomania carry him, that the Church was under the necessity of expelling him, which it accordingly did.

Since that time he has been like a wandering star, its lustre dimmed and darkened, hidden in the mists and fogs of superstition, carried about by every wind of doctrine, ready to lay hold of any doctrine that any expelled or apostate member from the Church would proclaim; and was willing to embrace Strangism, William Smithism, &c., so that they were all full of filth, and would rail out against the leaders of the true Church, from which he and they had been expelled—always joining in the hue and cry against the Church and its officers that would not suffer him to palm off his foolish and absurd notions of his right to the Aaronic Priesthood and of being a literal descendant of Aaron.

Mr. Sheen is not willing to believe the affidavits of the Mormons made in relation to the corruptions of the Federal officers of Utah, but the object is "to defame and vilify every man and woman opposed to to them." Mr. Sheen, have you not been believing, vilifying and traducing men and women you know nothing concerning, and who never did you an injury ever since you were expelled the Church? Do you think, Mr. Sheen, the Mormons are going to keep still and suffer you, or any other base calumniator, to abuse and lie about them, and never reply? If you do, you will certainly be mistaken. All the Mormons ask, is for the Government to make an investigation of these charges. Are those charged with the offences willing to face the music, Mr. Sheen?

He talks about "Primitive Mormonism" and "Primitive Mormons." We are well acquainted with some primitive and apostate Mormons, such as Sidney Rigdon, W. Law, Jno. E. Page, Jas. J. Strang, John C. Bennett, William Smith, &c.; and Mr. Sheen can behold one any day he will look in the glass. He says: we primitive Mormons were charged with slandering the servants of God when we charged them with such acts as polygamy. Mr. Sheen, what kind of polygamy have you reference to? primitive polygamy, we suppose, such as was got up at Cincinnati and Covington some years since; where men (?) crept under the bed, instead of getting into it. Do you understand, Mr. Sheen? Anything primitive, no doubt, Mr. Sheen likes, but modern he cannot abide.

He says he "knows nothing concerning Drummond's character." We know you don't, if you did you would not admit it, because he believes in primitive things as well as you, Mr. Sheen; if you do not believe it, ask his "Ada."

Mr. Sheen will still contend the records at Salt Lake City were burned, after all the testimony that has been given contradicting the charges; and says if the records are in his (Deputy Clerk's) possession, they might as well have been burnt as to be withheld or stolen by him. Mr. Sheen, why all these infamous charges against a man you know nothing concerning, and whose shoes you are not worthy to black. Are not the records in his possession legally and rightfully? and when the defamers of the Mormons charges them with burning said records, Mr. Bolton, the Deputy Clerk, comes out with an affidavit under his own signature and the seal of the court, testifying that the records are all safe in his possession, not one having been touched, Mr. Sheen calls it "contemptible." If anything is contemptible it is Sheen's impudence and ignorance. Mr. Bolton is our Deputy Clerk there, and when we left Utah, we delivered over the records of the court, and gave them into the possession of Mr. Bolton, together with the seal, papers, &c. Yet this immaculate (?) Mr. Sheen says the records are "embezzled or stolen" by him.

As for murder being taught or practised by the Salt Lake Church, he knows it to be a malicious and base falsehood. But murder, Danite, destroying Angels, &c., no doubt have haunted him ever since he wanted to, and could not get into Aaron's seat. No wonder catfish bait, salting down, sacrificing, &c. should so engross his mind. He being a literal descendant of Aaron, and claiming the Presidency of that Priesthood, and which holds the keys of administering in outward ordinances, offering sacrifices, &c., it is quite natural these things should be uppermost in his mind, for they belong to his (would be) Priesthood.

He will have it that Mr. Babbitt was murdered by the Danites, after all the testimony of Mrs. Babbitt, a Major Wharton, commanding at Fort Kearney, positively stating that the Cheyenne Indians murdered Mr. Babbitt, for the Indians said so, and had his watch, ring, &c.

He says Mr. Babbitt was his brother-in-law, and that he told Mr. Babbitt he anticipated such a catastrophe.

We left Utah in company with Mr. Babbitt, in April, 1856; came over the plains with him, were also at Washington some time, and left him at Jones' Hotel, Philadelphia, on the 17th day of July following. Mr. Babbitt was our personal friend, and we knew his mind and feelings well, for we had been in partnership in legal business with him for years; and he knew there was not a person among the Mormons at Salt Lake that would hurt a hair of his head. We have often heard Mr. Babbitt speak in relation to Mr. Sheen's conduct, and we know he had no confidence in him, and held his conduct in derision and contempt. Mr. Sheen, can you not prevail upon W. S. or some other "primitive Mormon" to teach you some more "primitive" Mormonism, and ordain you to the Aaronic Priesthood, as you are a literal descendant of Aaron? Have you not had a revelation to make known your illustrious genealogy?"

WASHINGTON, August 6, 1857.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs received yesterday an exceedingly interesting account of our red brethren in Utah and their farming operations. It is much doubted if Governor Young could make a report equally favorable of our white friends in the Mormon territory. I herewith send you a copy of the report:

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, June 30, 1857.

SIR—I have the satisfaction of reporting, in behalf of the Utahs and other adjacent tribes of Indians in the Territory of Utah, that no disturbances of any kind have occurred during the quarter ending at this date. This uninterrupted harmony, which has now prevailed among these tribes for more than twelve months, is justly attributable to the efforts which have been made to establish them upon suitable reservations and to introduce among them a system of agriculture, and though these reservations have been visited during the season by large bands of wild Indians who live east of the Wasatch Mountains, the influence which those farms exerted upon them through the "home tribes," has enabled us to conduct our intercourse with them in a very tranquil manner.

We have in cultivation this season, at these settlements, about 700 acres, as follows, viz: At the Spanish Fork farm, 220 acres wheat, 40 acres oats, 10 barley, 50 corn, 8 potatoes, 2 buckwheat, 4 turnips, and 2 acres of garden. At the Sanpete farm, 153 acres wheat, 10 oats, 16 corn, 8 potatoes, 8 squashes, and 8 acres beets, melons, and garden. At the Alred farm, 25 acres wheat, corn, and squashes. At the Corn Creek farm, 95 acres wheat, 50 corn, potatoes, and squashes. The crops look promising, and give every assurance of a plentiful harvest.

My disbursements being larger than I anticipated at the close of the previous quarter, I would state, by way of explanation, that it is mostly in consequence of the great influx of Indians from the eastern side of the mountains, who were in a famishing condition, and came in search of something to eat. They report that many of their children and the weaker members of their families, as also many of their horses and much of their game, had perished in consequence of the severity of the winter; and as Governor Brigham Young and Agent Armstrong were both absent, the entire burden of the service rested on myself. It also became necessary to place a substantial fence around these farms, which has incurred considerable expenditures for labor; and I would say further, that so long as the field of labor for the various officers of the Indian service in the Territory, remains in common for any or all of them to act when and where they please, it is impossible for me to estimate the amount I may have to expend in any ensuing quarter.

As I have learned that the office of Indian Superintendent has been separated from that of Governor in this Territory, and as the Superintendent has not yet reached the field of his labors, I take the liberty of addressing this communication directly to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and remain very respectfully, &c. GARLAND HURT,

Hon. J. W. DENVER, Indian Agent, Utah.
Commissioner, Washington.

Without the slightest disposition to detract from Indian Agent, Garland Hurt, any glory which the faithful discharge of the duties of his agency may throw around his name, we think it but fair to supply an item or two which would make the report a little more complete. His Excellency, Governor Young, as Superintendent of Indian Affairs for the Territory has pursued a different policy with the Indians than that adopted by other Governors and other Superintendents, while others have fought refractory Indians he has fed the Utahs, and instead of dabbling in trade with them, and coming off with a big pile of bullion, a la Benton he has taught them that honesty was a cardinal virtue—an absolute necessity to success, and to labor with their own hands a greater honor than the gay plumage on the head of their bravest chief. To accomplish the good now reported, the Mormons, under the direction of His Excellency, have labored at great risk and expense, without remuneration, and to them we the think the honor is justly due. Of course, Indian Agent Hurt, has been amongst them, was paid by government for what he did; but the labor bestowed on the Indians in bringing them to their present position was performed before he saw them, and he had nothing to do with it. We should not have noticed this, as there is no claim put forth by Mr. Hurt, but the clearly intended absence of all allusion to those who did so might lead to a false conclusion. If Mr. Hurt had not been in such a hurry to correspond with the Commissioner, and had only waited till he was officially notified of his duty to do so, perhaps he would have found time to have remembered what he will probably be grateful to us for supplying.

Flying from Utah.

We rarely take up a paper that speaks of Utah without being told that seceders from Mormonism who leave that Territory for the States do so with great difficulty and at the imminent peril of their lives. We do not expect that our denial of all grounds of apprehension will meet with as wide a circulation as the charge—in fact we are so accustomed to be calumniated, and see so seldom the least evidence on the part of the conductors of the public press to do us justice by publishing our replies to the hosts against us, that we have long since concluded ours is a lying generation. The people, evidently, take so much pleasure in reading of the horrible and extravagant that the professional quill driver speculates quite as much on what he can the most profitably produce to nourish the vitiated and depraved tastes of his customers, and for which he shall receive the best remuneration, as does the fancy dry goods merchant in his selections, to please the tastes, fancy and whims of the fair sex, with everything in his line from a sky-blue-scarlet to a dandering grey. It would be time badly spent and space in our paper as ill-occupied to hunt up and publish what everybody has said who has come from Utah this season; but it is worthy of remark that all the people who were afraid of being killed were neither killed nor molested! We confess we are astonished at the shallow pates of many of our cotemporaries, they seem to be too dull to perceive the contradiction of their statement about the almost impossibility of leaving Utah but by flight, and their recording the arrival of scores and hundreds by slow ox teams. There is doubtless fear in the bosoms of many. Some nervous folks will sit by the fire-side in a long winter's eve, listening to tales of ghosts and hobgoblins, till they are almost riveted to their seats with fright and for their soul's salvation would not go through their own familiar homestead without a light to convince them that all the murdered, poisoned, and hanged of ten generations were not dancing in their bedrooms. If they be so very fortunate as to get into the sheets without fainting and an hour afterwards dare to save themselves from suffocation by uncovering their frenzied brains, they may see poor harmless pussy, half dozing in a corner, and she suddenly is transmogrified into Auld Sootie, trying to seduce them by cunning winks and nods of friendship—daylight, however, dissipates the reign of terror. Editors in the States have published so much about "Danites," and "Destroying Angels" cutting off seceders on the Plains that many a person in Utah has doubtless dreamt of troops of Danites or Destroying Angels buckling on their swords, dreadful revolvers and the still reeking knife that had despatched some unfortunate, and nothing, we presume, but their safe arrival on the Frontiers has convinced them that these dreadful folks and dreadful instruments only had existence in their weak and frenzied brains.

But who are these "flying from Utah?" Are they so much purer, so much more virtuous, so much more honest than the Utonians whom they have left in the mountains, that they have hastened from their society to mingle with a better people and to breathe a more heavenly atmosphere—something more congenial and consonant with their refined tastes and high moral qualities? We certainly cannot answer for all who have hastily tripped back to the States recently; but we do know that the Reformation catechism of last winter made many dance about, and make preparations for departure, without the assistance of either music, Danites, or Destroying Angels. That catechism was published in THE MORMON in the beginning of the year—as it was then in circulation among our cotemporaries—rather a little ahead of the departure of the discontented. Now that they have arrived in the States, and insinuate that the folks left in Utah were unworthy of their society, we think the present an opportune moment to re-publish it—that "axe laid at the root of the tree" made the chips fly! "Read slowly, think deeply, and act wisely" all who read the following Utah catechism:

"Have you committed murder, by shedding innocent blood or consenting thereto?
Have you betrayed your brother or sister in anything?
Have you committed adultery by having any connection with a woman that was not your wife (or man that was not your husband?)
Have you cut hay where you have no right to, or turned animals into another person's fields without his consent?
Have you lied about or maliciously misrepresented any person?
Have you borne false witness against your neighbor?
Have you taken the name of the Deity in vain?
Have you coveted anything not your own?
Have you been intoxicated with strong drinks?
Have you found lost property, and not returned it to the owner or used all diligence to do so?
Have you fulfilled your promises in paying your debts, or run into debt without the intention of paying the same?
Do you pay your tithing promptly?
Do you teach your family the gospel of salvation?
Do you speak against your superiors in the Church or against any principle taught in the Book of Mormon, Book of Doctrines and Covenants, or against the revelations given through Joseph Smith the Prophet and the Presidency of the Church as now organized?
Do you pray in your family, night and morning, and attend to secret prayer?
Do you labor six days, and rest or go to work on the Sabbath?
Do you and your family attend the ward meetings?
Do you preside over your household as a servant of God? and is your family subject to you?
Have you labored diligently and earned faithfully the wages paid you by your employers?
Do you oppress the hireling in his wages?

We should think that after reading the foregoing, every one will understand why at least many left Utah, and that will be particularly understood when it is known the penalties of ancient Israel in restoring four-fold were exacted in Utah from the unfortunate transgressor. For the present enough.

To Our Canada Subscribers.

We are frequently receiving letters from Canada, containing one and two dollars, requesting THE MORMON to be forwarded them for six or twelve months. Our terms of subscription are one dollar for six months, or two dollars for one year, in the States; subscribers paying the postage at their destination. But with those sent to Canada it is different, because the postage (one cent stamp) must be prepaid when the paper is mailed here, which makes fifty-two cents per year: thus actually reducing the subscription for twelve months to one dollar and forty-eight cents, or for six months to seventy-four cents.

Our Canada subscribers will therefore please hereafter to remit to us the postage along with their subscriptions.

Arrivals.

Elder Wm. H. Smith arrived here on Saturday last, en route for Canada. For the last few weeks he has been a little indisposed, but with the kindly nursing of his brother's family, where he had been visiting, he comes on recruited and ready for another stage of his journey.

Elder Martin Littlewood arrived on Monday, en route for South Africa. Bro. L. has been out in Caseyville, St. Clare, Co., Ill., since his arrival in the States. To help him on his journey, he buckled to and built an "outsider" a brick house, and did some considerable preaching, for which the Saints showed their gratitude, by presenting him with a suit of clothes the morning he left them.

The Philadelphia Pic Nic.

We had not the pleasure of meeting with the Philadelphia Saints at the party to which they had courteously invited us; but from our knowledge of President Cannon's management of everything he puts his hand to, we anticipated they would have a good time. Elder Snedaker has sent us on a report of their proceedings and the sentiments expressed on the occasion which justifies our conclusions. It arrived too late for this week's issue, but will appear in our next. Secretaries every where: be early at work—reports spoil with keeping.

Boston.

We have this week received a very interesting letter from Elder Cleary, who is presiding in Boston and adjacent towns. He reports the work of the Lord spreading out well. He has taken a new hall in the city, which is well attended, and considerable interest is manifesting itself all round. We are much pleased with the labors of Elder C. and are pleased to learn that himself and Bro. Mackintosh are going at the wheel, shoulder to shoulder.

Appointments.

Elders JOHN N. WAKELY, William Carter, William H. Lee, William H. Smith, William F. Bull, and Richard Hill are hereby appointed to travel and preach the Gospel in the Canadas. All the Elders on missions there will counsel and correspond together as often as necessary for the good of the cause, and the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God. They will act under the direction of the Presidency at New York, and report their labors from time to time.

All these brethren and those heretofore appointed on missions there, will labor, according to their appointments, until further orders, in preaching the Gospel, baptising those who believe, organizing Churches, hunting up the lost sheep, building up the Saints, comforting the hearts of all those who wish to do right, and counselling them in relation to their duties, gathering to Zion, &c. Always endeavoring to preach wherever a place may be open, and to labor in new places as much as possible.

They will also act as agents for THE MORMON, obtain all the subscriptions, donations, &c. they can, and remit the same to us at New York.

W. I. APPLEBY, President, &c.

Notice to Subscribers.

As the Six-Months' subscription to the Third Volume of THE MORMON will expire with this number, we hereby notify all whose subscriptions terminates with the twenty-sixth number, and who wish their subscriptions renewed, will please forward the same to us, as all papers will be discontinued, as the subscription expires, unless renewed.

It behooves us necessarily to adopt the foregoing rule in order to continue the publication of the paper.

DOMESTIC SUMMARY.

The Cunningham case is the first subject before the New Yorkers, and, judging from the full reports which appear in other papers, seems to have a large share of attention throughout the country. Mr. Davison, (the Police Justice, before whom the whole affair has been laid,) made out a full commitment of the lady on Monday. Believing that she had feloniously and fraudulently produced an infant, falsely pretending it to be the child of Dr. Burdell, he ordered her to the care of the keeper of the City Prison, and refused bail for her appearance in due time.

Another subject is before the Gothamites, and though there is neither love or murder in it, it furnishes fair to keep up the fear of excitement for which the city is eminently proverbial. The City of New York presented Gen. Jackson with a gold snuff box—token of high respect—"Old Hickory," before his death, bequeathed it to whoever, among the New Yorkers, should turn up to be the bravest defender of his country. The Corporation of the city appointed a committee to find out the brave and give him the box. They have examined for weeks the claims of many a hero, and when every cautious person thought they were in an awful maze, they fix on the crooked stick. His companions in arms, on the plains of Mexico, have come out stoutly against the decision of the committee, and are making as much noise as bees in a tar tub, and just as likely to do anything useful by their discordant music.

The inhabitants of Leavenworth City, (Kansas,) have been honoring Judge Lynch. A band of robbers and murderers had been discovered as they had just finished robbing and murdering a person recently arrived in that city. The citizens were so enraged, that, in spite of the Territorial Marshal and the appeal of Judge Lecompte, they suspended two of the gang to the limb of a tree, others are in custody. The young man who was first apprehended, and through whose confession the others were discovered, was attached to a train of United States horses destined for the Utah expedition. Many persons who have mysteriously disappeared, and for which political animosity had to bear the blame, are now supposed to have fallen victims to the cupidity of this hateful band of cut-throats.

Elihu Burritt is at work for a "National Emancipation Convention." The friends of the movement, North and South, are invited to meet in National Convention in the City of Cleveland, Ohio, on the 25th, 26th, and 27th inst.

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

The English and Chinese fleets have had two severe engagements in the Canton river. The English report the loss on their side, 83 men killed and wounded. The Chinese have greatly improved in fighting, and faced John Bull's music bravely; but could not save their fleet; it is reported totally destroyed.

The mutiny in India still causes great alarm in England. The latest news is gloomier than the first. Delhi is still in the hands of the insurgents. The English besieging army around the city has repulsed several sorties with considerable losses to the "insurgents." The General commanding is waiting for reinforcements before making the attack. The British Parliament has expressed to her Majesty their determination to support her ministers in their efforts to suppress the insurrection.

Baron Rothschild has again been returned, without opposition, a member for the city of London. The Commons expect to slide the Baron over the difficulty of taking the oath "on the faith of a Christian," by administering to him an oath binding on his conscience.

All the vessels comprising the expedition for laying the Atlantic Telegraphic Cable had arrived at Cork. The operation was expected to commence about the 1st inst. The paying-out experiments between Dover and Queenstown had been perfectly successful. The projectors of this line of Telegraph were in high glee.

General Horace S. Eldredge.

We have had a very pleasant visit from the General. He came in upon us on Monday forenoon from Washington, and left on Tuesday evening for St. Louis. He was in excellent health, looked as well as ever we saw him. Bro. Eldridge has, since his return from Utah, been so occupied with numerous duties, connected with emigration and the St. Louis Stake, over which he presides, that he has thought himself excused from furnishing us with a few dashes from his pen now and again; but we anticipate that THE MORMON in future will be enriched by his correspondence from the West.

THE MORMON!

Overland Mail to Utah Discontinued.

From a reliable source, we learn, that the mail from the Missouri River, overland to Utah has been discontinued, by service of notice upon the agents of the contractor, that the mail would no longer be delivered to them.

The nominal or assigned reason for this step is, that the contractor should have commenced services last fall, when, in fact, he only received notice that his bid was accepted through the first spring mail! The contractor, then, through his agents, hastened to make stations, and distribute grain and animals all along the route, making an average expenditure of over a hundred thousand dollars, bringing in several mails and returning with others westward. The last trip was made in far less time than any previously, being less than 15 days through.

It does seem astonishing how the Post Master General should have so little regard for these extensive outlays that have been made in good faith by the contractor, or how can he reconcile with the broad principles of justice, the cutting off from all communication with the rest of the world, the inhabitants of a well-peopled Territory, good, bad, and indifferent, because, forsooth, a "thousand-tongued rumor," says a few of the citizens, do not reverence the laws.

Is this just and liberal policy, such as should mark the action of the most wise, intelligent and liberal government upon the earth? or does it not rather seem the arbitrary act of a petty monarch to gratify caprice, spleen, or some feelings of revenge.

If this is the way Utah is to become converted, and Christianized, the parties concerned should serve notice upon all comers to keep their distance a few thousand years yet.

[Crescent City Oracle, July 31.

[We have learned that the excuse at Washington for taking the contract from Mr. Kimble is simply "the commission of Postmaster at Great Salt Lake City had been sent from the Administration to some one residing at that city, and it never arrived." We have already said and say it again that it is ridiculous to hold the mail contractor responsible for any letter which is sent on his route. The contractor has nothing to do but carry the locked up bags from the place he receives them to their destination for which he contracts. Again, the mails through which that commission was sent, were not carried by Mr. Kimble or any Mormon; but their bitter enemy Magraw. How, then, should the Postmaster General blame Mr. Kimble or injure him and those associated with him?

Suppose fifty letters had never reached parties in Great Salt Lake City, that number is nothing compared with the number that we have failed to receive, and ten times more that number have failed to reach His Excellency Brigham Young, and the other leading men in Utah. One or two letters fail to be received by outsiders, must the absence of these letters be charged to the Mormons when they have passed through the hands of numerous other parties before they reached Mormondom?

And suppose that it could be proven to a demonstration that the missing Commission had really been abstracted by Mormon hands—which we defy the Post Master General to prove, for we know it is false, is that a justifiable reason for keeping 100,000 inhabitants of that Territory without their letters month after month? It is usage to which no people but the Mormons would submit, and a course which, if pursued by the Post Master General towards the inhabitants of any other Territory, would bring the Press upon him without mercy. But, after all, it is only the Mormons. If President James Buchanan and his Cabinet purpose insulting the Mormons, they are very successful in their policy. But, hold on, the game is not played out—there are other acts—they laugh the best, who laugh the last.

With these passing remarks we beg to inform our friends that no mail for Utah has left Independence since the 1st of June, and we don't know if another is to be sent again:—when we learn of that important fact, we shall record it.—Ed.]

Important from the Plains.

Reported Murder of the Surveying Parties.

The Kansas City Enterprise, of August 1st, says: Letters were received at Lecompton on the 25th ult., which state that the Cheyenne or Sioux Indians, or both, have attacked several of the United States surveying parties in the south-west portion of Nebraska, and had murdered a number of men. The report is that five of Captain Caldwell's, four of Captain Berry's, and all of Colonel Manner's party, including the latter, had been murdered. We have been unable to learn the particulars. It is the opinion of those who are the best acquainted with the country in which the parties were, and the region of country traversed by the various tribes of Indians, that if these massacres have occurred, they were committed by the Pawnees, and charged on the others to escape punishment. This, also, is the opinion of the Surveyor General, now in our city, who states that the lands upon which the surveyors were at work have been claimed by the Pawnees, and that they have ever manifested the greatest displeasure at their survey by the government companies.

[Reports from the West must always be received with some grains of allowance. It may not be generally known; but it is not the less true that the geater number of reports about Indian hostilities, troubles here and there are put in circulation for the innocent amusement of bleeding Uncle Sam's money chest.—Editor Mormon.]

Wood's Meeting.

There will be a three days Wood's Meeting of the Church of Latter Day Saints held on the lands of Moses Ivins, Esq., near Hornerstown, Cream Ridge, Monmouth County, New Jersey, commencing on Friday, August 28, and continue over the following Sabbath.

The brethren composing the "Brass Band," under their leader, Elder Eardley, from Trenton, N. J., will be present on the occasion, and entertain the audience with some of their favorite sacred airs.

Presidents of Conferences, Presidents of Branches, Travelling Elders, and lay members of the Church, adjacent, that can make it convenient, as well as the public in general, are respectfully invited to attend.

R. D. Tressider,
President of Hornerstown Branch, &c.

Departure.

Elders Wm. H. Lee and Wm. H. Smith, left on Wednesday for Canada.

Correspondence of Elder A. M. Musser.

On the Plains, 5 days from Florence, July 16th, 1857.

Presr. Appleby—Dear Sir: I now beg to submit for the satisfaction of your readers a brief statement concerning the emigration of 1857. Captain William Walker's company was the first that left Florence for the mountains. I succeeded in organizing it on the 13th ult., while encamped on the Little Papeau. It numbered 86 souls, 28 wagons, 15 horses, 3 mules, 141 head of oxen, 26 cows, 19 loose cattle, and 1 handcart. Before they left, about 27 of the emigrants were baptized—a number for the first time. Among the candidates for this ordinance appeared the venerable Thos. B. Marsh, once President of the Twelve Apostles. He received this holy rite in all humility, and is now on his way to Zion, rejoicing in the salvation of the Lord.

On the evening of the 13th ult. the first company of hand-carts, under the supervision of Elder Israel Evans, made its appearance on the opposite bank of the muddy Missouri; they were detained several days in Florence on account of incessant rains, which swelled the small streams to an impassable depth. This company numbers 149 souls, (80 of whom are females—21 under eight and 2 over sixty years old, the eldest a female, sixty-eight years old,) 28 hand-carts, and an excellent four-mule team. We furnished them with a good outfit, and they left Florence on the 19th inst., feeling well and in high spirits. Before getting under way the next morning from the Little Papeau, Bros. Taylor and Snow came up and gave them many words of encouragement, and blessed them in the name of our mutual Redeemer.

The week following the departure of this company, Capts. Jesse B. Martin's and Jacob Hoffein's companies arrived; the former consisted of 192 souls, 34 wagons, 130 oxen, 7 cows, and 1 horse; the latter, after being augmented by accessions from St. Louis, numbered 204 souls, 41 wagons, 170 oxen, 17 cows, and 4 horses. These two companies left a few days after their arrival.

The Danish team company, under the direction of Capt. M. Cowley, arrived on the 2d inst., and left on the 6th; it numbered 198 souls, 31 wagons, 122 oxen, and 28 cows.

On the 3d inst., the Danish hand-cart company arrived, under the supervision of Elder J. P. Park, and other Valley brethren. This company numbered about 330 souls, 68 hand-carts, 3 wagons, and 10 mules. Capt. Christian Christianson, a Dane from the Valley, was deputed to conduct them to Utah; they left on the 7th inst., in good spirits.

On the 8th inst., the freight train, under the guidance of Elder W. G. Young, came in with several accessions at Florence. This company numbers 55 souls, 19 wagons, 83 oxen, 4 cows, and 1 mule. I have the honor to be numbered with this train. On the 12th inst. we left Florence, and are now five days from that place. Our company is the last one on the Plains. We have a thorough organization; Bro. J. A. Little, president; W. G. Young, captain; Henry Lunt, chaplain; Albert P. Tyler, sergeant of the guard; and your humble servant, clerk and historian. Besides these brethren from the Valley, we have Bros. P. H. Young, James Case, and G. W. Thurston, with us. Sister Nancy Kent, Prest. Brigham Young's eldest sister, is accompanying us to Zion; she is 71 years old.

By recapitulating, we find that there are now on the plains 1214 souls, 157 wagons, 646 oxen, 20 horses, 18 mules, 75 cows, 19 loose cattle, and 97 hand-carts; add to these the isolated emigrants in company with Bro. Taylor and others, and you will have the sum-total of our this year's emigration; which, I believe, have been as well fitted out, and are under as prosperous circumstances, as our emigrants have been in any preceding year. Our united desire is to see all things pertaining to the emigration brought to a successful conclusion, and satisfactory to all parties concerned. May the Lord assist us all in bringing about these results, is my prayer. Amen.

Now Bro. Appleby, I am going to write you about something else. Five years have nearly elapsed since I bade you adieu in our own mountain home beyond the craggy ridge which divides the waters that flow into the great Atlantic from those emptying themselves into the noble Pacific. How many changes have taken place with Gentiles and Jews since then! How many myriads of human beings have at the bidding of the Great Author of our existence, come into and departed from this world of sorrow, pain, and degeneracy! How varied have been our own individual circumstances, situations, callings and duties. While I have been circumscribing the earth, twice in distance and once in reality—preaching to Asiatics, Anglicans, Welsh, Irish, Scotch, &c., forming a religious medley of Hindoos, Pagans, Mahomedans, Parsees, Jews, Gentiles, and a heterogenious mass of discordant elements under the appellation of protestants, your time has been occupied very differently.

Permit me to congratulate you on your ascension to the editorial chair of the ever welcome Mormon. May you be highly successful as your worthy predecessor has been, in closing the mouths of those dispicable members of the fourth estate whose tales and editorial caterings are innundating the country, and exciting their greedy readers against an inoffensive and strictly virtuous people. If Editors exercised the sense, wisdom, honesty, and discrimination of ordinary capaciated donkeys, they would cease their incessant braying and publish the truth concerning the Utonians. When about to indite a chapter on Mormonism, I fancy I can see them with goose quill in hand seated in ghostly disbabille, in their opaque editorial chamber, emulating the example of the fellow who

"Gnawed his pen, then dashed it to the ground,
Sinking from thought to thought a vast profound!
Plunged for his sense, but found no bottom there,
Yet wrote and floundered on in mere despair."

You have also the influence of a horde of sulphuric shepherds—keepers of the public consciences to deal with. Like the former, they crawl between Heaven and earth (backwards like the crab) apparently for no other purpose but to create dissension and confusion setting every man against his neighbor. This is to every reflective mind the obvious tendency of their doings.

Poor fools they little think they are taking the night train for Paradise, and that they will have to render an account of their stewardship.

I regret I did not find you in New York during my brief visit a few weeks since. I desired much to see you, and congratulated myself with the idea of accompanying you across the plains.

I have been so busy since my arrival in America that I have not had time to visit but one of my relatives. After settling up the business pertaining to the emigration in Boston, I took the express train for Iowa city. A few days after my arrival in Iowa, I was deputed to accompany Bro. J. A. Little to St. Louis, where we bought supplies for the two first companies of emigrants; I accompanied them up the river to Florence. We had on board about 150 lady and gentlemen cabin passengers; amongst whom were two Reverends and a theological student or graduate from the city of Gotham. Prior to quitting St. Louis, I was introduced to the Captain and Clerk of the Edinburgh as a missionary of the Mormon faith from the East Indies. This brought me into note, and to satisfy a flatulent curiosity I was obliged to preach to them on Sabbath evening, and on the evening following deliver a lecture on the manners and customs of the Orientals of Hindoostan. Of course the knowing could not remain silent. The two following nights were occupied in delivering rejoinders. In turn, to consumnate the affair, after repeated solicitations, in a discourse which occupied over two hours, I answered all the objections of my opponents to the satisfaction of all of my hearers, every one of whom, after I concluded my remarks, tendered me a voluntary expression of their thanks.

Enough—I must conclude, as my advantages for writing are very meagre. A crammed portfolio for a desk, an inverted wash-tub for a seat, and surrounded by a parcel of loquacious emigrants discussing the success and other matters of the day, while their hands are employed in performing the varied paraphernalia of a camp life.

With kind regards to your able assistants, Bros. Stenhouse and Dulin, and with fervent prayers for your prosperity,

I remain, my dear Bro. Appleby,
Your friend and well wisher,
Amos M. Musser.

P. S.—It is reported and believed that the Government has wrested from the conductors the July mail while they were endeavoring to effect its transit to Utah.

It may be pleasing for you to learn that the family of Martin Harris (one of the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon) is in Pottawattamie, and purpose migrating to Zion next spring.

Saturday, 18th—We have this day travelled about 10 miles and camped on the Platte within half a day's drive of our Beaver river settlement. A meeting has been called and the propriety of all being re-baptized was suggested, carried and immediately attended to. We had a good time and purpose going up to the mountains as immaculate before the Lord as our gross natures will permit.

Correspondence of Elder Mackintosh.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 10, 1857.

Dear Brother Appleby: Since my arrival in this part of the Vineyard, I have been pretty busily engaged in visiting the Saints in and around this city, and strangers also in connection with Bro. James F. Cleary, and also preaching wherever an opening occurs. Upon my arrival in Boston, I was received very kindly by Bro. Cleary and the Saints, and I can say truly, that the Lord has blessed me so far on this mission. I am happy to inform you also, that the Saints here in connection with their worthy President and Council, so far as my knowledge extends, are living their religion, and preparing to make their exit for the peaceful Valleys of Ephraim next spring; but about those matters I presume Bro. C. keeps you posted; and, as he is writing to you this morning, I will confine myself more particularly to personal matters. However, I may say, that in the Boston Branch, there are more or less baptized each week, sometimes old members renewing their covenants, and at other times new members are being added: last week a very promising young man, (a Finlander,) embraced the Gospel and was confirmed yesterday, in the presence of a hall full of Saints and strangers.

The meetings now are held in Cochituate Hall, at the head of School Street, and the change, or something else, (perhaps advertising now and then,) has caused quite an influx of strangers, but to tell the real convictions of my judgment, I am impressed that the Spirit of the Lord is working with the people, and that they want to hear, being told of its influence. Boston, at present, seems to be entirely free from a great deal of the anarchy which infects other sections of this Great Republic, and as respects commercial interest, is in a state of stagnation, and the people outside the Church in general, seem to partake of the same stagnate influence, yet, we believe, a number of good honest souls are in Boston who will yet embrace the Gospel when awakened from their sleepy condition; and it is even so with the adjacent towns and villages.

I had the privilege of preaching twice on Sunday, 2d inst. to the inhabitants of Salem, who turned out a greater number by far than I anticipated, of a class the world would call "very respectable," and to their credit, be it stated, acted fully worthy of the acceptation of the term in every sense.

There are but 8 Saints in Salem, including Marblehead: but Bro. Thomas Brewston, an Elder, was sent from Boston; sometime since, by Bro. Cleary, to take charge of meetings, &c., and he is making his way among the people there, and, in the meantime, comforting, building up, and keeping the Saints together; he is a good young man, and will, in his time, be a blessing to the people in that region. Several from Salem have been to Boston, and heard Bro. Cleary preach, and I may say, are on the eve of being baptized; and from the impressions I had when there I am led to believe quite a number in Salem will embrace the Gospel, apostate influence, which is rife there, to the contrary notwithstanding.

Bro. Brereton, sustained by the brethren and sisters there hired the Sewell street Church for the Sunday before stated, placarded the city, and during my address in the evening especially, I can say, that I never enjoyed more freedom in any place, to give you an idea of the attention given by the audience you could hear the drop of a pin on the floor the whole evening; after both discourses several questions were respectfully asked which were answered, but to make a long story short, I can truly say, that the prospects for openings for the preaching of the Gospel in the State of Mass., at present is rather flattering; how long this feeling may last is not for me to say. We embrace the opportunity of to-day, and let to-morrow unfold its own good or evil.

At both meetings I gave notice of the publication of The Mormon according to your request, and one gentleman proffered to subscribe six months, but had not the money then, said that he would hand the means and address to Bro. Brereton.

You must forgive me for not writing sooner, but you may rest assured that it is not of my negligence, but owing entirely to other circumstances as previously stated.

I hope your health is improving, and will continue so, to enable you to be a faithful watchman on the walls of Zion, together with those associated with you in the presidency of the church in the Eastern States.

Please give my warmest respects to Bros. Stenhouse, Dulin, Ott, Miles and his counsel, and all others by name with whom I have been acquainted, in and around the city, not forgetting Bro. Young, of Westport, Conn., and his good family, and accept the same yourself.

Ever desirous for the promotion of the work of the last days, I remain your fellow laborer in the Gospel of Christ.

Daniel Mackintosh.

Correspondence from Canada.

St. Catharine, C. W., Aug. 15, 1857.

W. I. Appleby—Dear Brother: Having succeeded in obtaining a subscriber for "The Mormon," I enclose you two dollars, as the amount of a year's subscription. A copy of the paper you will please forward to the following address. ——

This I hope may prove but as a drop before a shower, being well convinced that in proportion to the circulation of that valuable paper among honest and enquiring minds, darkness and misconception will give way to a knowledge of those principles that can exalt and happify the human family. I had not the least idea before I left the home of the Saints that such profound ignorance of the Scriptures existed among all classes of society who compose the religious world. I verily believe that their way is becoming more and more hedged up, so that they cannot see either beauty or comeliness in the plan of salvation; though so simple and beautifully laid down in the scriptures, they pretend to revere that a wayfaring man though a fool need not err therein. I arrived here yesterday, and walking down one of the main streets, I espied a tailor at work in his shop, and after passing by, I felt impressed to return and call in without knowing any particular question to ask him; but when I got in, I enquired if he knew of any people called Mormons in or around this neighborhood. He said no, but he had a brother to whom he was very much attached who was one, and living in Salt Lake City, by the name of Thomas Broderick. I did not know him; but found the one I was talking to very unsettled in his mind on the subject of religion. He had kept aloof from the sects for some time, realizing there was a lack in their midst that he could not understand nor explain; but sufficient to render him very unhappy to be associated with as a member. After a conversation of some two hours, he desired me to stay with him a short time. I accordingly went to his house, had supper, preached the Gospel to him and his wife, and slept there. I pray God, my heavenly Father, that they may both soon participate in the blessings of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which can only be enjoyed by those who yield an implicit obedience to the principles of the same. I am here still, and, from the kind and benevolent spirit they manifest, may possibly remain for some days. With the view of giving publicity to my mission and whereabouts, I thought it would not be amiss to put a piece in one of the papers here, if they would publish it verbatim. I therefore called on the editor of the Journal, told him I had just arrived from Salt Lake City, had lived there near five years, and was one of 68 that had crosped the plains by hand-carts, and that if he thought a few items connected with our travels, &c., would be interesting to his readers, I would furnish him with some particulars. He said that as so much excitement had existed of late about Utah, he should be very happy to publish any communication I would furnish him with, or a continuation of them.

Thinking this method a good one to reach any scattered Saints that may be living around this neighborhood, or causing honest inquirers, to know where to apply, to obtain a correct knowledge of the principles we believe in as a people, I thought of writing something this morning that will constitute a good and cheap advertisement. Praying that I may constantly be inspired by the spirit and power of God, to use my tongue and my pen in spreading forth the principles of truth and righteousness upon the face of the earth, that the inhabitants thereof may be well and faithfully warned wherever my lot may be cast, during my mission in this country, especially, and that myself, in connection with my brethren, may accomplish a mighty work here, is my fervent desire and prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

Wishing you and those associated with you, all the success in your extensive labors, that your own hearts desire, in building up the Kingdom of God in that region of country, I remain your fellow laborer in the Gospel. George Goddard.

FOR THE MORMON.

Love.

——Love.
What with thee, can Earth compare,
Thou of all passions, art the fairest of the fair.

Love is the greatest attribute of man, the main stay of man's existence, was it not for the existence of this providential gift how awful would be the state of society. The streets and avenues of our cities would ere this have been drenched in the blood of its inhabitants, and man would possess a nature inferior to the brute creation. If we look at the Lion, how terrible his exterior organization, but within, he has a something that makes him an object of admiration to all who rightly understand the true nature of this noble animal. He, over all other beasts of the forest, possesses the greatest propensity to love. When we look at domestic animals, we see this disposition prominently displayed. With what expression of love and attachment does the dog receive his master, after an absence of a few days. And the same may be said of the Horse and so down to that old fireside companion the Cat. If these animals had been created without the attribute of love, their presence would be dreaded, but now looked upon with pleasure and admiration. We see on the other hand, that where men have been brought up in ignorance, and have associated freely with beings (we cannot call them men) of a low character, they more or less become contaminated with evil influences and practices and lose that feeling of love and esteem towards their fellow beings, that they otherwise would have had, providing they had cultivated those attributes aright, which have been given to man for his own personal good and the happiness and well being of mankind at large. Thus we see, that when a man gives way to drunkenness and drowns his senses in alcoholic effluvias his animal nature is as it were disorganized for a time, his blood becomes over heated, his brain swims, he loses the use of those superior passions, and is ready, upon the least provocation, to imbue his hands in the blood of his victim, and thus it is that we hear of so many tragic deeds being enacted from day to day. There is nothing that will tend to promote happiness, Socially, Politically, Religiously, and Domestically, so much as man striving with unabated perseverance to create within himself a river of love, that the streams may flow unruffled through the various ramifications of his nature, and diffuse its genial influences into the hearts of those that he may associate with from time to time: that they seeing the good effects of the cultivation of this gift, may be induced to follow the example. What a vast difference there is between the home of Misery and the home of Happiness—and what is the cause of this difference! It is because love is not engraven upon the hearts of the occupants of that home. Take for instance the drunkard and the gambler: the wife knows not the love of her husband, for a kind word or deed she receives a torrent of abuse; the children know not the kindness of a father but are treated as the brute creation. The home of the industrious and sober mechanic is a model Paradise. After the toil of the day is over, he returns to the bosom of his family, his wife is waiting with anxiety for the sound of his footsteps, she is ready to receive him and make him happy in the domicile over which she presides. He then finds a balm for the wounds he daily receives in the battle of life and gives him strength and nerve to meet with fortitude the trials and vexations of the coming day. How happy would be the condition of society did such a state of things exist universally. We would no more hear of men murdering their wives and wives their husbands; but tranquility and love would reign predominent, and peace would flow as a river. Each would love his neighbor as himself, and seek to promote the happiness and well being of all around him. If man would improve the opportunities allotted to him, his mind would become refined, his countenance would beam with intelligence, the gloomy visions of life would vanish before him, he would be led to think of loftier things than the trivial ills of time and look over nature's wide expanse, learn a lesson from the volume of nature, and look upon "Nature up to Nature's God." W. C.

TELEGRAPHIC.

From Washington.

Washington, August 8.

The Navy Department this morning received a letter from Flag Officer James Armstrong, dated "United States Ship San Jacinto, Hong Kong, May 23," in which he says: "From the enormous force the English are collecting at this station, and the arrangements they are making for its permanency, it is clear that China is to be compelled to throw off her exclusiveness." He adds, "There will be a total of sixty vessels, mounting 783 guns. Accompanying this force are several sea-going hospital and transport ships, with a large supernumerary medical staff."

August 11.

Senator Bright has sufficiently recovered from his late serious illness to leave for Indiana this morning.

John C. O'Neill has resigned the superintendency of Indian affairs in Utah, to which he was lately appointed.

Hon. F. P. Stanton, it is rumored, will be appointed to the Missouri Superintendency, vice Cummings, appointed to the Governorship of Utah.

From Kansas.

St. Louis, August 8.

Advices from Kansas state that Gov. Walker evacuated Lawrence on the 3d inst., with all but forty of the troops. The ostensible cause of this is the Indian attack on Fort Reilly, which is regarded here as a ruse to get the troops away.

The vote in Lawrence on the Topeka Constitution was 652 in favor of it to 2 against it.

The Free State ticket for minor officers has been elected.

August 11.

Later advices state that Governor Walker had returned to Lawrence with the troops, the apprehension of an attack upon Fort Riley by the Indians proving groundless.

The officers of the city government met on the 6th inst., and were perfecting ordinances.

Later from Santa Fe.

St. Louis, August 11.

The Santa Fe mail reached Independence with advices to the 7th inst. The news is unimportant. The Cheyenne Indians had refused to receive presents from the Government agent, or make a treaty with him, saying they can make more by stealing. The Pawnees also threaten hostilities.

Four Ladies Drowned.

Boston, August 9.

Four young ladies, two of them daughters of Mr. B. F. Soule, and the other two of Mr. Grant, were drowned at Waterville, Maine, on Thursday, while bathing.

From the Plains.—The Indian War.

St. Louis, August 12.

Fort Laramie dates of the 20th ult. have been received.

Colonel Sumner had arrived at Bent's Fort, and would leave on the 13th for the headwaters of the Republican Fork, in pursuit of the Cheyennes.

The California trains had all passed Fort Laramie in good health.

Colonel Alexander's regiment and Spencer's battery, of the Utah expedition, was met 225 miles west of Fort Leavenworth. Another regiment was met at Rock Creek; Capt. Van Vleit at Cottonwood, and Reno's battery at Big Blue.

The Cheyennes were scattered along the entire route between Forts Laramie and Kearney. But little damage has been done to the trains, the Indians fearing to attack large parties.

War has again broken out between the Crows and Sioux.

Several surveying parties were seen. Nothing was heard of the murders reported last week.

There was no news received from Utah.

Grasshoppers are said to exist in great numbers in New Jersey this season. Whole fields in the neighborhood of Belvidere are made desolate, as if recently ploughed. Young clover seems to be their favorite food, but when hard pressed they devour mullens and alders, stripping them clean.

The City of Cincinnati now numbers 200,000 inhabitants!

Notice to Subscribers.

We frequently receive remittances for subscriptions to The Mormon, without the sender giving the name of the place he desires the paper to be sent to. Sometimes the name of the Post Office or town is mentioned, but not the county, and as there are several towns in some States by the same name, unless the county is designated we are at a loss to know where to direct the papers ordered. We wish all communications to us to name distinctly the Post Office or town, county, and State or Territory, as then there will be no mistake.

Sunday Meetings.

The Saints meet every Sunday for Public Worship in Philadelphia at Mitchell's Hall, 312 Fourth Street—or York Avenue, above Vine, at 10 1-2 A. M. 3 and 7 1-2 P. M.: in New York, at Brooks' Assembly Rooms, 261 Broome Street, at 3 and 7 P. M.

Notice.

The Saints who desire to send means to their friends in Europe, can have the same attended to, by forwarding any sum they wish in current money, to this office, enclosing one dollar or more, in proportion to the amount sent, to defray the expenses of procuring Bills of Exchange, making remittances, foreign postage, &c., describing particularly to whom, and where they wish to have it sent; at the same time not holding myself responsible in any manner whatever unless the money reach me.

All subscriptions, donations, &c., for the support of The Mormon, or Conference Fund (except the donations and Conference Funds raised in the Philadelphia Conference, which will be forwarded as usual through President Cannon) must be sent hereafter to my address; as also Tithing; P. E. Fund, and donations for the Temple from those who wish to contribute the same, so each person may be duly credited, and the means forwarded to Zion, and have their names entered in "The Book of the Law of the Lord."

No Power of Attorney, or other legal instrument of writing, going to Europe or elsewhere, forwarded to us for the purpose of sending to Washington in order to obtain the attestation of the Department, and the British Consul's Certificate and seal to the same, will be attended to in future, unless the means to defray the expenses and foreign postage accompanies the Instrument, as there is considerable expense attending it as well as labor. We would like to oblige all, and are willing to give our services when we have opportunity; but we cannot advance means to defray such expenses.

All communications intended for The Mormon should be addressed—Editor of The Mormon, New York. Otherwise direct to my address, Box No. 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. Appleby.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the transgression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will be condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The fourth is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours? Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconqu demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Évangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

PARTICULAR NOTICE TO

SALT LAKE, SANTA FE, AND CALIFORNIA TRADERS.

HORACE E. DIMICK & CO.'S

GREAT WESTERN EMPORIUM,

No. 42 Main Street, St. Louis, Mo., (at the Sign of the Deer in Windows.)

WE are now in receipt of our stock of Goods for the coming season, which enables us to say, that we have now in store, and for sale, the LARGEST and most COMPLETE assortment of Guns, Pistols, Sporting Apparatus, and Goods selected expressly for the arming of wagon trains, for crossing the plains, the markets of Santa Fe, Salt Lake, and Oregon, &c., that can be found in any HOUSE in the WESTERN COUNTRY!

Among the most staple articles now on hand, can be found upwards of 2,000 DOUBLE AND SINGLE SHOT GUNS; 2,500 MUSKETS AND UNITED STATES RIFLES, both new and second-hand, with flint or percussion locks; COLT'S REVOLVERS, of all sizes, ALWAYS on hand, in quantities to satisfy almost any demand, and at EASTERN PRICES. Also, all the most improved patterns of Revolvers and other Pistols now in use.

N. B.—We, the undersigned, being practical men in all matters appertaining to the arming and equipping of Emigrant and Merchant wagon trains for crossing the plains, renders our experience worthy of consultation, to make it the more easy for the emigrant and trader to supply themselves with the necessary articles, viz: FIRE ARMS, FIXED AMUNITION, PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES, of all kinds Wagons, Tents, Horses, Mules, Oxen; in short, everything necessary for their comfort.

We also beg leave to call the attention of EASTERN HUNTING PARTIES, that wish to spend a few months on the plains, that we have all the necessary arms and equipments, and at prices as low as they can be furnished in any Eastern city.

We keep constantly on hand, (or make to order,) TARGET, HUNTING, and MINNIE RIFLES, which we guarantee to be superior to any in the country.

We also keep constantly on hand the CELEBRATED SHARP'S PATENT RIFLE, which is the safest and most destructive weapon ever invented, for sale at the Manufacturer's prices, for cash.

Please call and examine for yourselves, as it is no trouble for us to answer questions, or show goods.

FOR THE MORMON.

There is Nothing New!

BY ELDER W. G. MILLS.

Oh! this is a wonderful age
For invention, discovery, and learning!
The Press, and the Pulpit, and Stage
Boast their wisdom, their light, and discerning!

From the swains to the kings on the throne,
From the "ragged school" up to the College;
New discoveries they try to make known,
And add to the treasures of knowledge.

They affect the old time to despise,
Its learning, its talents, profession:
Hidden truths upon truths now arise—
Oh! this is the age of progression!

But "There's Nothing New under the Sun,"
Was spoken as truth in that sad age;
"What is, what will be, has been known;"
And, I doubt not, the truth of the adage.

The Astronomers rove thro' the sky,
With their powerful telescopes scan it,
Then prescribe, calculate, and descry
The orbit of some unknown planet.

Its position, and bulk they unfold,—
Their discov'ry with news is prolific—
But ten thousands of years it has rolled,
Tho' unknown to the world scientific.

Their inventions with steam, and the rails,
And machinery, excite men with wonder;
Round the earth with the lightning tell tales;
It is good, but 'tis old as the thunder.

The Aerial machine may succeed
Their minds to the subject applying—
At a tangent to other worlds' speed,
Or "like doves to their windows be flying."

Can we think that unknown to our kind
They remained till displayed in our nations?
Oh, no! for 'tis mind upon mind
That existed in former creations!

The new water that flows in the streams
Has dwelt long ago in the ocean;
The fresh light from the stars' cheering beams
Has millions of years been in motion!

The atoms combined to compose
The universe always existed;
The fresh-tinted flower that grows
The cloud, soil, and sunbeam possessed it!

Columbus the earth would explore,
And he finds a "New World" o'er the ocean;
But millions had dwelt there before
His own nation had been put in motion.

A Cook the wide world circumscribes,
Gathering facts as his country designed him;
But he finds many nations and tribes
As old as the world left behind him!

The stars in their orbits will shine,
Eternal the laws that rule nature,
Art and science their mysteries combine,
Tho' man is the ignorant creature.

Of all the discoveries made known,
In truth, Nothing's New, good, or evil;
Save sectarian religion alone,
And that is as old as the Devil!

So "There's Nothing New under the Sun,"
Was told as a truth in that sad age,
"What is, what will be, has been known,"
And I doubt not the truth of the adage.

G. S. L. City.

The Nucleus of the Indian Mutiny.

Delhi, the Ancient Capital of the Mogul Empire.

As the fate of England's Indian empire is to all appearance involved in the successful resistance or capture of this city—the ancient capital of the Patan and Mogul dynasties—a description of it may not be unacceptable to our readers. We have, therefore, compiled from the most reliable sources the following interesting sketch of it:—

The city of Delhi is situated in the centre of a sandy plain, upon a rocky ridge, rising to an altitude of 120 feet on the right bank of the Jumna, here a deep and broad river at all seasons of the year, in north latitude 28 deg. 41 min., and east longitude 77 deg. 5 min.; 956 miles from Calcutta by the Birbhum road, and 880 miles from Bombay by Ahmedabad. According to tradition this city was founded 300 years B. C. by Delu. It formerly stood on the left bank of the river, and is supposed to have covered a space of 20 square miles. Major Rennell mentions 2,000,000 as the number of inhabitants which Delhi was supposed to contain at the end of the 17th century; and the extent of the ruins seems to justify this estimate. The Emperor, Shah Jehan, built a new city in 1631 on the right bank of the Jumna, and gave it the name of Shanjehanabad, by which only the Moslem part of the population continue to call it. This is the modern Delhi, which is about five miles in circumference, and is seated on a range of rocky hills, and surrounded by walls constructed of large blocks of gray granite, and fortified with a good loop-holed parapet. Several gateways and bastions occur in the walls at intervals, and the whole has been strengthened and put in repair by the English government. The gateways are magnificent buildings, and are named after the provinces and cities to which they point. The city has seven gates, and contains the remains of several fine palaces—the former dwellings of the chief omrahs of the empire. These palaces are each of considerable extent, and surrounded by high walls, enclosing baths, stabling, and numerous outbuildings. The modern city contains many good houses, chiefly brick, and of various styles of architecture. The streets are in general narrow, as in other Eastern cities, but the principal ones, Bishop Heber says, are really wide, handsome, and, for an Asiatic city, remarkably cleanly, and the bazars have a good appearance.

There are two fine streets, one called the Chandlery-choke, 90 feet broad and 1,500 yards long; and the other 120 feet wide and one mile long. Down the middle of the first of these streets runs an aqueduct, which is shaded by fine trees and supplied with water from Ali Merdan Khan's canal. The other streets are narrow, but contain many good brick houses. The crowd of an Indian city, always picturesque, is here particularly rich in showy figures of men and animals. Elephants, camels and horses, gaily caparisoned, parade through the streets, jingling their silver ornaments and the many-colored tufts and fringes with which they are adorned. The suwarri of a great personage sweeping along the highways, little scrupulous of the damage it may effect in its progress, forms a striking spectacle when it can be viewed from some safe corner or from the back of a tall elephant. The coup d'œil is magnificent; but to enter into details might destroy the illusion; for, mingled with mounted retainers, richly clothed and armed with glittering helmets, polished spears, and shields knobbed with silver, crowds of wild-looking, half-clad wretches on foot are to be seen, increasing the tumult and the dust, but adding nothing to the splendor of the cavalcade. No great man—and Delhi is full of personages of pretention—ever passes along in state without having his titles shouted out by the stentorian lungs of some of his followers. The cries of the venders of different articles of food, the discordant songs of itinerant musicians, screamed out to the accompaniment of the tom-tom, with an occasional bass volanteered by a cheetah, grumbling out in a sharp roar his annoyance at being hawked about the streets for sale, with the shrill distressful cry of the camel, the trumpetings of the elephants, the neighing of horses, and the rumbling of cart wheels, are sounds which assail the ear from sunrise to sunset in the streets of Delhi. The multitude of equipages is exceedingly great, and more diversified, perhaps, than those of any other city in the world. English carriages, altered and improved to suit the climate and the peculiar taste of the possessor, are mingled with the palanquins and bullock carts, open and covered, the chairs, and the cage-like and lanthorn-like conveyances of native construction.

There are several fine mosques in Delhi in good preservation, with high minarets and gilded domes. The largest of these, the Juma Musjid, was built by Shah Jehan. It is a splendid and enormous edifice, built of white marble and red granite, and is considered the largest and handsomest place of Mussulman worship in India. Bishop Heber thought the ornamental architecture of this mosque less florid, and the general effect less picturesque than the splendid group of the Imambarrah and its accompaniments at Lucknow; but its situation, he says, is far more commanding, and the size, solidity, and rich materials of the edifice impressed him more than anything of the sort he had seen in India.

The Mogul's palace, built by Shah Jehan, on the west bank of the Jumna, is surrounded on three sides by an embattled wall 30 feet high, and more than one mile in circumference. It is a place of no strength, the walls being adapted only for bows and arrows, or musketry; "but, as a kingly residence," Bishop Heber says, "it is one of the noblest that I have seen. It far surpasses the Kremlin, but I do not think that, except in the durability of its materials, it equals Windsor. Sentries in red coats—sepoys of the company's regular army—appear at its exterior; but the internal duties, and indeed most of the police duties at Delhi, are performed by the two provincial battalions raised in the Emperor's name, and nominally under his orders. These are disciplined very much like Europeans, but have matchlock guns and the oriental dress, and their commanding officer is considered as one of the domestics of the Mogul, and has appartments in his palace." The chief hall of audience is an open quadrangular terrace of white marble, richly ornamented with mosaic work and sculptures in relievo; and the chapel of Arenzebe, also of white marble, although small, is of beautiful workmanship; altogether the building, even in its present neglected state, attests the magnificence of its former occupants. The gardens, which were formed by Shah Jehan, are said to have cost £1,000,000. Their original character has long been completely lost, and they now present the appearance of a small neat park, with some charming groves of orange trees. The circuit of the walls finishes at the east and west sides of this palace, which forms the river face in their line.

Among the remarkable edifices of Delhi are the Tykunas or underground houses, which are formed underground, having outlets for light above, and ingress at one place only. They are handsomely arranged and furnished; and, possessing a temperature of 12 deg. or even 14 deg. below that of rooms at the surface, furnish a pleasant retreat in the hot months of April, May and June. One of the most generally useful works of the Emperor Shah Jehan in this city is a well, excavated out of the solid rock upon which the Jumna Musjid is built. The water is raised from a great depth by complicated machinery to a succession of reservoirs, and fills a pond from which the inhabitants obtain a supply. The principal wheels having been broken, and the whole machinery out of repair, it was restored by the English a few years after they obtained possession of the city.

Among the ruins of the ancient city, on the east side of the river, are some mausoleums in good preservation; those of the Emperors Homaion and Mahommed Shah, and of Jehanara Begum, daughter of Shah Jehan, are the most remarkable. The tomb of Homaion, who died in 1555, is a square with an immense central dome, and four small domes at the corners. There Shah's fort is on a large scale, with high bastions, and lofty and solid walls. The Togluckabad is also an immense fort, five or six miles in circumference, with a high and commanding citadel. The Katub Minar is an enormous column in the centre of the old city, supposed to have been built by a monarch of that name, who reigned about 1206. It is a round tower rising from a polygon of 52 feet in diameter and 27 sides, in five stages, gradually diminishing in circumference to the height of 242 feet. A spiral staircase of 384 steps leads to the summit. "It is really," says Bishop Heber, "the finest tower I have ever seen, and must, when its spire was complete, have been still more beautiful. These Patans built like giants, and finished their work like jewellers; yet the ornaments, florid as they are in their proper places, are never thrown away, or allowed to interfere with the general severe and solemn character of their edifices. The palace of the present imperial family is a large but paltry building, in a bad style of Italian architecture, and with a public road actually leading through its court-yard. "From the gate of Agra to Homaion's tomb," says Bishop Heber, "is a very awful scene of desolation: ruins—tombs after tombs—fragments of brickwork, freestone, granite and marble—scattered everywhere over a soil naturally rocky and barren, without cultivation, except in one or two small spots, and without a single tree. I was reminded of Caffa in the Crimea; but this was Caffa on the scale of London, with the wretched fragments of a magnificence such as London itself cannot boast." The cantonments are three miles north of the city, couched under a range of sandstone rocks.

Delhi is well situated for carrying forward the trade between the peninsula of India and the countries to the north and west; the inhabitants consequently exhibit a considerable degree of industry and commercial activity, and the shops are crowded with all sorts of European products and manufactures. Cotton clothes and shawls are manufactured in the city, and indigo is produced in the surrounding country. The trade of Delhi is very extensive in shawls, for which it is a grand mart. A constant intercourse is kept up between this city and Cashmere, whence the splendid fabrics so much prized all over the civilized world are brought in immense quantities, some plain to have borders sewed upon them, others to be embroidered in silk or gold, whence they derive the name of Delhi shawls. Nothing can exceed the beauty of the Delhi needlework, which is in the highest esteem throughout Asia, and eagerly coveted by the rich of both sexes, the caftans of the men being often of velvet, edged with rich embroidery. The goldsmiths of Delhi are also celebrated beyond those of any other Indian city, and eminently merit their high reputation. It is difficult for persons best acquainted with the chef d'œuvres of European artisans, to imagine the surprising beauty of the Delhi work—the champac necklaces in particular, so called from the flower whose petals it resembles. They do not succeed so well in cutting and arranging precious stones, though they are improving very fast, from the instructions native workmen now obtain when in the employment of English jewellers at Calcutta. There are a great many carvers of stone and ivory in Delhi, but they have not attained to anything approaching perfection in their art. A considerable trade is also carried on in precious stones, and large black and red cornelians. Since the completion of the canal from Rair to Delhi, flour mills and saw mills have been erected in and about the city. The Jumna, like the other great rivers of this country, overflows during the rains a wide extent; but, unlike the Ganges, does not confer fertility at Delhi. In this part of its course it is so strongly impregnated with natron, extensive beds of which abound in all the neighborhood, that its waters destroy instead of promoting vegetation: and the whole space between the high banks and the river, in its present low state, is a loose and perfectly barren sand, like that of the sea shore. The bridge of boats across the Jumna at this city is necessarily an important line of traffic.

The subjoined statement of the number of laden animals and conveyances paying toll which crossed the bridge during 1852, with the weight of goods, is curious and important:

Buffaloes laden	109,104	5	2,224
Tattoos, mules	44,718	4	6 624
Donkeys	85,178	2	6,300
Bullocks	13,323	4	1,973
Camels	17,548	5	3,249
2-bullock hackeries	8,819	15	4,899
3 do. do.	7,093	20	5,257
4 do. do.	12,829	25	11,878
5 do. do.	13,673	30	15,192
6 do. do.	6,218	40	9,231
7 do. do.	822	45	1,370
8 do. do.	37	50	67
Bungara bullocks	20,921	4	3,099
1-bullock carts	500	5	93
4-wheel wagons of 2 bullocks	59	40	87
2-wheel wagons of 2 bullocks	389	20 steers of 21lbs. each	288
Coolies	108,484	30	3,012
Total			94,850

The above table shows that nearly 100,000 tons of goods crossed the bridge during the year, making an average of about 8500 tons every month. This is equal to the cargoes of seven or eight first-class ships monthly. About half as many unladen animals and conveyances of all descriptions also crossed, likewise paying toll, and a great quantity of government stores and military officers' baggage was passed over free. The returns for the year 1853 were expected to be much larger, as certain improvements in the roads in that quarter only came into operation in August, 1852. This Delhi bridge of boats is stated to be excellently constructed, and has approaches of substantial masonry. With facilities of transit such as are attainable from a good system of cross roads and railways, the traffic of Upper India would probably be immense. It has been proposed to connect Delhi with Calcutta by means of a line of railroad passing Mirzapore, crossing the Jumna at Allahabad, and then taking a direct line by Mympuri to Delhi; or, as an alternative, proceeding from Cawnpore, by Shuckabad, to Agra; crossing the Jumna at that city, and then pursuing a nearly direct course through Muttra to Delhi. Should such a line ever be executed, it will doubtless be ultimately pushed forward to Kurnal, and the highest navigable point on the Sutledge, and thus connect the two great rivers, the Indus and the Ganges.

The population of Delhi amounted in 1847 to 137,977, besides 22,302 in the suburbs. A committee of public instruction, which was planned and brought into operation between 1823 and 1825, established a college at Delhi, and funds were assigned for its support by the central government; in addition to which a sum equal to £17,000 was presented to the college by Nawab Islamaid-ood-Dowlah, Minister of the King of Oude. In June, 1827, there had been opened 247 schools in Delhi and its immediate vicinity, for the instruction of poor children. The number of pupils at the college, which in 1829 was 152, had increased in the following year to 257. More recently another school has been instituted, at which the children of the native gentry are taught the English language, and as many as 68 scholars attended in the first years of its establishment.

The Emperor of Delhi, the representative of the great Timur, though still recognized by the British government as a sovereign prince, has long been shorn of all his grandeur, and except within his own palace exercises no attribute of royalty, though looked up to and regarded by all the Mahommedan population of India with respect and attachment. Lord Wellesley, on the destruction of Scindiah's power, assigned to Shah Allum the great palace of Delhi as a residence, and for the support of himself and the royal family he made over to him certain districts in the neighborhood, which were to be placed under British management, but the Emperor was to be allowed to check the accounts of revenue received from them. It is said that the revenue of these districts has now reached £300,000 a year, while the Emperor's allowance does not exceed $130,000, and that much of this latter sum is in reality spent in his name by the British resident.—[*N. The Utah Expedition

FORT LEAVENWORTH, K. T., July 28, 1857.

THE only vestiges of the encampment of the Fifth and Tenth Infantry are shreds of cotton, wisps of straw, and patches of dead grass on the fields where their tents were pitched. The latter is already 120 miles out on the Plains; the former sixty or seventy miles. The detachment of artillerists started to-day, and in their company a few officers whose intention is to push ahead and catch the advance guard of the expedition. The order for the march of the Second Dragoons, as is known at the East, has been countermanded; and no more troops are available for the Utah service, except a single company of cavalry, which is reserved to escort Gov. Cumming and his suite.

The strength of the expedition, then, will be far less than was anticipated. The two infantry regiments include about 1,100 men, and the number of artillerists falls short of 100. The 5th Infantry, which was removed from the Florida service, is fuller than the 10th, which was ordered down from the forts on the North n Mississippi, for one or two companies of the latter were not included in the order. This force is hardly strong enough to guard the immense baggage-train against an organized attack of the Indian tribes. It is certainly insufficient to overawe the Mormons, who, if they choose to become armed rebels, can prevent its passing the mountains. At the most moderate calculation, they, if united, can set an army of 10,000 men into the field, better ordered and organized than the same number of militia in any of the States. The military spirit which was displayed by them at Nauvoo, in the Legion of which Joseph Smith was Lieutenant-General, has not relaxed since their removal to Utah. On the contrary, it has become more closely interwoven with their hierarchy.

But the probability of an armed collision is very slight—too insignificant, almost, to enter into calculations of the dangers of the expedition. It is not apprehended by even the most enthusiastic young officer. The value of an imposing force would be moral, not physical. It would be indispensible, to show that the National Government is earnest in its intentions, whatever they may be. I have authority for the statement that the Administration expressly promised at least 2,500 troops to Gen. Harney when they offered him the Utah command; but it is now impossible for him to collect 2,000, even if he were able to renew the order for the 2d Dragoons to join the expedition. That order will certainly not be renewed until after the October election in Kansas, which he expects to be able to proceed with them in person to Fort Laramie.

At that fort, the troops already on the march will rendezvous. It will be impossible for Governor Cumming to overtake them previously, unless they meet with unexpected delays. In the plan for the expedition, another general rendezvous is appointed at Bridger's Pass, among the Rocky Mountains; but if the affairs which I have briefly presented strikes others as it does myself, it will be evident that the chances are against a single company leaving Fort Laramie before next spring. In this opinion I am confirmed by persons who have had much military experience on the plains. No mail from the East reached Salt Lake City between November 13, 1856, and June 3d of the present year. The kanyons will be blocked with snow before Gen. Harney can reach the mountains with the dragoons starting in October, and the impossibility of otherwise securing the services of an officer on whom so much dependence is placed, will be an additional inducement to postpone entering Utah till the spring.

In personal appearance, Gen. Harney is impressive. He is considerably over six feet tall, and is large-boned and muscular. His hair was red but is now thickly mixed with white. He wears it short, and begins to be bald on the crown of his head. His moustaches and beard are nearly white, and are also thick and chipped short. His eyes are blue; and dull, for he uses spectacles. In younger years, he must have been a model of physical vigor and strength, but he now looks older than he really is, for his age, I believe, does not exceed fifty-five. While in St. Louis, I heard an anecdote illustrative of his character, which I have never seen in print Being in New York many years ago, he passed a store in one of the principal streets in which an auctioneer was soliciting bids for an engraving of Gen. Jackson. Both the seller and the crowd were no political friends of the subject of the picture, and were ridiculing it in every possible manner. "How much am I offered for the Hero of New Orleans?" cried the man on the stand. "Only half a cent? Why, he's worth a cent surely after robbing the bank. Make it a cent, won't you, gentlemen? Now, then, how much am I offered?" "One hundred dollars," said a voice very emphatically, as Col. Harney entered the door; "one hundred dollars, sir," he repeated, making his way through the crowd, half a head taller than any other man in the room. The auctioneer, naturally astonished, inquired if the gentleman was in earnest, and started again on his witticisms. "Sir, I am in earnest, and I claim my bid," interrupted the Colonel, "and if no one bids more, I claim the picture." No one bidding more, he handed the auctioneer the money and his address. "And now, sir," he remarked, seizing him by the collar and dragging him to the floor, "I claim the privilege of applying the bastinado to your body for your damnable impertinence." And having caned him to his satisfaction, no one in the crowd venturing to interfere, he strode out of the store and continued his walk down the street. Analyze the quality of character necessary to a man to be the actor in such a scene, and I think you will discover the traits which military men consider to fit Gen. Harney eminently as the leader of this Utah expedition.

Of the antecedents and qualifications of Col. Johnson, who, it is understood here, has been called to the command until Gen. Harney can be disengaged from Kansas, I have no information. He was not educated at West Point, and was, I believe, a Texian before the annexation. In age, he is nearly Gen. Harney's equal.

Although the troops have all marched, with the exception of the company held in reserve for the Governor, the Fort and the country around it give evidence of the preparations made for the expedition. The levee at Leavenworth City is strewn with wagon-frames, wheels and poles. Placards are posted in all the bar-rooms, and on the corners of the streets, offering $50 wages per month to teamsters. Similar placards have been visible in St. Louis for several weeks. Much difficulty is experienced in collecting proper men for this service, notwithstanding the high wages. By the terms of the contract with the Quartermaster, they bind themselves to serve till June 1, 1858, and if necessary to team back over the Plains at any time before that period. If collected together, they would constitute quite a little army themselves. Nearly 3,000 mules have been procured for the transportation of the munitions and provisions, and a force of at least 500 teamsters is necessary for their management. The wagons have been built at various places, many of them in the towns down the river. They are six-muled, without springs, and all covered with white canvas, stretched over hoops. About half of these which will be employed left with the infantry regiments last week. The white tops of many of the others are visible in every hollow of the undulating road between the city and the fort. Transportation is provided for most of the officers, in six-muled ambulances. The provision for this service has, however, been quite scanty.

The arrival of Gov. Cumming is now daily expected, but no definite information of his movements has been received at the fort. He will be accompanied by all the civilians lately appointed to office in Utah, not one of whom has left with the troops.

[Of course, Gen. Harney is not to be held responsible for the comments which a correspondent of the Tribune may be pleased to make over some episodes of his younger days; we cannot, nevertheless, refrain from remarking that if the General's qualifications for the command of the Utah expedition are to be drawn from his encounter with the Auctioneer, we expect he will get along nicely. There are probably some men in Utah who would take a hundred dollars and allow the General the privilege of kicking them afterwards; but we really think that class are not very numerous out there. For the sake of a name, we would advise young officers to take out a few hundreds. Try it!—ED.]

DRIZZLE DROZZLE.—It is told that when Minister Miles prayed for rain he left nothing uncertain. He said:

"O Lord, thou knowest we do not want Thee to send us rain which shall pour down in fury and swell our streams, and sweep away our hay-cocks, and fences and bridges; but Lord, we want it to come drizzel drozzel for a week. Amen."

Utah Mail.

WE keep thinking about the stoppage of the Utah mail, and the more we think the less we feel satisfied with the procedure of the Post Master General, or whoever has ordered that unjust measure. We shall not now write what we feel. Mormons are set down as rebels, hence, if they talk the plain language of common mortals, when they are abused, it is set down as rebellion—of course it is rebellion! Well, we will keep what we have to say, it won't spoil with keeping, we'll nurse it and keep it warm. We will, however, ask very respectfully of the Administration: Has not the Utah mail been stopped with the view of preventing the inhabitants of that Territory from knowing the movements of the army? We believe it has and with this conviction on our mind we cannot refrain from saying that the Administration at Washington is unworthy of the respect of the people of Utah. A mail can be sent to Fort Laramie every week, and the only whisper we hear of any ever getting to Utah is upon condition that the army gets there this winter, and for their accommodation and that of the government a mail will be regularly run between Great Salt Lake City and the States! Capital. This is Democracy? Is it? We call it Despotism!

Since the foregoing was in type we have received the following letter from Squire Ivins, of New Egypt. This gentleman is not a Mormon; but he is a merchant doing extensive business where he resides, and does likewise considerable business in Utah. We ask President James Buchanan to read it and if he wants the inhabitants of that Territory to respect him and to confide in his justice let him clear himself from the charge of tyranny and despotism, that not only Mr. Ivins but thousands and ten of thousands lay now at his door. No person can look upon this act of the Administration otherwise than does Squire Ivins. These are the acts which fill the Utonians with contempt for the government. President Buchanan, let us have justice, and you will speak all the better to Queen Victoria about the good relations of nations, when she sends a cordial greeting over the electric wire. Oh! immortal Washington, whisper that a nation is only strong and deserving of respect when she is just in all her ways!

We had not time to ask permission of Squire Ivins to publish his letter, but the publication of his manly sentiments can do him no harm with wise and good men, and for the others he cares nothing. Here it is:

NEW EGYPT, Aug. 17, 1857.

MR. WM. I. APPLEBY—Dear Sir: As I had just finished a letter for Salt Lake to my brother on business of importance, I noticed in your paper (the MORMON) that the overland mail for Utah had been discontinued. Can you inform me by what way I can forward a letter to Salt Lake City? Is there any way but by California? If there is not I might as well keep it, as I have sent letters that way which are hardly if ever received. Neither have they gone regularly through the overland route, except since the first of April last; all of which since then have been duly received and answered. Talk about the mail being robbed of its letters when in the hands of the Mormons, as an excuse for taking it out of the hands of the present contractor. Oh! What became of the letters when carried by Magraw or his agents? When carried by him, not one fourth of my letters ever reached their place of destination; and when one was received, though promptly answered, the answer hardly ever came to hand.

It is not only me who has to suffer for the want of a reliable mail to Utah, but I know of scores in this section of country, and I presume thousands of others throughout the States having friends as well as business there, have suffered from the same cause. Therefore the stopping of the mail at this season of the year and under the circumstances upon which it is said to have been stopped, cannot be viewed in any other light than a mean, contemptable act, and if it would do any good, I would say * * * the mean, contemptible man or set of men who perpetrated it.

Does the Postmaster General suppose no one is interested in Utah but Mormons? I for one can say I am interested—friends and business there makes me so; and so it is with thousands of others; and in case he does not give us an overland mail soon, I think he will hear from some of them. The course pursued by the administration towards the Mormons, to say the least of it, is an outrage upon their just rights.

Yours truly, T. W. IVINS.

[We know of no other way of sending letters to Utah at present but by way of California.—ED. MOR.]

Modern Pulpit Eloquence, or Modern Nonsense.

MODERN PULPIT ELOQUENCE.—A correspondent of one of the Boston newspapers gives the following extract from a sermon recently delivered by a Professor at Harvard University: "Viewing the subject from the esoteric stand-point of Christian exegetical analysis, and agglutinating and polysynthetical ectoblasts of homogeneous asceticism, we perceive at once the absolute individuality of this entity; while from that stand-point of incredulous synthesis, which characterize the xenocratic hierarchy of the Jews, we are constantly impressed with the precisely antipristatic quality thereof."

How ridiculous and absurd such flummery as the foregoing appears to every sane and common sense mind. Perhaps the professor might have understood the meaning of the words he used, and endeavored to apply them rightly on that occasion. But how many of his hearers could comprehend their meaning or application? Very few, we opine. How different inspired men spoke and wrote. Look at their writings and teachings in the Scriptures. What simplicity, what humility and plainness, adapted to the comprehension and understanding of the lowest capacity. Free from redundancy, tautology, or expletives, those sent of God never cared about tickling the ears of mortals. But those sent of men, having men's wisdom or the wisdom of the world, without the knowledge of Heaven or authority from God, always did, and ever will, exhibit just such ridiculous folly as the "Harvard Professor."

How true the words of Holy Writ, "That the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God, and what is pleasing with the world is an abomination in His sight." "That God's ways are not as man's ways." "That no great or wise are called." "But that he takes the weak things, and despised, to confound the wisdom of the wise." "And that the Gospel preached by His inspired servants, in former days, was a stumbling block to the Jews and foolishness to the learned Greeks." Just so it is in this day of boasted light, intelligence, and learned ignorance.

The "Professor's" highfaluten forcibly reminds us of an anecdote we heard related some years since, wherein a Professor, perhaps from "Harvard University," drove up to a country inn, and wishing his beast taken care of, addressed the hostler, a son of Erin, as follows: "You illegitimate son of the verdant isle, disengage my quadruped from the vehicle; administer to him a small quantity of nature's nectared draught, pure from the gushing fountain; remove the armor that envelops his exterior; satiate his evacuated ventricle with four measures of nutrition. And when the majesty of day makes his splendiferous appearance in the oriental horizon and dispenses the obumbrate, I will replenish your evacuated orifice with a pecuniary consideration for your obsequeousness, that will dissipate your obtund apprehensions."

Paddy stood speechless, gazing at the Professor for a few moments, believing him to be certainly insane, makes quick time for the inn, and exclaims to the landlord: "'Faith, and Misther Landlord, be afther getting a rope quick, for there is a mon out here that is crazy as a bed bug, shure; he is afther talking Dutch, Habrew and Greek; Misther, he is crazy; he will murther some one. By my sowl, give me a rope, and I'le tie him, shure, I will."

Another anecdote, we believe, will also apply equally as well:

A young lady being seated at a tea party of fashionables, (no doubt professors,) one evening, was politely asked if she would "take sugar in her tea," replied, "No, my inconsiderate matron, I have a diabolical, invincible repugnance to sugar, for, according to my own sensible cogitations, the flavosity of the sugar nullifies the flavosity of the tea, and renders it insipid and obnoxious, and those who adulterate their tea with sugar, ought to be tetocatiously exfiuncted."

For Utah.

THE New Orleans Picayune of the 8th inst. says:—Col. A. S. Johnston, of the 2d Cavalry, U. S. A., accompanied by Lieut. Wood, of the same, arrived here last evening, from Texas, on his way to Washington, where both have been ordered to report for distant service. It is understood that Col. Johnston is to have the command of the expedition which is about to proceed to Utah. He has been doing efficient service in Texas for many years. Col. Johnston was formerly Secretary of War of Texas, when a republic.

The Submarine Telegraph's First Message.

THE Providence Journal says, on what authority we do not know, that the first message sent by the Atlantic submarine telegraph will be the Scripture paragraph, "Glory to God in the highest; on earth peace and goodwill towards men;" and that nothing could be found more sublime and appropriate.

If the times we live in can be called days of peace, or if there is a city, town or country in the Gentile world where there is peace, we would like to be informed of the same. Murders, mobbing, discord, disunion, wars, strife, and angry debate, mixed up with all manner of Sodomitish crimes and abominations, are the weekly category of peace. Where is "good will towards men?" Is it to be found among the nations of the earth? Is it to be found between neighbor and neighbor? or does it exist between husband and wife, father and son, brother and sister? Verily, no. "Every man's hand is against his neighbor;" father against son, mother against daughter, "and the daughter-in-law against the mother-in-law." These are the "days of vengeance," as the prophets have declared, that all things written shall be fulfilled.

We think the following "scripture paragraphs" would be far more appropriate, and recommend the same to "The Atlantic Submarine Telegraph Company" as their first message sent across the Atlantic: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of Heaven, having the Everlasting Gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God and give glory to Him, for the hour of His judgment is come, and worship Him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of water."

"Therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong, for I have heard from the Lord God of Hosts a consumption determined, even upon the face of the whole earth, of priest, people, servant, master, maid, mistress, buyer, seller, lender, borrower, giver of usury, taker of usury," &c., "because they have transgressed the laws, changed the gospel ordinances, and broken the Everlasting (Marriage) Covenant." Therefore will the Lord send you strong delusions, so that you may believe a lie and be damned, because you would not receive the truth (committed by the angel having the everlasting gospel, warning you that the "hour of God's judgment had come,") but had pleasure in unrighteousness, "and are lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God," and persecute and murder the prophets and saints sent unto you; "therefore has a curse devoured the earth;" "therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned up, and few men left."

We think the foregoing far more appropriate, and applies directly to this generation—the generation to whom it belonged, and the one to whom the angel was and has "committed the everlasting gospel." Do you believe it, ye mockers, who have made a "covenant with death and hell, and made lies your refuge?" If you do not, you will yet have to acknowledge its truth and application.

Rev. Theodore Parker and the U. S. Coin.

IT is reported that the Rev. Theodore Parker, the Boston heresiarch, will be obliged to leave his pulpit soon on account of failing health. Mr. Parker recently preached a sermon at Musical Hall, his subject being the "Progress of Despotism," in which he said, among other things, "that the Government had become so degenerate that the rulers had stricken the figure of "Liberty" from the coins of the country, and have put in its place on the new coin an ugly-looking vulture." Mr. Parker is, we believe, one of the few wealthy clergymen in Boston, and, we presume, has a well practiced eye in respect to "coins."—N. Y. Daily Times, Aug. 15.

It is an old proverb, and no doubt a true one, that "coming events cast their shadows before," and "straws show which way the wind blows." Mr. Parker, is sincere, we presume, in his assertions; but we think he might with propriety have added a little more. It is but a few years since the "figure of Liberty" was stricken from the U. S. coin. That figure had a wreath encircling the head, with the word "LIBERTY" thereon; but both have been stricken from the coin, and the Government has substituted instead the representation of a female, in a sitting posture, with a loose night robe carelessly thrown around her, as though she had just arose from slumber, with her arms and breast in a nude state, with her left hand supporting an upright staff, with a night-cap on the top end of it, while her right hand extends down to her seat, holding a shield bearing against her, with the word "LIBERTY" running across the shield—quite a fall for Liberty, indeed, from the head, where it was formerly, down to the situation it now occupies. A discerning mind can scarcely think otherwise, by the appearance of the whole figure combined, that all the liberty it represents is "starlight" liberty, because their deeds are evil. But is not the figure significant or illustrative of the nation? We think it is, if we are to believe the one half we hear and see around us, and what their own journals publish. But still the eagle was retained, holding in his talons the olive branch of peace and the bundle of arrows for war. But in the last emission of the new cent "Liberty" has been entirely stricken from the coin—both the word and figure. The proud eagle has dropped the arrows and olive branch and taken his flight as fast as his pinions will convey him. Who can say that the representations are not significant of the departing glory of this nation? Has not crime, murder, and driving of righteous men and women been perpetrated upon the Saints of the Most High with impunity in this our day by mobs, under the sanction of State Governments and winked at by the General Government, and millions of dollars worth of property been wrested from them, and no redress been had, only contumely and persecution. Indeed, it is true, and crime still increases.

Liberty, that sacred boon, has fled, disgusted at the mockery of her name, where in reality she was not to be found. The proud eagle, once bearing in his beak the glorious ensign "E Pluribus Unum," has looked upon the scenes enacted; his wings have fallen drooping by his side, his talons relaxed their hold; the bundle of arrows and olive branch he lets fall; he has plumed his wings, arisen high in the heavens, and taken with him the peace of the nation, and conveyed it to great and nobler men, until an avenging God makes an inquisition for blood and brings down high and exalted looks. Hence we say again, we think the coin is significant.

But is the fault in the Constitution or laws? Verily, no; but in the degenerate sons of noble sires—left the rich legacy of their fathers, and sold themselves to mundane gods and political cliquery.

Canada.

WE continue to receive very encouraging letters from the Elders who have recently gone on mission to Canada; some of the letters have been published and for lack of space others have been kept back.

Elders McCrary and Twitchell are presently at Dover, Norfolk Co., C. W., and though they have concluded that they are little qualified to shine among the learned and polished of this generation, they are satisfied that the Lord is working with them and expect to see before long the fruits of their labors.

Bro. Twitchell gives the address of his father, Col. Eli Twitchell, West Bethel, Maine, to any of the brethren who may pass that way, and requests them to set forth Mormonism to his father's family, as, he says, "they know nothing, only the lies they read in the newspapers against the Mormons."

Elder Robert Gardner writes us from London, C. W., on the 12th inst., and reports prospects for doing a good work favorable. With Bro. Shumway, he arrived there the last of June. They have since that been joined by Elder Thos. Hall, and from their united labors among Saints and sinners expect to organize quite a branch shortly.

We anticipate learning of much good being done in Canada. There are many in that country who once rejoiced in the Truth, and would again praise the Lord with joyful hearts if they were hunted up and the cobwebs brushed from their minds. We know the Elders sent there are good men, full of zeal for the salvation of Israel. Let no one despise a servant of the Most High for his lack of education or his mountain gait. The greatest prophet born among women came bounding from the wilderness and baptized the Son of God. Let the proud square their thoughts by that standard and they will feel humble enough to go down into the waters of baptism and be purified from sin, and let the humble Elder of Israel ever remember that the doctrine is not his own; but from the Father above, and in full reliance upon a Father's blessing he will go forth among men and the word shall be accompanied by the demonstration of the Spirit.

DOMESTIC SUMMARY.

MRS. CUNNINGHAM has got securely lodged in the Tombs; and, for the time being, the sensation is over. The "Bogus baby," with her mother, have been exhibited in Barnum's Museum for the gratification of the very curious. The district Attorney and Dr. Uhl, who helped Mrs. C. in in the scheme to lead to her ultimate detection in a felonous act, are both severely handled by a portion of the press. Varied are the opinions entertained; but for the moment the writers seem to be keeping back their thunder till the trial comes on. One feeling is universal—"her game is played out."

On Saturday the city was considerably excited by the news of an appalling collision, between the Fall-River steamboat Metropolis and the New London and Norwich propeller, J. W. Harris, on Long Island Sound, about sixty miles from this place. the two came in contact about 2 o'clock on Saturday morning and the propeller went down immediately, carrying with her fifteen human beings. The whole affair is now under examination. By the published statements it appears to have resulted from the propeller's lights being indistinct to the steamer, which led the latter to suppose the former a sailing craft and under that apprehension, and taking the proper means to avoid her, came directly in contact.

The steamship Tennessee arrived here yesterday morning from San Juan del Norte, bringing 260 deserters from Walker's army that was. The unfortunates looked the picture of sickness and misery as they stalked through the streets, or lounged about the City Hall, gratifying the curiosity of the crowds that assembled to see them. A few men, with hearts in the right place, set about getting up collections from the lookers-on, and succeeded in raising for the half-starved, fallen heroes, something approaching $300. Starvation seemed to be the general motive for desertion. Death, in Walker's camp, was certain, and a ray of hope from Costa Rica drew the famished into the enemies camp. Now, that the war is over, the Filibusters are sent back to their homes, wiser, considerably, from experience.

Gens. Walker and Henningsen are presently down South, and generally believed to be preparing for a return to Nicaragua. A glimpse at the emaciated forms of those who paraded the streets on Wednesday, would effectually cure the hair-brained who are elated with the glories of war.

The Free-State men in Kansas calculate that they have now the game to themselves. Letters from the pro-slavery leaders to parties in the South, indicate very clearly that they have no hope of success. Gov. Walker is far from being popular, and as far from enjoying in peace the lovely Kansas he pictured in his Inaugural address.

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

THE squadron, provided by the governments of Great Britain and the United States, for the laying of the telegraphic cable, that is to unite the new and old world within hailing distance, left the harbor of Cork on the 3d inst. to begin their labors. On leaving that harbor they steamed round to Valencia Bay, where they would fix the one end of the cable, and at the earliest moment afterwards face the heaving Atlantic with their rich burden, on which so much attention is centered. The day the squadron left Cork was the 365th anniversary of the sailing of Columbus; doubtless, an arrangement determined upon before hand. The experiment of laying down the cable has been attended with complete success and unless some unforseen accident occurs we shall soon have the satisfaction of hearing from John Bull "in less than no time," as by the difference in time between us and the the Britishers we will know what John did some hours before he really did it. A message of 20 words between New York and London will only cost £4.

The next big enterprize is the Great Eastern; she is to be launched in October, when she may sail is not yet given out; but, on dit, several thousand tickets are already sold.

The insurrection in India keeps in the first rank for interest. No recent news has been received in England, but the details from the press and private letters give a sombre color to affairs in the East. Though it is scarcely expected that England will be worsted in the struggle, it is impossible to read the details of the insurrection, of the wide spread sympathy and assistance rendered to the "mutineers," without concluding that Britain has a Herculean task before her to restore quiet to India and to establish as firmly as before her authority over the inhabitants of that vast Empire. To bring back things to their former position must be the work of years if it ever be in the march of "manifest destiny" that the British power is again predominant. The uprising of the natives of India against their proud masters, forces upon our mind what is in reserve for the States in the South—come it will.

A dreadful explosion occurred in a coal mine at Ashton-under-Lyne on the 31st ult. About forty miners are reported killed.

The Emperor and Empress of France were to leave on the 5th, on a visit to her Majesty Victoria, at Osborne. It does not seem to be more than a friendly shake of the hand and a little sailing trip.

Eugene Sue, the great novelist, died in Paris on the 3rd.

France is still taken up with the conspirators and Italy is busy with the leaders of the late unsuccessful revolutionary party. Mazzini is enjoying glorious liberty; but, from the Italian papers that represent him, he calculates to roam about like the Wandering Jew, till Italy is free. His friends will have to look out for a stock of boot leather—something better than the pasteboard stuff sold in New York, or his expenses will be heavy.

LATER.

The European end of the telegraph cable was fixed on the mainland of Valentia Bay, on the evening of the 5th inst., by the hands of the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland and a large party of very distinguished men of science from various countries. After congratulating each other on the success that had attended the first important step, a prayer was read by one of his Excellency's chaplains, a very sensible speech, a few words from the chairman of the Executive Committee of the Atlantic Telegraph Company, and from Mr. Cyrus Field, the projector of that company, terminated the ceremony. The proceedings caused great enthusiasm and brought out rounds of cheering. The squadron sailed immediately for Newfoundland, where they are expected some days before the end of the present month.

The Danish government has granted a concession to an English company for the establishment of a submarine telegraph between England and the western coast of Schleswig.

There are reports in London that Delhi has been taken with a great loss of life.

Napoleon and Eugenie arrived at Osborne, her majesty's Marine residence, on the morning of the 6th. The whole country is well guarded by police, and a strict surveillance kept on those who approach the Island by water. Victoria evidently has an idea that it would be inconvenient to have imperial blood spilt about her grounds. The precaution is not unnecessary. During his former visit to England, there were great apprehensions that an opportunity would be sought to gratify revenge.

The trial of the three Italians accused of an attempt to assassinate the Emperor, took place on the 6th and 7th instant, and resulted in a verdict of guilty, with extenuating circumstances in favor of Bartolotti and Grilli. The Court sentenced Tibaldi to transportation for life, and Bartolotti and Grilli to fifteen years imprisonment. The trial excited very little interest.

Bloomfield, Bishop of London, is dead.

Train for Salt Lake.

THERE has just been fitted out at Achison, Mo., one of the largest of those caravans or "trains" by which the commerce between the States and the Great Salt Lake Valley is carried. The train consists of 73 wagons, 876 oxen, and 90 men. It is laden with 140 tons of assorted merchandise, adapted to the Salt Lake trade. Some idea of the immense value of the goods carried by this train may possibly be had when we state that the freight alone upon them to Salt Lake will exceed $40,000. Similar trains are also fitting out at Weston, Leavenworth, Kansas City, Independence, &c.—[Exchange.

Wood's Meeting.

THERE will be a three days Wood's Meeting of the Church of Latter Day Saints held on the lands of Moses Ivins, Esq., near Hornerstown, Cream Ridge, Monmouth County, New Jersey, commencing on Friday, August 28, and continue over the following Sabbath.

The brethren composing the "Brass Band," under their leader, Elder Eardley, from Trenton, N. J., will be present on the occasion, and entertain the audience with some of their favorite sacred airs.

Presidents of Conferences, Presidents of Branches, Travelling Elders, and lay members of the Church, adjacent, that can make it convenient, as well as the public in general, are respectfully invited to attend. R. D. TRESEDER,

President of Hornerstown Branch, &c.

The Kane Gold Medal.

AT the last session of the New York State Legislature an appropriation of $1,000 was made to get up a gold medal in honor of Dr. Kane, the Arctic navigator, which would be presented to the family. A smaller appropriation was made to compliment Captain Hartstein in a similar manner. The Secretary of State, J. T. Headley, entrusted the execution of this work to Tiffany & Co., of this city, and the medal has just been completed by them. It is of fine gold, and weighs fifteen ounces, making the value of the gold, exclusive of the workmanship, about $300. The medal is composed of three pieces, viz: the medal proper, and two glass faces, bound by a circlet of gold, which fits on the medal, forming apparently one piece. On the medal is a representation of the discovery of the open Polar Sea, made by Hans & Morton, and of which Dr. Kane gives so graphic a description in the second volume of his last work. The design represents the sea, with the sun setting in the distance, and birds hovering in the air, while in the foreground is seen the two discoverers, clad in bear skin, the one with a bow and the other with a gun, to distinguish the Exquimaux from the white man. At their feet are two dogs, and they are standing on a ledge of rocks that jut out far into the sea, the waves of which roll up to their feet. This scene is represented on a plate of gold not three inches across, and is certainly remarkably accurate. The work was all done with a graver. Every particular is as carefully elaborated as is if done on a plate three feet wide instead of three inches. On the reverse are the coat of arms of the State of New York graven in a similar manner, with a "matted" groundwork. A wreath encloses the coat of arms, the whole being elegantly chased. Around the rim is the inscription:

oooooooooooooooooooooooooooooooooooooo
o For his gallant services in search o
o of Sir John Franklin, o
o By the State of New York, 1857. o
oooooooooooooooooooooooooooooooooooooo

The medal will soon be transmitted to Judge Kane, of Philadelphia, the father of the eminent navigator.—[N. Y. Herald.

The Mob Murders in Iowa—Shocking Scenes.

IT is time that the lynchings which have recently taken place in Iowa were called by the right names, and the legal tribunals of the State were sitting about to vindicate the majesty of the law by the punishment of the wretches who have taken the law in their own hands The hanging of William B. Thomas, in Montezuma, was as foul a murder as was ever perpetrated by a mid-night assassin. The Oshkosh Herald gives the following additional particulars of the event:—"No sooner was the decision of the Court given (changing the venue, in order that he might have a fair trial) than a regularly organized mob of about two hundred men proceeded to the old court-house, where the prisoner was confined, and demanded, and by force took Thomas from the custody of the Sheriff, and amid the terrifying shrieks of the prisoner and the most hellish revellings of the mob, carried him away to a tree which they had previously prepared, in the suburbs of the town. Here, without even adhering to the customs of lynch law, or abiding by the honor of mob force, they placed the rope around the prisoner's neck, and demanded a confession of the crime. The prisoner pleaded his innocence. The rope was drawn over a limb, and the prisoner swung into the air. After a few struggles he was let down, and again demanded to make confession. Again he pleaded innocent of the crime. Again he was hung up and a fire kindled beneath his feet. The mob threatened to burn him if he did not confess the murder. Again he was let down. From the strangulation received, he had lost his strength and his voice. The mob still demanded a confession. The prisoner, in the faintness of death, persisted that he was innocent. Again he was hung up, where he remained until he was dead. The Herald says that this makes the tenth victim of mob violence in Iowa since the 1st of April—four in Jackson, five in Cedar, and one in Poweshiek.

Death of General Rusk.

THE extra which follows from the Nacogdoches Chronicle, of the 30th ult., confirms the melancholy news, which we published yesterday, of the tragical death of Senator Rusk:—

A great calamity has befallen Texas. One of her most distinguished and noblest sons has fallen. Thomas J. Rusk is no more!

A gloom hangs over our people—a mystery, thus far, is connected with the matter. We can only give the facts, and mourn the sad stroke which has thus deprived Texas and the South of a valued and useful companion.

Gen. Rusk has, ever since the death of his lady, suffered under a mental depression which, at times, bore him down beneath its weight. He has, to a great extent, secluded himself from society, and lately that despondency has been more marked and apparent to those familiar with him. A severe illness, from which he was just recovering, had prostrated him for weeks, and he was suffering greatly from a rising on the back of his neck.

On yesterday evening, about 2 o'clock, his family hearing the report of a gun and the fall of a body, ran to the spot, and found him lying dead upon the ground, behind the gallery at the back of the house, with a rifle under him.

A Coroner's jury was summoned, from whose verdict we extract the following:—

The cause of his death was a gun-shot (rifle) wound on the fore part of his head, inflicted by a rifle gun held in his own hands and discharged by himself.

No further clue can be given to this mystery. No papers or writings of the same day have been found, except a letter addressed to a gentleman in New Orleans, ordering a tombstone for his wife, with this inscription:—

"Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

Let the people mourn the loss of a man who, on the field of battle and in the councils of the State and a nation, has proved himself worthy the proud place already accorded to him in the affections of the people.

A duplicate of this extra, sent us by a correspondent in Nacogdoches, contains the following hasty postscript:—

An inventory of all his property was found in a portfolio, and the value of the same divided by the number of his children. He was buried this evening with masonic honors. An obituary address was delivered by the Hon. W. B. Ochiltree, which will appear in the next Chronicle, along with the full evidence of the matter.

John Hartnett

THIS gentleman has been appointed Secretary for Utah, by President Buchanan, and a more unexceptionable selection could not possibly have been made. He is a gentleman thoroughly qualified to fill the office, and of unimpeachable integrity. He will deal fairly and honorably with the Mormons, as well as with our Government, and whatever he may report with regard to the people and the affairs of that country may be regarded as strictly correct in every particular. We have been personally acquainted with him for twenty years, and know that his appointment will reflect credit upon the Government, and prove satisfactory to all law-abiding citizens in Utah. He will accept the appointment, and will leave for Utah in a week or two.—St. Louis Sunday Herald, Aug. 16th.

Pic-Nic Party.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8, 1857.

PREST. APPLEBY—Dear Brother: According to the request of Prest. Cannon, I take this opportunity to forward you a report of a pic-nic party given by the Saints of the Philadelphia Branch on the 3d inst.

The committee of arrangements for the day, composed of Elders Charles Williams, Wm. Moulding, and Wm. Wright, acting under the general direction of Prest. Cannon, met with the Saints of their respective districts, at Arch street wharf, about 8 A. M., and embarked on the fine and commodious steamer "Star" chartered for the occasion, which, after a pleasant half hour's run, landed us at a place called Red Bank, from whence we were conducted to a beautiful grove a short distance below, situated on the east bank of the Delaware, and affording a grand view of that noble river, and the numerous shipping which continually passes up and down on its bosom.

We found every accommodation at the grove which could be desired for a pic-nic excursion; such as a commodious building in which refreshments could be procured; swings and other contrivances for amusement; also seats erected in different parts of the woods, where those who felt so inclined could sit in the cool shade afforded by the thick foliage of the trees and watch the sports and mirth of others. Being thus surrounded with such favorable circumstances and company, which consisted of over 300 souls, we were not long in commencing the recreations of the day, by swinging, playing ball and engaging in various other amusements, and some had a delightful bath in the river.

About 12 M., the company being divided into three wards, with Elder Robert Shelton to preside over the first, Elder Wm. Wright over the second, and Elder John Slough over the third ward, were all seated to a bountiful repast, spread upon long rows of tables erected in a convenient part of the grove. The people were called to order by Prest. Cannon, and a blessing was asked upon the food by Dr. J. Clinton; after which all partook with a hearty good will of the good things provided—the particular names and qualities of which I need not enumerate, from their great variety and abundance; suffice it, therefore, to say that they consisted of almost every luxury which the markets of Philadelphia could produce, and displayed the great skill of our sisters in the art of cookery.

After "the good things" ceased to be tempting, (because appetites were satisfied) the following regular toasts were offered:—

The Requirements of Brigham Young—The mandates of heaven. Let Israel respond to his calls, or share the fate of Gentile nations.

Typographical Association of Deseret—Composed of masters of the Art Preservative of Arts. May their press ever retain its power and their issues prove profitable.—ANGUS M. CANNON.

Brigham Young—The Lion of the Lord. When he roars in the mountains all the whelps stick up their ears. Such a getting up stairs I never did see.—DR. J. CLINTON.

Utah—The asylum of the oppressed, the repository of Truth, and the guardian of virtue, honesty, and the rights of man.

The Enemies of Mormonism—Very faithful servants of their employer, old Mr. Lucifer. May they receive a full and complete inheritance in the old gentleman's dominions.—J. F. S.

Mormonism—The regenerator of the human family—the chain of our Union—'twill soon girdle the earth.—A. P. WELSHMAN.

The Nauvoo Legion in Utah—May it ever exist to defend the constitutional rights of her citizens.—DAVID BRINTON.

The company then dissolved itself again into different groups for further amusements, consisting in singing songs, (among which was the "hand-cart song" by four of the "hand-cart Elders, who favored us with their presence,) also in reciting pieces, relating anecdotes, and various other exercises, kept up with that hearty good will best known to the Saints till after 5 o'clock, when we were again called together, and seated according to former order, to partake of supper. Prest. Cannon called for order after all were seated, and then asked a blessing on the food.

After all had again satisfied their appetites, the following additional toasts were given:

Elders of Israel—Champions of Truth, in whose cause worlds on high are interested. How lovely our Sisters look while their eyes sparkle with joy. God bless them, and preserve our lives long to shield their innocence and protect their rights.

Sons and Daughters of Zion—Rather than depart from your God, depart from the earth through His laws.—ANGUS M. CANNON.

The young sons of God are the hope of Israel, but what can they do without the daughters?—DR. J. CLINTON.

The Age we live in—Foreseen by Prophets of old as a time in which the wicked world "make lies their refuge, and hide themselves under falsehoods."

The Ladies—The life and charm of society—who would be without them?—J. F. S.

Our Little Cannon—Keep it bright by constant use; and then with plenty of shot on hand, powder dry, and match in good order, will say to Israel's foes, "Clear the track."—A. P. WELSHMAN.

Brigham Young, Heber C. Kimball, Daniel H. Wells—God's acknowledged servants; may they live long upon the earth to counsel Israel.

The Saints of Philadelphia—Their kindness will long be remembered.—DAVID BRINTON.

At about half-past six o'clock we retired to the boat, and embarked for our homes in the city of "Brotherly Love." On our return trip we were entertained with many songs from the company, closing the exercises of the day with the song, "The Merry Mormons," the whole company joining in the chorus. At about half-past seven o'clock, P. M., we landed at South street wharf, all safe and sound, and well satisfied with our excursion. The smiles of Heaven seemed, indeed, to rest upon us all day. We were blessed with beautiful weather. No accident or anything else calculated to dampen our joys and check our mirth occurred. The most harmonious, joyful, and decorous feelings prevailed throughout. I do not believe that an uncouth word was uttered all day, nor that a drop of spirituous liquor was partaken of by any member of the party. Indeed, I do think that no evil, if perchance any was there, had power to exhibit itself, because of the overwhelming amount of good. We were accompanied by the Philadelphia Choir, under the leadership of Br. Wm. Kelson, who entertained the party with both vocal and instrumental music, causing the woods to resound with the joyous songs of Zion, and sending forth sweet strains of melody on the air to gladden the heart and adore the Giver of all Good, as our majestic steamer glided over the silvery bosom of the noble Delaware, on our way to and from the city.

We were favored during the day with the company of the following Elders from Salt Lake: Angus M. Cannon, Dr. J. Clinton, J. F. Snedaker, A. P. Welshman, David Brinton, Jabez Taylor, George Rowley and J. G. Pinder—the latter three were here on their way to Europe. They all unanimously declared that they had never attended a party of the kind where they enjoyed themselves better, and where a better spirit prevailed.

We also had the company of a number of responsible strangers, who expressed themselves in an equal satisfactory manner with regard to the amusements of the day and the company.

Great praise is due to the Committee of Arrangement for their wise management, and prompt and energetic exertions to make every one comfortable, and to have all things conducted right. The proprietor of the "Red Bank" excursion ground deserves great credit also for his gentlemanly behaviour and obliging conduct towards our party during the day.

JOHN F. SNEDAKER.

News from the Plains.

A COUPLE of gentlemen, Mr. Wm. L. Summers and C. P. Buist, arrived in this city on Saturday last, direct from Fort Kearney, and report that a company of nineteen men, having in their charge 824 head of beef cattle belonging to Russell & Waddle, and destined for the Utah expedition, has been attacked by a band of 150 Cheyennes and Camanches, on the 1st inst. The Indians came upon the drovers and fired quite unexpectedly, killing one man and desperately wounding another. At the time of the attack scarcely any of the drovers had their guns loaded. After recovering from the shock, they proceeded to load their guns as quickly as possible, and to return the fire. They think they certainly caused three, if not five, of the Indians to bite the dust.

But this little repaid them for their own loss. The cattle belonging to the drove took a stampede at the first charge of the Indians, and before the skirmish was over, they succeeded in running off twenty of the twenty-two of the company's mules and horses.

This happened about twenty-seven miles above Fort Kearney; and having only two horses left, the greater part of the company had to foot it back to the fort, which they did by a circuitous route in order to avoid the Indians, thus making the actual distance much further. The wounded man suffered excruciating pain during the entire route. The shot he received broke his thigh. He and another man were on the same animal, the wounded man riding behind with his leg dangling by the side of the beast upon which he was mounted. He also suffered greatly from the want of water, caused by loss of blood and riding through the hot sun.

On arriving at the fort, the limb of the wounded man was examined by Dr. Summers, who thought that it would have to be amputated. Dr. Summers is the surgeon of the fort and the brother of our informant.

The man killed by the Indians, was Wm. Sandburn, of Leavenworth City, and in the employ of Russell & Waddle, to whom the 824 head of cattle belonged.

On the arrival of the company at Fort Kearney, Lieut. Marshall who was in command, despatched an express to Gen. Harney at Fort Leavenworth. The expressman came on as far as this city—or opposite here, in the Territory—in company with Messrs. Summers and Buist, and proceeded on to Fort Leavenworth.

It is to be hoped that the force of Col. Sumner, with his well-known bravery and tact as an Indian fighter will be sufficient to recover the stolen property, and also to measure out even-handed justice to the red men, and teach them a lesson that they will not soon forget.

Correspondence of A. M. Mortimer.

CRESSONA, PA., August 10th, 1857.

PRESIDENT APPLEBY—Dear Brother: I have a few moments time that I wish to spend in a profitable manner, and I can see no better way to spend it than to put my ideas on paper and send it on for your inspection, if you consider them worth inserting in THE MORMON do so, if on the contrary you find me wanting throw me amongst waste paper, I shall not be offended as I make no pretentions to writing, and particularly for a public journal. I am grieved to see the indifference manifested by hundreds of my fellow beings with whom I daily associate, I mean a religious indifference to the gospel of Jesus Christ as now preached by the Latter Day Saints. Truly the people have every opportunity to hear and investigate the principles of eternal life, but they shun them and turn a deaf ear to the teachings of men of God, sent bearing the words of Life to a ruined and degenerate world: truly "darkness has covered the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people." If there ever was a time since the creation of man, that spiritual darkness reigned supreme it is at the present. Man vilifies his fellow man, the Saints are belied and calumniated, and all manner of evil is spoken against them for the truth's sake. I have often wondered whether their vocabulary of abuse was not almost exhausted. I think it is, and would advise some pious soul to get up an addition to satisfy the craving, morbid appetites of religious and political scavengers, who feast, Buzzard like, on the filth and offscourings of all nasty men.

But what can we expect from a people upon whom tradition, and the prejudices of education have taken such deep hold. They esteem the teaching of their fathers and grand-fathers to be of more importance than Holy Writ. The teachings of Christ and the Apostles as recorded in the New Testament are no more their guiding star. They have ceased to shine through the misty hazes of sectarianism. There are thousands of persons who would be Saints if the teachings of Christ did not conflict with their preconceived notions. Their prejudices are so great that they would sooner be damned than believe contrary to their former professions. Some people remind me of the Old Dutchman, "my fader von Ludderish, ish been Ludderish, und ish blile oh Ludderish." If each succeeding generation should carry out that principle, John would not have been the forerunner of the Messiah, Jesus could not have redeemed man, Paul would have remained a Pharisee, Luther would never have renounced the corrupt faith of his fathers, and battled against the dogmas of the Romish Church, and exposed to the world the corruption of the Roman Priests. O the vain and foolish teachings of the 19th century, based on the foolishness of man's wisdom. May not the teachings of the present day be just as void of truth as they were in the days of John the Baptist, Jesus, Paul? Does not the times call for another Luther to preach a crusade against the sectarian Churches and their doctrines? Or are they perfect, verily no. Paul says to Erasmus it requires Apostles and Prophets for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ; so, according to the teachings of Paul, they are not perfect, for they lack the necessary officers and organization—but enough of this, who does not see that sectarian teachings are man's wisdom, that they lack the spirit of truth, which Jesus says shall guide us into all truth, bring things past to our remembrance, and show us things to come? If they had that spirit to guide them into truth, there would be no need of these learned confused commentaries, there would be no occasion to quarrel about the true meaning of scripture, no occasion to have a hireling Priesthood, no occasion for disunion, strife, jealousy, hard words, or harder thoughts concealed within the breast, and like a fire ready to burst forth, to consume and destroy. They hate one another for the love of God. But they will err and teach the doctrines of man, they will teach opinions for truths, guess-work for certainty, darkness for light, leading the mind into the misty hazes of sectarianism, ever teaching and never coming to the truth, blind leaders of the blind, they shall both fall into the ditch. But will it always be so? Shall false teachers always dupe the people? No! the Kingdom of God is once more established upon the earth, righteousness and truth have kissed each other, man once more comes bearing the word of the Lord, teaching truth unsullied as taught by Jesus, and all inspired men from the earliest period to the present moment, enlightening the mind, illuminating our pathway with Gospel light, imparting knowledge and intelligence. But will the people receive it, do they not treat it as a thing of nought? But woe be unto them, they are trifling with the things of God, they are rejecting His servants and His proffered mercy. For this they will be held accountable; yes, verily, man is a rational being, endowed with reasoning faculties, and an intelligence of no mean order. It is expected of him to prove all things, sever truth from error, light from darkness, to measure with a comprehensive mind the vast goodness of God in revealing His will to man, to raise him from the ruined and fallen condition to glory and immortality. Yours, A. M. MORTIMER.

Sailing of Missionaries.

EDITOR MORMON—

Dear Sir: Elders Jabez Taylor, John G. Pinder, and myself, missionaries from Utah to Europe, will sail from this port in the ship Philadelphia, on Monday, August 17th, for Liverpool. We have been visiting the Saints and our friends in this region of country, preaching, teaching, and exhorting the Saints to live their religion, be humble and faithful to the cause of truth, and they have blessed us in return. President A. M. Cannon and Dr. Clinton have been very kind to us, and we pray our Father in heaven to bless them, for they are good men, men of God, being a good sample of those left in the mountains.

We cannot say, like those who have apostatized and left Utah, that Brigham Young and Heber C. Kimball are liars, thieves, and murderers, which some of us have been told since our arrival in the States; but this we can say, and bear testimony before all men, that Brigham Young and Heber C Kimble are good men, men of God, men who are spending their whole lives for the cause of truth and righteousness, and for the building up of the Kingdom of God on earth.

Men may spit and splutter all that their bellish and black hearts contain against the anointed of the Lord, against those whom the Lord has put at the head of His people to lead them on to Truth; but they cannot stay the progress of this work, with all they can do or say.

Mormonism is true. Brigham Young and Heber C. Kimball and their followers, are noble-minded men and women, living under the sweet influence of the Holy Spirit of God, and we exhort the Saints with whom we have been sojourning during our short stay in this country, to keep humble and faithful, and adhere to the teachings and principles that are now set forth by the Elders of this Church, and the Lord will bless them.

There have lately arrived in this city several apostates from Utah—men that we know are not good men—and as a servant of God, I further exhort the Saints "not to receive them in their houses, nor bid them God speed," lest they be influenced by them, and be partakers of their evil deeds; but let them take heed to the teachings of President A. M. Cannon, who is beloved by all good Saints, a terror to evil-doers, and they will do well.

With good will towards you, and all lovers of Truth, I remain your brother in the Gospel of Christ.

GEORGE ROWLEY.

Correspondence of Elder Martin Littlewood.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17, 1857.

EDITOR MORMON—Dear Brother: Having arrived in the great city of christianity and boasted learning, I thought it might not be amiss to give you a short account of my travels since the time of the seperation at Florence of the hand-cart missionaries; and having seen in your valuable paper that you expected we were all gone to our several fields of labor, I would say that there are several of the brethren back yet, who are working with their hands to procure means to enable them to get to the places of their several appointments. When we arrived in the States we found the Saints in very low circumstances, and money scarce. We held a council at Florence, and it was concluded that those who could get work had better do so. I left St. Louis and made my way into Illinois, where I went to work and earned sufficient to clear my passage to England. While there I found a number of Saints that were poor, but desirous of hearing the counsel and instruction that I might, by the assistance of the spirit of God, give unto them. They announced my arrival, and soon came together, when I preached to them on the first principles of the Gospel, and the necessity of their uniting all their energies to gather to the home of the Saints, where they could be taught more fully in the Laws of God.

I stayed there five weeks, preached four times each week, and was instrumental in the hands of God of arousing them to diligence. We had a refreshing time; the Spirit of the Lord was poured out upon the Saints, and many who stood back began to feel after the principles of truth, and to attend to all the meetings. Several came forward and renewed their covenants, with a full determination to live their religion from this time. The Saints bare testimony to the inhabitants of Caseyville of the power of God in these last days, and declared to me that if their lives were spared until the coming spring they would roll out for the Valley, either with teams, if they could, or hand-carts, if no other opening was before them. My counsel to them was, to rise with a united effort and start, for they are a noble-hearted company of Saints. They are organized in first-rate order, having thorough go-ahead men to lead them—Bros. Walter Roach, president, and Daniel Evans and Thomas Richards, counsellors. I believe the seeds of the Valley reformation have been sown there, that will be of lasting benefit to them. I found one family there of the old Nauvoo stock, that had fallen asleep; but through the spirit of the gospel and the influence of the Mormon preaching they have awoke from their slumber, and begin to see their need of gathering to Zion, that they may work out their salvation and be exalted in the Celestal Kingdom of our God. I left there on the 6th of August, and arrived here on the 10th, in good health and spirits, for which I thank God. I have secured my passage on board the steamship Argo, which sails on Wednesday.

I have enjoyed the society of the Saints in Williamsburgh since I arrived, in company with Bro. A. Ott, and feel that they are possessed of the true spirit of the Gospel, I thank them for their kindness to me and my brethren, and I pray God my Heavenly Father to bless them with His Holy Spirit and with means to gather home. I have delivered four addresses to the Saints in Williamsburgh and one in New York, and bear testimony that God is with His Saints in this Conference. Excuse my lengthy note. I remain your brother in the Kingdom of Patience. MARTIN LITTLEWOOD.

Correspondence from Elder Spiller.

ST. LOUIS, MO., July 30, 1857.

ELDER T. B. H. STENHOUSE—Beloved Bro.: Though some time has elapsed since I last communicated with you, yet memory is still as fresh and my mind as appreciative of our sweet associations together in the ministry in the past. In fact, callous must be that man that will not hold in fond memory those who as instruments in the hands of God—have accelerated his progress in the cause of truth.

We have received cheering news from our folks in Nebraska. Elder Britt, with his family accompanied by Elder R. Whiting and family, left here two months back for Nebraska. They have settled at Rockport about five miles above Florence. They have each a city lot given them. Elder Whiting says in his letter of the 29th ult., about three weeks after their arrival, We have planted as we have cleared, and to day is to be seen up out of the ground corn, peas, beans, potatoes, cucumbers, watermelons, mushmelons, radishes, turnips, tomatoes and carrots, all of which are to be seen from just breaking the sod to four inches above the ground.

I have also built a shanty, and Bro. Britt has a corner post up as the beginning of his house. There are two sawmills and a third one erecting. There is also a brick yard and two lime kilns. Lumber is $25 per 1,000 feet; flour $10 per barrel. There is plenty of wood, and they have the privilege of helping themselves to what they want. Notwithstanding the inconvenience of a prairie life beneath a tent in a city, (that is to be, of course,) where your next door neighbor is a quarter of a mile off; where your occasional visitor is the degraded Lamanite; where you are suddenly aroused from "tired nature's sweet restorer—balmy sleep;" by the serenading of the quadruped denizens of the forest, where the lightning vividly streaks the heavens, the thunder heavily looms along, and the rain falls in torrents, with other odds and ends of a frontier life. These families still rejoice in the Lord, and express their gratefulness that they are eight hundred miles nearer the object they set out for than they were two months back.

The reason why I particularly mention these circumstances is because you are acquainted with the parties referred to, and I know that it will be as much a source of satisfaction to you as to me, that, though they are engaged in pursuits entirely different to what they have been accustomed to, yet "CAN'T DO" still forms no part of their creed.

Myself and family still rejoices in the work of God. Though many of our acquaintances have returned from Utah, having resigned their calling as sowers of wheat for a mission to sow tares, they have had no influence and no admittance in my house. Had they emigrated to Utah with the express purpose to serve God and build up His kingdom on the earth, they would have been there still having confidence in, and enjoying the confidence of, the President and the authorities.

But many that left here were ex-officials, and being such they fancied they were important men, and calculated upon a considerable deal of flunkyism being shown them in Utah. Upon their arrival they had to endure the mortification of learning that in Utah reputation was not given to any man on credit, but only to those that were willing to wait until they had merited it. I have not the least doubt it was very horrible to them, very humiliating and degrading for an ex-official. That to them it was unbearable tyranny, and hence made their exit for the States, upon which the Utonians could cry

They only of themselves bereft us."

Finding that I have written quith sufficient to be a trespass upon your valuable time I will only add that I have still firm confidence in my God and in His prophet Brigham Young, and am resolved as ever to embrace the first opportunity to reach Utah, not to see what it is like, but to enjoy my religion, and to do what God, through His prophet and the authorities of Zion, will require of me.

Affectionately in the Kingdom of God,

GEORGE F. A. SPILLER.

Departures.

ELDERS JABEZ TAYLOR, J. G. Pinder, and George Rowley sailed from Philadelphia on Monday for Liverpool, and Elder Martin Littlewood on Wednesday last from New York for London.

A Distinguished Congress.

THE Twenty third Congress, which commenced Dec. 2, 1833, and closed March 3d, 1835, contained a remarkably large number of distinguished men, who have filled high positions under our government. Six members of that Congress, J. Q. Adams, (previous,) Tyler, Polk, Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan, have occupied the Presidential chair. Five members, Messrs. Calhoun, Johnson, Tyler, Fillmore and King, have been Vice-Presidents; and no less than eight members, Messrs. John Q. Adams, Henry Clay, John Forsyth, Daniel Webster, John C. Calhoun, James Buchanan, John M. Clayton and Edward Everett, have filled the office of Secretary of State. Thirty-two members have been Governors of States, and twenty-three members of the House have since served in the Senate. [Ex.

TELEGRAPHIC.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12, 1857.

A letter received to-day from the Superintendent of Indian Affairs for the Northwestern Superintendency of Minnesota states that the Yanctons had driven all the settlers from the neighborhood east of Big Sioux River, and that a portion of them had expressed themselves favorable to making a treaty. The Superintendent is inclined to believe that before all the troubles with the Sioux can be permanently settled it will be necessary to make new treaties with them, holding them by stipulations of a strong and binding character to the observance of peaceful relations with the United States and responsible for all depredations.

The President having returned to Washington, the members of the Cabinet to-day paid him a visit of respect.

Kansas News.

St. Louis, Aug. 14, 1857.

The Kansas correspondent of the Democrat says that Judge Cato has published an opinion, stating that the payment of taxes is essential to the rights of voters.

The Sheriff of Douglas county has given notice of his intention to collect the taxes.

Rumor says that Generals Lane and Robinson, and Messrs. Phillips, Conway, Blood and others, have been indicted by the grand jury at Lecompton.

In a speech on the 5th inst., Gen. Lane announced the organization of eleven thousand men to protect the polls at the election in October, and stated that the number would be increased to twenty-five thousand.

Fatal Explosion of a Powder Magazine.

HALIFAX, Aug. 14, 1857.

The Merchants' Powder Magazine, containing the whole stock of powder in Halifax, exploded with a terrific concussion, shortly after midnight, last night. One man was killed and fifteen others were seriously injured. Five houses were demolished and several damaged. The Government magazine and the new barracks were much shattered, and nearly all the windows in the northern part of the city were broken. The damages are estimated at $100,000. The magazine is supposed to have been fired by an incendiary. For hours the excitement was intense. Many persons had been thrown from their beds, and others, bewildered, rushed into the streets for safety, believing an earthquake had occurred.

More Indian Outrages

St. Louis, Aug. 15.

Advices from Fort Kearney state that a party of nineteen drovers, charged with upwards of 800 head of cattle, destined for the benefit of the Utah expedition, were attacked twenty-one miles above the fort, on the 1st instant, by a party of 150 Cheyennes.

All the cattle and twenty-one mules were run off, and one man killed, and another severely wounded. Three of the Indians were slain. Colonel Tudor had started in pursuit of the Indians.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17, 1857.

MAJOR HEISS, of the States, gives the Washington Union "Jessie" this evening.

Major Lee, the United States Consul at Basle, died of lock-jaw in this city on Saturday last. He had been accidentally wounded in the foot by a pistol in his own hands. His remains were, this morning, conveyed to Virginia.

There was a general fight among the colored gentlemen at a negro church last night—sticks, brick-bats and stones. No serious damage done.

The War department received a despatch this morning confirming the news of the Cheyenne Indians stealing 800 head of cattle—not from the army, but from the army contractors. They were being driven in advance of the army for Utah.

News from Kansas.

St. Louis, Aug. 18, 1857.

THE Kansas correspondent of the Democrat says that nearly two hundred indictments had been found against persons residing in the neighborhood of Topeka, and that six men had been arrested in Franklin Co. by dragoons and taken into camp. Rumor says that Gov. Walker is indignant at Judge Cato's decision that payment of taxes is the requisite qualification for voters.

Ex-Governor Robinson has been notified to appear at Lecompton on the 8th instant for trial, on the old charge of usurpation of office.

A Husband Advertised.

BELOW we copy an advertisement from the Cleveland Plaindealer, without charge, for the sake of the style, which is decidedly refreshing:—

My late husband, Isaish Faulkner has lately advertised to the public that I have left his bed and board without any provocation and that he will pay no debts of my contracting. Now, it is true that I have left him, but not his bed or board. He never had a bed that wasn't borrowed, nor any "board" worth having, except what he picked out of the river during the last spring freshet. As for paying debts, nobody will be wiser for his advertisement; he has hard work to get to owe any, and don't pay, on principle, when he does. His promises are poor moonshine, and his credit a "dried up" balloon. I hereby give notice to all married and unmarried women to be on their guard against his coming around—he is red headed and dangerous—put him out! don't trust him on my account.

JANE FAULKNER.

Appointments.

ELDERS JOHN N. WAKELY, William Carter, William H. Lee, William H. Smith, William F. Bull, and Richard Hill are hereby appointed to travel and preach the Gospel in the Canadas. All the Elders on missions there will counsel and correspond together as often as necessary for the good of the cause, and the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God. They will act under the direction of the Presidency at New York, and report their labors from time to time.

All these brethren and those heretofore appointed on missions there, will labor, according to their appointments, until further orders, in preaching the Gospel, baptizing those who believe, organizing Churches, hunting up the lost sheep, building up the Saints, comforting the hearts of all those who wish to do right, and counselling them in relation to their duties; gathering to Zion, &c. Always endeavoring to preach wherever a place may be open, and to labor in new places as much as possible.

They will also act as agents for THE MORMON, obtain all the subscriptions, donations, &c. they can, and remit the same to us at New York.

W. I. APPLEBY, President, &c.

Notice to Subscribers.

As the SIX-MONTHS' subscription to the Third Volume of THE MORMON expired with the previous number, we hereby notify all whose subscriptions terminated with the twenty-sixth number, and who wish their subscriptions renewed, will please forward the same to us, as all papers will be discontinued, as the subscription expires, unless renewed.

It behooves us necessarily to adopt the foregoing rule in order to continue the publication of the paper.

THE MORMON.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The four is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui rè gle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés!" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit!" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ!" Nous aussi. Eurent, ils "l'espoir en la résurrection!" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ!" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.!" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.!" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lascivité, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "The Mormon." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

Notice.

The Saints who desire to send means to their friends in Europe, can have the same attended to, by forwarding any sum they wish in current money, to this office, enclosing one dollar or more, in proportion to the amount sent, to defray the expenses of procuring Bills of Exchange, making remittances, foreign postage, &c., describing particularly to whom, and where they wish to have it sent; at the same time not holding myself responsible in any manner whatever unless the money reach me.

All subscriptions, donations, &c., for the support of The Mormon, or Conference Fund (except the donations and Conference Funds raised in the Philadelphia Conference, which will be forwarded as usual through President Cannon) must be sent hereafter to my address; as also Tithing; P. E. Fund, and donations for the Temple from those who wish to contribute the same, so each person may be duly credited, and the means forwarded to Zion, and have their names entered in "The Book of the Law of the Lord."

No Power of Attorney, or other legal instrument of writing, going to Europe or elsewhere, forwarded to us for the purpose of sending to Washington in order to obtain the attestation of the Department, and the British Consul's Certificate and seal to the same, will be attended to in future, unless the means to defray the expenses and foreign postage accompanies the Instrument, as there is considerable expense attending it as well as labor. We would like to oblige all, and are willing to give our services when we have opportunity; but we cannot advance means to defray such expenses.

All communications intended for The Mormon should be addressed—Editor of The Mormon, New York. Otherwise direct to my address, Box No. 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. Appleby.

Notice to Subscribers.

We frequently receive remittances for subscriptions to The Mormon, without the sender giving the name of the place he desires the paper to be sent to. Sometimes the name of the Post Office or town is mentioned, but not the county, and as there are several towns in some States by the same name, unless the county is designated we are at a loss to know where to direct the papers ordered. We wish all communications to us to name distinctly the Post Office or town, county, and State or Territory, as then there will be no mistake.

PARTICULAR NOTICE TO

HORACE E. DIMICK & CO.'S
GREAT WESTERN EMPORIUM,
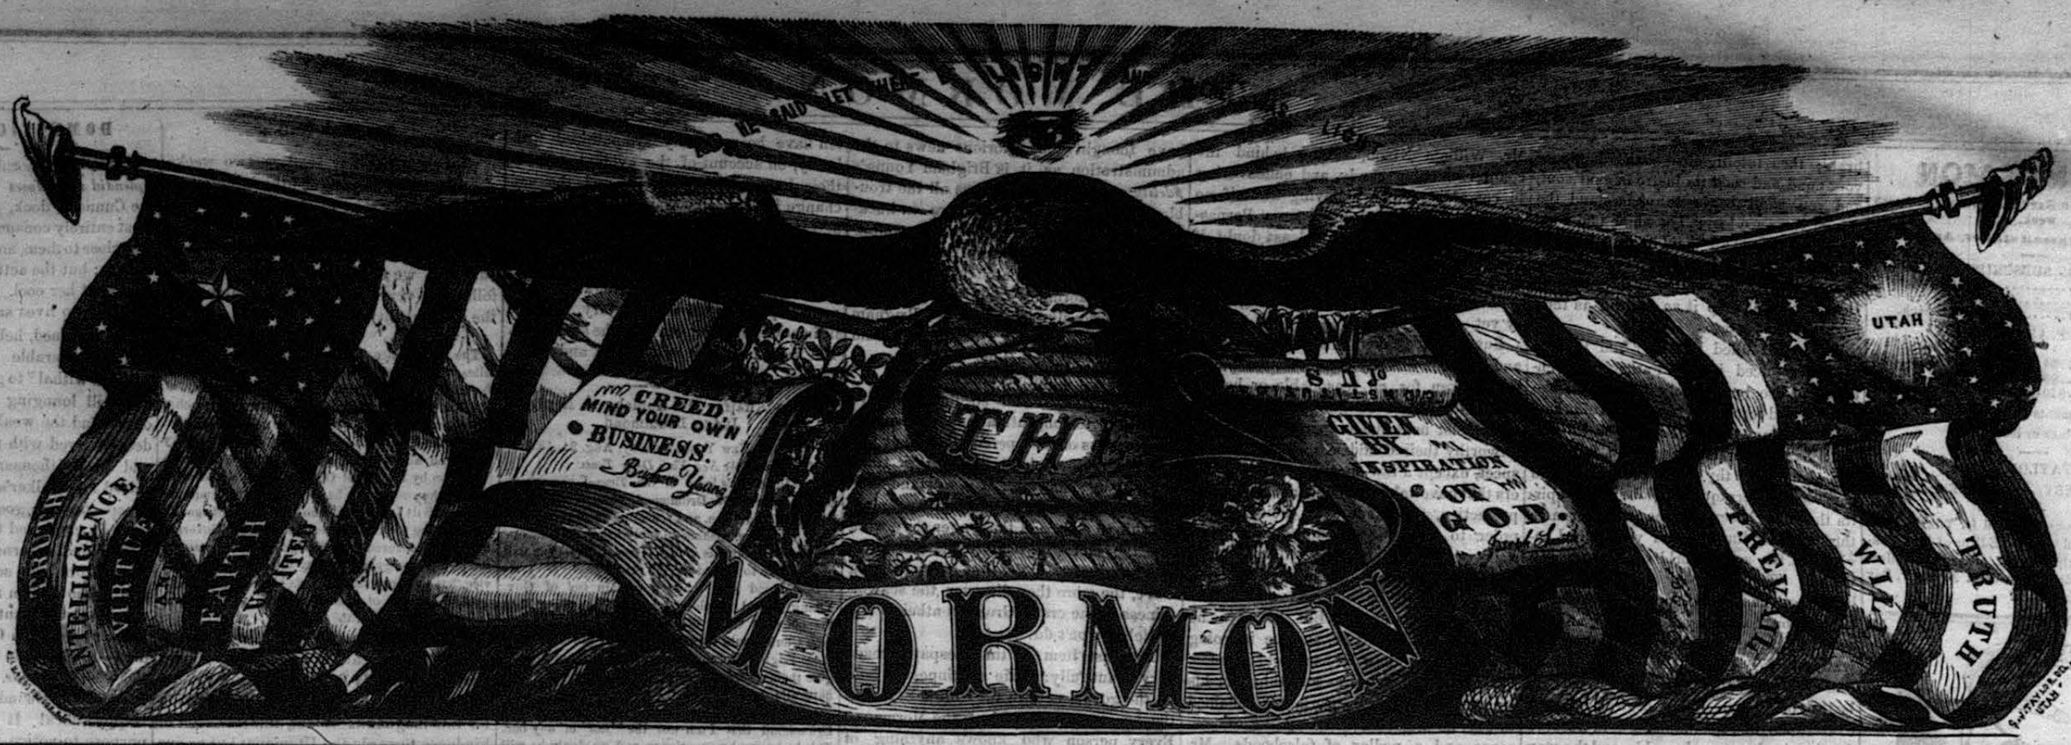
No. 42 Main Street, St. Louis, Mo., (at the Sign of the Deer in Windows.)

We are now in receipt of our stock of Goods for the coming season, which enables us to say, that we have now in store, and for sale, the largest and most complete assortment of Guns, Pistols, Sporting Apparatus, and Goods selected expressly for the arming of wagon trains, for crossing the plains, the markets of Santa Fe, Salt Lake, and Oregon, &c., that can be found in any house in the Western Country!

Among the most staple articles now on hand, can be found upwards of 2,000 Double and Single Shot Guns; 2,500 Muskets and United States Rifles, both new and second-hand, with flint or percussion locks; Colt's Revolvers, of all sizes, always on hand, in quantities to satisfy almost any demand, and at Eastern Prices. Also, all the most improved patterns of Revolvers and other Pistols now in use.



N. B.—We, the undersigned, being practical men in all matters appertaining to the arming and equipping of Emigrant and Merchant wagon trains for crossing the plains, renders our experience worthy of consultation, to make it the more easy for the emigrant and trader to supply themselves with the necessary articles, viz: Fire Arms, Fixed Amunition, Provisions and Groceries, of all kinds Wagons, Tents, Horses, Mules, Oxen; in short, everything necessary for their comfort.

We also beg leave to call the attention of Eastern Hunting Parties, that wish to spend a few months on the plains, that we have all the necessary arms and equipments, and at prices as low as they can be furnished in any Eastern city.

We keep constantly on hand, (or make to order,) Target, Hunting, and Minnie Rifles, which we guarantee to be superior to any in the country.

We also keep constantly on hand the CELEBRATED SHARP'S PATENT RIFLE, which is the safest and most destructive weapon ever invented, for sale at the Manufacturer's prices, for cash.

Please call and examine for yourselves, as it is no trouble for us to answer questions, or show goods. Remember the place, No. 42 North Main street.

Poetry.

A Hymn of Thankfulness.

BY W. G. MILLS.

Mighty God of Zion hear us,
Fervently our prayers we raise;
Shades of sin and death were near us,
And we walk'd in folly's ways;
But to spare us
Thou again hast shown us grace.

Day and night Thy Prophets seeking
Our eternal interest,
By Thy Holy Spirit speaking
Our degraded state express'd;
And awaking
We ourselves and sins detest.

Now we thank Thee, precious pardon
To the sinner Thou dost give;
And the heart that will not harden
In his sins, may turn and live;
Gracious Guardian,
Our deep gratitude receive.

Help us by Thy Holy Spirit,
All our cov'nants to fulfil;
We will live and seek to merit
All the blessings of Thy will,
And inherit
Bliss with Thee on Zion's hill.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

Progress and Prospects of the Enterprise —A General Summary of the Proceedings Thus Far.

HISTORICAL AND EXPLANATORY.

From the Special Correspondence of the New York Daily Times.

U. S. Steam Frigate "Niagara," Cove of Cork, Ireland, July 30, 1857.

The several vessels of the Telegraphic fleet have assembled here; the cable is all shipped; the preliminary investigations and experiments have all been made; to-morrow we sail from Valentia Bay, and on Monday next the European end of the great Cable will be made fast to the Irish shore. It has been decided, as you already know, that the Niagara is to commence laying down the cable from the coast westward, —that she will be accompanied by all the vessels of the fleet, and that upon reaching mid-ocean the Agamemnon will "take up the wondrous tale," join her cable to that of the Niagara and complete the connection by proceeding to the coast of Newfoundland. This seems to me a far better arrangement than the one originally proposed,—which was that both vessels should go to the middle of their route, join ends and then proceed in opposite directions, laying out the cable towards either coast:—and I am a little surprised to learn that the change was not resolved upon without some considerable difference of opinion in the Board of Directors. One end of the cable will now be fast, so that in any contingency this cannot be lost:—there will be much less weight in cable to be sustained at any one time:—all the vessels of the fleet will now be together to give each other aid in any emergency:—the progress of the enterprise can be reported from day to day to the European station, and the whole will go forward as one work, having all the evident advantages of unity of purpose and of detail, instead of being subetantially two—as it would have been upon the plan first proposed. The superiority of the new plan over the old one in the judgment of business men, is shown by the fact that insurances have now been effected upon portions at least of the cable, which it was found impossible to do before the change—though the rate even now charged is twenty per cent.

Of course all of us who are in the work are sanguine of its success. But it is impossible not to see that the same feeling of confidence does not pervade the business community at large upon this side of the water. The magnitude of the undertaking and peculiar and novel character of the difficulties which attend it, very naturally create great doubt in the minds of cautious people,—and I think the prevailing impression in the English mind is, that the enterprise will fail. At the same time the feeling is universal, that the failure, if it occurs, will be only temporary, —that the effort will be at once renewed and will be prosecuted, under whatever difficulties and against whatever obstacles, to final and complete success. For my own part I confess my surprise at the extent and perfection of the precautions which have been taken against perils of every kind. There has been one very serious and singular blunder, certainly, in the construction of the wire,—one-half of it being twisted from right to left and the other half from left to right. The consequence of this must be that when the two ends are united any strain upon the cable must tend to untwist the whole. There has been a little newspaper controversy as to the responsibility for this curious mistake, each of the manufacturing establishments concerned alleging its own innocence, on the ground that it was entirely ignorant of the proceedings of the other. In such a work the Directors or Superintendent of the Company ought to have taken care that there should be no such ignorance, but that both should have labored with a perfect knowledge of each other's plans and modes of proceeding. All, however, now concur in saying that the mistake is one of slight importance, as it is evidently their interest to do. I hope it may prove so, but I have my fears. It is suggested that by placing a heavy piece of metal between the two ends, by joining each in other words to a solid mass, both will be kept in their places and the untwisting prevented, inasmuch as the untwisting of one would turn the metal in one direction, while that of the other would turn it in the opposite direction, and the two tendencies would thus neutralize each other. Whether it has been decided, however, to resort to this mode of obviating the difficulty, I am not aware.

You have already received ample and abundant descriptions of the various processes of the manufacture of the cable, its transfer to the holds of the two ships, and the machinery arranged for paying it out over their sterns. I shall say nothing, therefore, of all this, except as may be necessary in connection with the several sources from which danger may be apprehended. The cable is to be sunk, as the vessel proceeds, solely by its own weight, and its size has therefore been very carefully adapted to meet the several conditions which this implies. It must be heavy enough not to be swayed to and fro by the various currents and counter-currents which it will encounter in its descent, for the existence of such currents has been very clearly demonstrated by the deep-sea soundings which have been so carefully and diligently prosecuted during the last few years. In the next place it must not be too heavy, or the weight of that portion of it which must be suspended from the stern of the ship, before it can reach the bottom, would render it utterly unmanageable. It was this defect which occasioned the loss of the cable in the Mediterranean. It had been made very heavy, in order to be very strong. It broke, upon a violent plunge of the vessel, and was found to have parted at a distance of about half a mile. And it was indispensable, in the third place, that the cable should be flexible, as it must be coiled, wound around drums, and handled in a variety of ways. And yet it must also be stiff enough to be rigidly in a straight line, when once laid down. The weight of the cable, as finally decided upon, after a great variety of very carefully-conducted experiments, is from nineteen hundred weight to one ton; and every part of it has been proved, by actual test, to be capable of bearing, with impunity, a direct strain of four tons. When it is immersed in salt water its relative weight will be considerably diminished, its downward pressure being somewhat under 14 cwt. per mile. The greatest depth of the sea along the line where the cable is to be laid is 12,420 feet, or a little over two miles; consequently, if enough of the rope were suffered to hang motionless from one of the vessels to reach the bottom in this depth, the strain to be borne by it would be less than a ton and a half. This will be still further reduced by the fact that while the vessel is in motion, the cable will be buoyed up by its friction upon the water. The strain put upon it will not be like that put upon a rope by a depending weight, but like that put upon the thread of the silk-worm as it is reeled off rapidly from the cocoon. There seems, therefore, no reason to apprehend any danger to the cable from its own weight. It is strong enough to sustain a strain far greater than is likely to be put upon it, at all events, in good weather and under ordinary circumstances.

Great care had been taken in selecting, for the work of laying the cable, that season of the year which promised to be freest from the three dangers to which the sea in this latitude is subject,—fog, ice and storms. Lieut. Maury collated observations made in the Atlantic during 260,000 days, in order to ascertain the precise time of the year most favorable for the prosecution of the work. The result of the inquiry was that if fogs were the only obstacles, the winter months would be better than the summer months; if ice were the chief danger, August would be the best month; and if storms were most dreaded, then the month of June. Taking ice, fogs and storms all into consideration together, Lieut. Maury came to the conclusion that "between the 20th of July and the 10th of August both sea and air are usually in the most favorable condition for the laying down of the wire. All the contracts and appointments of the company were accordingly made, with a view to the completion of the work within the period named. But they have not been wholly successful. It will be the 3d of August before the work of laying the cable will be commenced. The line over which the vessels will proceed while dropping the cable will be, as nearly as possible, the arc of the great circle which lies between the mid-entrance of Trinity Bay, Newfoundland, and the mid-entrance of Valentia Harbor in Ireland. The length of the arc is 1834 miles, and its central point is in latitude 52 deg. 4 min. N., and in longitude 32 deg. 82 min. W. The maximum speed of the vessels, while paying out the cable, is estimated at five miles per hour,—but probably 100 miles a day is quite as much as they will be able to accomplish. The 20th of August, therefore, is quite as early a day as their arrival on the Western Coast can be anticipated, even if they should suffer no detention from storms. As you already know, the cable is 600 miles longer than the route upon which it is to be laid; this provision has been made purely as a precautionary measure,—in case the vessels should be driven out of the direct and shortest route,—in case any portion of the cable should require to be cut away, &c. It is undoubtedly ample for all contingencies which are at all likely to arise.

The machinery for paying out the cable has been very carefully adapted to meet all the service that may be required of it—in calm and in storm—and is intended to give the most complete control and mastery of the cable under all circumstances. The controlling machine, as it is styled, stands behind the mizen-mast, and occupies the whole deck. Four cast-iron sheaves, or cylinders, about five feet in diameter, are ranged in line with one another, fore and aft. The first, commencing forward, is single-grooved; the second and third are double-grooved, and the fourth is single-grooved. The cable, as it comes up from the hold of the ship, passes over one of the grooves in the second drum—then under it backwards and over and around the first single drum—thence it returns over the remaining groove in the second—then it goes directly across to one groove in the third, following but a small arc in its periphery—thence to the last single drum, and downward around this back to the preceding double one, and, finally, over the unoccupied groove in that to a fifth grooved drum standing out upon rigid arms over the stern, from which it is dropped into the sea. The grooves in all these drums are exactly adapted, in size and form, to the cable. The passing and re-passing of the cable over them serves to afford friction-surface for controlling the velocity of the rope in passing out. But additional checks for this purpose are provided. The four drums are so connected by gearing that their motions are exactly coincident—the motion of any one of them involving corresponding motion in all the rest. Upon two of the shafts, moreover, friction-brakes —the same in principle as those used upon railroads—are applied, to control the velocity of the drums; and to these, which are worked by a screw, is attached a balance, which will indicate the precise amount of strain thrown upon the cable at any moment. The screw is worked by a crank, at which will be stationed an officer whose duty it will be to watch the balance and regulate the friction of the brakes accordingly. In the electrician's department, there will be signals every second, by electrical currents, passed through the entire length of the cable, from the ship to the shore. At the side of the vessels, there are also patent logs, hanging down into the water, with vanes and wheels, turning faster or slower, according to the velocity with which the ship drags them through the water. One of these wheels has been so arranged as to make and break an electric circuit at every revolution, and record upon the deck of the ship, by apparatus provided for the purpose, the speed of the vessel. A bell will also sound upon every passage of the electric current through the cable. The brakesman, therefore, will watch the balance which indicates the strain upon the cable, and tighten or relax it, as occasion may require. He will also listen for the bell, and, if at any time its sound ceases—indicating an interruption in the circuit—he will stop the machinery, the vessel will be backed, and a winding machine, provided for the purpose, and worked by a horizontal steam-engine of about 20 horse-power, will be at once set to work, gathering up the slack rope as the vessel moves astern—the electrician all the while testing the insulating continuity of the cable yard by yard, until the defective portion has been discovered. This will then be cut out and the gap supplied by joining up the ends of the uninjured parts, when the paying out and testing will be resumed as at the first.

Special provision, too, has been made for storms. In ordinary weather, or even with brisk, strong winds, either ahead or astern, the work can go on without interruption, as the motion will not be so great as to prevent the machinery from retaining complete control of the cable. But, if the wind should blow so heavily as to make it necessary for the vessel to come up head to the wind, an apparatus has been prepared for paying out over the bow, similar to that already described. And in case a regular gale should arise, strong enough to render it impossible for the vessel safely to retain hold of the cable at all, preparations have been made for abandoning it temporarily. Upon the deck stand two large reels, each wound round with a very strong auxiliary cable, composed of iron wire only, and capable of resisting a strain of ten or twelve tons. Of this there are about two miles and a half on each reel. In case of a heavy storm, rendering necessary the abandonment of the cable, it would be cut, and the sea end attached to the end of one of these strong iron cords wound upon the reel. This would then be rapidly led out, and the Telegraph cable lowered to the bottom of the sea, leaving the entire strain of the tempest to be borne by the iron cord. As soon as possible, moreover, the end of this cord would be attached to immense buoys, shaped like the quill float of the angler's line, and provided with reflectors, so as to be easily seen, which would be tossed overboard, and left to sustain the cable until the storm should subside, when they would again be picked up and the cable recovered and rejoined to the part remaining upon the ship, and the work proceed as before.

It will be seen from this statement that nothing which prudence and intelligent foresight could suggest, has been left undone to provide against contingencies, and insure the successful accomplishment of this great work. So far as the mechanical part of it is concerned—the laying down of the cable—I see no room to doubt its success. It seems to me probable, to say the least, that within a month from the present time, the telegraphic cable will be safely deposited upon the bed of the Atlantic,—its two ends firmly secured to the Irish and the American Coasts respectively. Nor is there any apparent difficulty in its remaining there undisturbed by any of the ordinary agencies that vex the ocean. Storms cannot reach it. The bed upon which it will lie is, as you know from the published surveys, almost level,—lying from 2,000 to 12,000 feet below the surface, entirely free from those sudden elevations and depressions which mark other portions of the bed of the ocean, and composed of what seems to be fine sand, but which proves, upon microscopic examination, to be the shells and outside skeletons of myriads of creatures which live in the tropical waters, and have been swept up into these northern lattitudes by the gulf-stream. The presence of these shells here proves the calm and undisturbed character of the water in which they are found. The cable once deposited upon this bed, is almost certain to be covered by the accumulation of these shells, which, moreover, have a tendency to agglutinate themselves round masses of metal, and preserve them from rust. There are many men of science who express the opinion that, if a telegraph cable were once deposited in this submarine burial-ground of the Diatoms, it would not only be in a tranquil and undisturbed retreat, but that after a few years, it would actually be built in there by a flinty pavement, which no trifling exertion could manage to penetrate,—that it would not only be at the bottom of the ocean, but would become an intregal and permanent part of the ocean bed. Nor is the cable in this latitude exposed to interference from the anchors of ships,—for it is not a region where ships ever anchor. The only danger which, so far as I see, the cable is exposed to, is that of icebergs drifting southward and getting aground, or grinding along upon the bottom of the sea, as they are known sometimes to do, for scores and even hundreds of miles.

It has been feared, and with much apparent reason, that the copper wire, which runs along the centre of the cable, and which is the only conducting and useful part of it, might be broken,—or so stretched and attenuated as no longer to answer the purpose of a conductor. Very complete precautions have been taken against both these dangers. In the first place, the central copper wire, instead of being a single wire, is a strand of seven,—six wires being twisted, side by side, around a seventh. It is not likely that the conducting wire will be subjected to any strain severe enough to break all the seven at one and the same spot. Some one or more of them may break,—but scarcely any two or them would be likely to break in the same place. Now it has been demonstrated that all of the seven wires might be broken at different parts of the strand,—and even hundreds of times, without destroying or essentially impairing the capacity of the wire for the transmission of the electric current. In regard to the second ground of apprehension, that the stretching of the copper wire, —in consequence of the weight it may be required to sustain while the cable is being laid down,—may impair its conducting power, the result of precautionary experiments is equally satisfactory. To begin with, there will be no such strain upon it, from the causes I have already mentioned, as would stretch it much. It was supposed that a weight of six tons would stretch it two feet in every mile. But the weight, as I have already stated, will not, in all probability, exceed a ton and a half upon any part of the cord,—which will not be sufficient to attenuate the copper wire to any appreciable degree. And, furthermore, Mr. Whitehouse, the electrician of the company, has shown, by a series of experiments instituted for the purpose, that if the entire copper strand of the cable were stretched 96 feet in every mile, the loss of its conducting capability would amount to no more than a thirty-seventh part. He connected three 200 mile lengths of the cable into a continuous line and then passed a current through the 600 miles to the magneto-electrometer. The weight of 745 grains was raised on the end of the steelyard and was thus the measure of the acting force of the current after transmission through the cable. He next made a break in the cable at the distance of 400 miles from the nearer end, and introduced into the gap there one mile of fine insulated wire, which possessed only one-eleventh of the capacity of the copper strand:—the proportion being ascertained by weighing equal lengths of the wire and the strand, —the wire weighing 3 grains and the strand 33¼ grains. A current from the same battery was now passed through the 600 miles length of cable, with the one mile of fine wire interpolated in its course, and 725 grains were lifted on the steelyard. This experiment was quite conclusive,—for the effect of introducing the mile of fine wire was practically identical with that of stretching the copper wire 96 feet in every mile. Indeed it has also been shown, in the same series of experiments, that the copper strand bears stretching to 20 per cent of elongation, that is, it may be stretched 1,000 feet in a mile, without being broken to its telegraphic utility materially impaired. It has never broken, indeed, until it was stretched on an extent of from 25 to 30 per cent. All chance of failure from this source, therefore, would seem to be removed.

It has been feared, too, that the insulation of the conducting wire might be destroyed or seriously diminished. The insulating substance, as you know, is gutta percha, and the coating put on is unusually thick, in order to render the insulation as perfect as possible. This object is also promoted by several layers of gutta percha being laid on in succession, so that if there should prove to be a flaw in any one coat, the imperfection is sure to be removed when the next one is added.—The efficacy of this proceeding has been tested by making a great number of holes, near together, in the first coating of a fragment of wire, and then applying the second coating in the usual way. The insulation of the strand was found to be perfect under these circumstances and so continued, even when covered wire was subjected to a hydraulic pressure amounting to five tons on the square inch. The utmost care has been taken in the preparation of the gutta percha, which is used as an insulator. It was first rasped from lumps of the crude substance, then rolled and macerated in hot water, then washed in cold water and driven through wire-gauze sieves, and afterwards squeezed and kneaded for hours by interrupted screws revolving in hollow cylinders, to get the water out and render the substance of the gutta percha sound and homogeneous.

After its texture had thus been perfected it was placed in horizontal cylinders, heated by steam and squeezed through them by screw pistons driven down very slowly. It emerged through a die which had a strand of the copper wire moving along through its centre. The strands are well drawn by revolving drums between the cylinders and through the die: they entered the dye bright copper wire, and emerged from it completely coated with gutta percha. Three distinct coats were given to the wire—and during the whole process a constant series of experiments tested the perfection with which the insulation was effected. So far, therefore, as any precaution can insure a successful result, there seems every reason to hope that the insulation, as well as the continuity and integrity of the conducting wire in the Telegraphic Cable will be preserved.

But supposing all these difficulties to have been surmounted, and all these sources of danger to have been obviated, there are many who still doubt whether it has yet been satisfactorily shown that an electric current can be transmitted through a submarine wire, by the power of a single battery, with sufficient force to be made available in recording messages for so great a distance. I have heard scientific men here in England say that they were of the opinion that this cannot be done—that the longest submarine wires hitherto laid down are only two or three hundred miles in length, and that even over these communication by Telegraph is subject to constant interruptions. However this may prove to be in the end, the matter has certainly received the most careful attention of the scientific gentlemen connected with the enterprise. I should be glad if the limits of a letter, and the popular character of such a correspondence would allow, to give somewhat in detail the history of the experiments which have been made and the results which they are believed to have established. But I can only indicate, in a general way, some of the leading conclusions which have been reached, leaving the more full account of the matter to be given in the Official History of the Telegraphic enterprise which will soon be issued under the authority of the Company.

In the ordinary arrangement of the wires of the electric telegraph, where they are stretched upon posts and insulated by glass and the surrounding air, the current of electricity runs along as a simple stream and with a velocity that is almost inappreciable for ordinary distances. But when the wires are inclosed in a sheath of insulating substance, like gutta percha, and placed in a moist medium or a metallic envelope, the case is very different. The influence of induction then comes into play as a retarding power. As soon as the insulated central wire is electrically excited, that excitement operates upon the adjoining layer of metal or moisture, and calls up in it an electrical force of an opposite kind. Each of these forces disguises, or holds fast, an equivalent portion of the other—and the electricity of the central wire is thus prevented from moving freely onward as it otherwise would. It is found, in short, that the submarine telegraph cable is virtually a lengthened out Leyden jar, and transmits signals while being charged and discharged, instead of merely by allowing a stream of the electrical influence to flow dynamically and evenly along it. And every time it is used it has first to be filled and then emptied. In the case of a long submarine wire this was found to be a task requiring considerable time—and this was found, moreover, to be very much increased with an increase in the length of the wire. And when experiments came to be made in 1851, upon telegraphic lines running underground between London, Manchester, and Glasgow, and upon others partly underground and partly submarine between London, Paris, and Brussels, it was found that the speed of the current did not exceed 1,000 miles per second. In that year Mr. Whitehouse invented a very ingenious method of determining with precision the force of currents thus transmitted; and the result of his investigations was to show that, in submarine telegraphs the wires act as reservoirs and not as mere channels—that the larger reservoir receives and holds a larger quantity than the smaller one, and that this naturally produces the most powerful effects when allowed to escape from its imprisonment. By 1855 the scientific corps had provided themselves with much more complete and perfect instruments for pursuing these inquiries; and the construction of new telegraph lines had also furnished them with better opportunities of making their experiments. It was soon found that a magneto-electrical current took a second and a half to discharge itself, when it moved through 1,146 miles of wire, in consequence of the retarding power of induction in this extended medium.

This was a rate of speed not at all compatible with any profitable employment of a transatlantic telegraph for commercial purposes,—and the next step was to devise some remedy for this inductive obstacle. The first thing done was to send different kinds of electricity along the wire in succession, in the hope that each transmission of one kind would clear way the residue of the other which had immediately preceded it. The result was a complete success. Although the same wire and the same magneto-electric combination were employed which had before demanded a second and a half for the completion of a single discharge, seven and eight currents now readily recorded themselves in a single second. When positive followed negative, and negative followed positive, in exactly equal proportions, the electrical

THE MORMON.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, AUGUST 29, 1857.

Origin, Object, and Destiny of Women.

The "Latter Day Saints" have often been ridiculed on account of their belief in the pre-existence of spirits, and in marrying for time and for all eternity, both being Bible doctrines. We have often been requested to give our views in relation to these principles, but considering the things of the Kingdom belonged to the children of the Kingdom, therefore not meet to give them to those without. But being very politely requested by a lady a few days since, (a member of the church,) to answer the following questions, we could not consistently refuse;—viz., "Where did I come from? What is my origin? What am I doing here? Whither am I going? and What is my destiny, after having obeyed the truth, if faithful to the end?"

For her benefit, and all others concerned, we will endeavor to answer the questions in brief, as we understand them. The reason will be apparent for our belief in the pre-existence of spirits, and in marrying for time and for all eternity.

Lady—whence comest thou? Thine origin? What art thou doing here? Whither art thou going, and what is thy destiny? Declare unto me if thou hast understanding? Knowest thou not, that thou art a spark of Deity, struck from the fire of his eternal blaze, and brought forth in the midst of eternal burnings?

Knowest thou not that eternities ago, thy spirit, pure and holy, dwelt in thy Heavenly Father's bosom, and in his presence, and with thy mother, one of the Queens of heaven, surrounded by thy brother and sister spirits in the spirit world, among the Gods. That as thy spirit beheld the scenes transpiring there, and thou growing in intelligence, thou sawest worlds upon worlds organized and peopled with thy kindred spirits, took upon them tabernacles, died, were resurrected, and received their exaltion on the redeemed worlds they once dwelt upon. Thou being willing and anxious to imitate them, waiting and desirous to obtain a body, a resurrection and exaltation also, and having obtained permission, thou made a covenant with one of thy kindred spirits to be thy guardian angel while in mortality, also with two others, male and female spirits, that thou wouldst come and take a tabernacle through their lineage, and become one of their offspring. You also choose a kindred spirit whom you loved in the spirit world, (and had permission to come to this planet and take a tabernacle,) to be your head, stay, husband, and protector on the earth, and to exalt you in the eternal worlds. All these were arranged, likewise the spirits that should tabernacle through your lineage. Thou longed, thou sighed, and thou prayed to thy Father in heaven for the time to arrive when thou couldst come to this earth, which had fled and fell from where it was first organized, near the planet Kolob. Leave thy father and mother's bosoms, and all thy kindred spirits, come to earth, take a tabernacle, and imitate the deeds of those you had seen exalted before you.

At length the time arrived, and thou heard the voice of thy Father, saying, "go daughter to yonder lower world, and take upon thee a tabernacle, and work out thy probation with fear and trembling, and rise to exaltation. But daughter, remember you go on this condition, that is, you are to forget all things you ever saw, or knew to be transacted in the spirit world; you are not to know or remember anything concerning the same that you have beheld transpire here; but you must go and become one of the most helpless of all beings that I have created, while in your infancy; subject to sickness, pain, tears, mourning, sorrow and death. But when truth shall touch the cords of your heart they shall vibrate; then intelligence shall illuminate your mind, and shed its lustre in your soul, and you shall begin to understand the things you once knew, but which had gone from you; you shall then begin to understand and know the object of your creation. Daughter, go, and be faithful in your second estate, keep it as faithful as thou hast thy first estate.

Thy spirit filled with joy and thanksgiving rejoiced in thy Father, and rendered praise to his holy name, and the spirit world resounded in anthems of praise and rejoicing to the Father of Spirits. Thou bade father, mother, and all, farewell, and along with thy guardian angel, thou came on this terraqueous globe. The spirits thou had chosen to come and tabernacle through their lineage, and your Head having left the spirit world some years previous.) Thou came a spirit pure and holy, thou hast taken upon thee a tabernacle, thou hast obeyed the truth, and thy guardian angel ministers unto thee and watches over thee. Thou hast chosen him you loved in the spirit world to be thy companion. Now, crowns, thrones, exaltations and dominions are in reserve for thee in the eternal worlds, and the way is opened for thee to return back into the presence of thy Heavenly Father, if thou will only abide by and walk in a celestial law, fulfil the designs of thy creation, and hold out to the end. That when mortality is laid in the tomb, you may go down to your grave in peace, arise in glory, and receive your everlasting reward in the resurrection of the just, along with thy Head and husband. Thou will be permitted to pass by the Gods and angels who guard the gates, and onward, upward to thy exaltation in a celestial world among the Gods. To be a Priestess Queen unto thy Heavenly Father, and a glory to thy husband and offspring, to bear the souls of men, to people other worlds, (as thou didst bear their tabernacles in mortality,) while eternity goes and eternity comes; and if you will receive it, lady, this is eternal life. And herein is the saying of the apostle Paul fulfilled, "that the man is not without the woman in the Lord, neither is the woman without the man in the Lord." "That man is the head of the woman, and the glory of the man is the woman." Hence, thine origin, the object of thy creation, and thy ultimate destiny, if faithful. Lady, the cup is within thy reach, drink then the heavenly draught, and live.

John Hyde, Junr., and His Book.

We have been waiting some time for to get access to "Elder" Hyde's book he has lately published against the Mormons. We have not had time, as yet, to review it as we would wish, but from a cursory inspection we must say we are astonished that any man, having common sense, could ever think of palming off such "pure stuff" as is contained in his book, much less the press applauding the work, and recommending it to the serious consideration and perusal of all people, as being the greatest expose of Mormonism, that has ever yet been published. We think it the most exaggerated, flimsy, trumped up concern we have ever read; assertions for proof and assumptions for argument, making deductions from false theory, absurd reasoning, and untenable premises, and basing his conclusions on surmises and positive falsehoods. The whole work, with few exceptions, is a tissue of fabrications and misrepresentations, the greater portion extracts taken from old apostates and others writings, their reasonings and conclusions: such as J. C. Bennett, Hulbert, Ferris, &c., even to the old, worn out, absurd, and ridiculous tale "The Spaulding story."

The book is a conglomeration of foolery, a heterogeneous mass of nonsense, and a compound of egotism, tautology, absurdities, bantlings, and squibs. A mountain has been in labor for some months, and with all the help of the "Old Granny" Editors, lo! and behold, a mouse is produced.

Mr. Hyde, among other absurdities, resurrects the old Solomon Spaulding story, also other ridiculous stories, and absurd reasonings, endeavoring to militate against the evidence of the Book of Mormon, which any school boy who ever knew anything about Mormonism, could overthrow and refute in five minutes. Mr. Hyde well knows, years ago, when he was in possession of light, truth and honesty of principle, that he has, time and again met, and successfully refuted, the opponents of Mormonism on the Spaulding story, and the very arguments and absurdities he now produces to militste against the Book of Mormon and Mormonism, was by him then considered the most futile argument that could be produced, and often has he laughed at the folly of those who used such arguments to militate against Mormonism.

But Mr. Hyde's light has become dimmed, his lamp has gone out, his star, once in the ascendant, has fallen, and is now a wanderer in the filth and quagmires of apostacy, infidelity, and the meshes of Satan, pouring out his spleen and rage against a people whose shoes he is not worthy to black—a friend of the world, an enemy to the cause of God, and those who desire to do his will and obey his commandments.

We are somewhat acquainted with Mr. Hyde. He is a foreigner, from the Emerald Isle, we believe; yet he has the presumption and audacity to talk about aliens and foreigners in Utah. Consistency! whither art thou fled?

We knew the gentleman (!) in G. S. L. City, when he was clerking in the store of Mr. William Nixon, sitting behind the counter sucking candy, and endeavoring to compose poetry, believing himself, no doubt, to have hailed direct from Parnassus. And we have not the least doubt, if he could have had his own way, but what he would have been sitting behind the counter, sucking candy and writing poetry yet.

But we have taken farther notice of him and his book already than we intended to have taken, for no reasonable or honest man, whether he be Jew or Gentile, but what must hold him in perfect contempt, unworthy their confidence, esteem or respect, except a few speculators and leechers that have taken him under their special protection, and made him their tool, in order to make a few dimes, for pecuniary consideration, and nothing else, and when their object is accomplished, Mr. Hyde will be shunned and looked upon with contempt. But he says he has a work to perform, and he is going to do it. We know he has, so had Judas. Furthermore, he requires something for his support. Too lazy to work, and ashamed to beg, he has become a retailer of nonsense and a pedlar of falsehoods. Mr. Hyde, what do you expect to accomplish? Do you expect to accomplish more against Mormonism than all the apostates from the Mormons and others have ever yet done? Do you not know that they were all going to do great things, overturn Mormonism, and scatter it to the four winds? But where are they now and their works? Some of them have died in degradation; and those living, have fallen, a disgrace to mankind, despised and shunned by every person—drunkards and all—a stench in the nostrils of the Almighty and all good men. And, Mr. Hyde, we here say to you, that you will follow in their train unless you repent.

It is not the Mormons, nor Mormonism, that you are fighting against, but the work of the Almighty, and you will yet learn it perhaps when it is too late. If your strength should fail you in the day of trouble, and the pangs of eternal torment weigh heavily upon you, when you stand before your God, then will you know and understand that the work your puny arm has been raised to oppose, is the work of God.

Therefore go ahead, Mr. Hyde, do all you can, publish lies, lecture, defame, misrepresent, slander, persecute, and bring murder upon the innocent, if you can,—use all the influence (!) you are in possession of, which is not much, to militate against Mormonism, but it will never make any difference whatever to Mormonism, or the rolling forth of the work. What do the Mormons care about you or your lies, and contumely, they laugh at your folly, while at the same time they despise you and your influence. It will all turn upon your own head, and you will be the sufferer, and no one else, so go ahead and do your best, you are welcome to all the glory you can obtain by the career you are pursuing, both in time and in eternity. We would respectfully request you to strike off the title "Elder" from your name, as that does not belong to you. You received that title from the Mormons, and as you despise them, and all that comes from them, why wish to retain "Elder?" But we understand, titles are honorable, if they do come from the Mormons—brings the book into notice. Mr. Hyde is willing to have the titles of Mormon "Elder," Mormon "Apostle," and Mormon "Prophet" ascribed to him. "What a long tail our puss has got."

Brigham Young.

"Washington, Aug. 21, 1857.

"The Interior Department has received intelligence from reliable gentlemen and fugitive Mormons that Brigham Young is preparing to resist General Harney; that he has relapsed into the grossest infidelity and atheism, and that he continues to hold up the government of the United States to the supreme contempt of the Mormons."

Not being furnished with the names of the "reliable gentlemen" and those of the "fugitive Mormons" we are obliged to treat the above despatch as something intended to cover something else. The Interior Department has received no such intelligence from "reliable gentlemen." The last mail from Utah, instead of bringing back flaming reports of active preparations "to resist General Harney," brought the intelligence, expected by everybody who knew anything of he inhabitants of that Territory, that the Utonians were quietly pursuing "the even tenor of their way," and, to all appearance, likely to let the General and his army "severely alone." The fact is, the Utonians did not think the administration so destitute of principle and common sense as to fit out a hostile expedition against them, without first taking the proper steps to learn if the rumors of their rebellion were founded on facts, or were emanations from the corrupt hearts of the blackest criminals that had infested their Territory, and thus, in their charity, poor credulous souls, believing they were members of a republic, safe under the Presidency of a Democratic occupant of the chair of Washington, it is more than probable that they discredited the rumors of an expedition to Utah. But whether all discredited the rumors or not, one thing is not doubtful, there has been no arrival in the States since last mail to bring news of preparations for war. If the Department has received any intelligence of that nature it is false, and the "reliable gentlemen" are very likely to be some of the Western tall 'talking sutlers, ready to furnish another expedition, with the necessary "pork and beans!"

Brigham Young's "grossest infidelity and atheism" is a capital joke! We should have thought that glorious news to the administration, as it is Brigham Young's fidelity and theism that causes all the trouble, that brings the nightmare on huckster politicians, and sets them to dreaming about Imperium in imperio! But we guess that item of the despatch came from the "fugitive Mormons." It would please them gloriously to hear of Brigham Young's infidelity and atheism; it would be a balm to their aching consciences, a relief to their doubting minds.

How nice it would be for "fugitive Mormons" to congratulate themselves on the keenness of their perception—they had seen the ship sinking, and left in time; but how uncomfortable it is to stand looking, day after day and year after year, for the ship to sink, and the longer they wait, and the more they apply themselves to catch a glimpse of the first overwhelming wave, the more they discover the seaworthiness of the craft. Grossest atheism and infidelity won't do!

The last item of that despatch reads very beautifully: "He continues to hold up the government of the United States to the supreme contempt of the Mormons." Every person who knows anything of Brigham Young, knows that he is very anxious to have the people over whom he presides, usefully employed—now to hold up the government to contempt would be a very unnecessary and unprofitable occupation at this time of the day. Had he done so before the Judges went or ran away, it might have been to some account; but the greater part of the officials sent out there by Uncle Sam, have done that so effectually, that for Brigham to do so now, would be like "love's labor lost." The last thing we have learned that Brigham did say of the government was a kind expression of sympathy. He really was convinced that if the government knew the character of the Federal officers they had sent out to Utah, they would have kept them at home, for truly these representatives of Uncle Sam have done their utmost to bring the government into contempt and disgrace. All that Brigham could say or do after the gambling, drinking, horse-trading and libertinism of officials, whose names we could mention, would be unnecessary, and just such an occupation as his thorough practical mind would leave alone. Come, try something else.

The Cunningham Burdell Marriage.

The decision of the Surrogate on the Cunningham Burdell marriage was rendered on Tuesday. Emma Augusta Cunningham is in this decision, not the widow of Dr. Harvey Burdell, and letters of administration to Dr. Burdell's next of kin have been issued. The Surrogate has set forth a very clear, and evidently impartial statement of the evidence bearing directly on the case, and gives in brief, the following reasons for that decision:

1. The marriage was clandestine—and there is no presumption in favor of a secret marriage, neither preceded nor followed by cohabitation.
2. The clergyman selected was unknown to the parties.
3. The place appointed was distant from the decedent's residence.
4. The only witness chosen to be present was one of the daughters of the claimant.
5. The witness is contradicted by her own statements made under oath at different times, and by other evidence.
6. The certificate of the marriage affords no evidence of identification.
7. The certificate is incorrect as to the name of the decendent, and evinces ignorance or error as to the place of his nativity.
8. There were suspicious circumstances attending the transaction.
9. The marriage was not confided by the claimant to any member of her family save one.
10. There was no private or public act or acknowledgment, no cohabitation, but the alleged parties lived as single persons.
11. On the part of the claimant there were confidential relations with another person in respect to whom the decedent charged improper intimacy.
12. The terms of the settlement of the suit alleged to have led to the marriage, are in writing, and exclude the assertion of other terms.
13. The marriage took place after the settlement had been concluded and carried out.
14. The claimant executed written instruments to the decedent in her own name, after the marriage. She assigned a judgment, he drew a check to the order. She indorsed it, and he swore to the affidavit, in all which she was described by her own name.
15. At the settlement she stipulated for a new lease of the house.
16. Shortly after the decedent's death she released all causes of action, and abandoned her agreement for a lease.
17. He spoke of her with contumely and reproach, and made repeated declarations against marriage.
18. He was determined to compel her to leave the premises, and a new lease to another party was about to be executed.
19. The marriage was first announced after his death.

This decision was officially communicated to Mrs. Cunningham, in the tombs, and is reported to have made but little, if any change on her mind, so far as that could be judged by her manner. She is however dissatisfied, and says she will contest it to the last, and calculates that tardy justice will come along, sure to come, and she can wait a little longer. It is a matter of conjecture now, how far the present decision, which is against the marriage, may liberate Mrs. C. from the charge of felony, in producing the "bogus baby" as his heiress. It is the prevailing opinion that she has as many chances of escape punishment entirely, as there are that she will be punished at all. It is a complicated business, and as the "glorious uncertainty of the law" is a sentiment, the truth of which is as frequently sustained in New York as elsewhere, it is not improbable that she will escape the punishment due to her crime, and seemingly, crimes. In the meantime she is in the Tombs, and her family living away from her. The young ladies, Augusta and Helen have been greatly sympathized with lately, on account of the evident ruin of their hopes in the world, and the sad change in their appearance. A few weeks ago it was thought that Augusta was disgusted with the conduct of her mother in the baby transaction, and likely to reveal, if "drawn out," but the Surrogate's statement implicates her with perjury. Eckel's intimacy is not forgotten in the statement. The finale promises to be long and interesting.

Mormon Affairs—Mr. Appleby in Reply to Judge Drummond.

New York, Monday, Aug. 24, 1857.

To the Editor of the New York Daily Times:

Sir: In to-day's issue of the Times I observe an article from W. W. Drummond, wherein my name is called in question, and reflecting upon my character. Therefore, wishing to reply briefly to the same through the columns of the Times, I trust you will not hesitate to accord me the privilege.

Drummond says that "a certain tool of Gov. Young, named Appleby, who obtained for a time the office of Clerk of the Supreme Court, and as such Clerk would occasionally go to the houses of those English Mormons, administer to them an oath, give them a sort of certificate, and pronounce them naturalized citizens."

In reply to the foregoing, I would inform Mr. Drummond that I am not the "tool" of any one. This he knows by experience, and no doubt he will remember it. I was appointed Clerk of the Supreme and First District Courts of the United States for Utah when the Courts were first organized there by Judges Brandeberry, Brocchus and Snow, and have been retained as such by all the subsequent Judges sent to Utah (Drummond not excepted,) up to the present time, and have my Deputy acting there in my absence, sanctioned by Chief Justice Kinney and his associates.

When aliens presented themselves to declare their intention to become citizens of the United States, it was generally attended to before me in my office, and which was strictly legal in law. But whenever the oath of citizenship was taken, both the applicant and the witnesses were sworn in open Court, (generally in the District Court.) Their certificates made out afterwards, according to law, (approved by men skilled in jurisprudence, such as Judges Reed, Shaver, Kinney, &c., and not by an Illinois pettifogger,) and left at their residences. Was not that strictly legal, Mr. "Ajax?"

He calls me a "miscreant," and says I am bound by an oath unto the Mormon Church, and my associates in crime. Mr. Drummond, I will test characters with you any day, and let those who know us personally decide the matter. I despise egotism; but, Mr. Drummond, I am at your defiance, or any one else, to substantiate the first thing in truth derogatory to my character, either while residing in Utah or in the States. The object you have in spitting out your spleen at me is, because I have been on your track and headed you in your endeavors to bring persecution and bloodshed upon the Mormons, my family among the rest, because you could not be Governor of Utah.

Why don't you face the music, Mr. Drummond, in relation to your "Ada?" "sitting by your side on the Bench?" Why turn it off on Naturalization? But I turn the Judge (!) over once, and for all, to the editor of the Ogeawka (Ill.) Plaindealer, who is personally acquainted with the Judge and his character, as the editor personally informed me.

W. I. Appleby.

[The foregoing is our letter to the New York Daily Times, and which appeared in that paper of Aug. 25. And we might have added, that any man (!) who would leave a virtuous wife and family behind, as Drummond did in Illinois, go to Washington City, get an old cyprian and take her along with him to Utah, there introduce her as his wife, and have her "sitting by his side" on the bench while he was holding his Courts; and lodging with her, as we have seen him,—such a man is a disgrace to the government that sent him, a reproach, and insult to the inhabitants of Utah, and they would have been justifiable in kicking him and his "Ada" both out of the Territory. Drummond talk about "miscreants," a poor miserable poltroon.—Ed. Mormon.]

Look Out.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 20, 1857.

Presr. W. I. Appleby:—I take this method of informing you and all Saints, that William Woodburn was cut off from the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints," for unchristianlike conduct on the 18th day of May, A. D. 1857, in St. Louis, Missouri. Since that period he has been at different places, palming himself off as an Elder of the Church, and teaching heinous doctrines, calling it Mormonism, and practising various kinds of iniquity, thereby bringing disgrace on the Church he pretended to represent.

Very respectfully, your Brother in the Covenant of Peace,

H. S. Eldredge,
President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, in St. Louis and Western States.

[We would not be surprised if W. W. should now discover that the Mormons are a bad people, write a book, and aspire to see his name classified with the Reformers of the filthy Van Dusen, and "consequential Hyde" school. There are some dollars in the country, and they are easier to be had by exposing Mormonism than by the sweat of the brow. We don't know W. W., but as the world is a goose to pluck, we give him the hint by which others are profiting considerably.—Ed.]

Arrival and Departure.

Elder William Dallin arrived here on Sunday morning, on his way to Europe, and sailed on Monday, on board the packetship Ellen Austin, for Liverpool.

Brother Dallin stopped at Council Bluffs and earned means to enable him to proceed on his mission. He has, for a few weeks, been rather indisposed, but his health was again good. He thinks New York a wicked place, is astonished at the Saints living here a day longer than is necessary to procure the means to start West. He is not alone in his thinking.

Sunday Meetings.

The Saints meet every Sunday for Public Worship in Philadelphia at Mitchell's Hall, 312 Ninth Street—or York Avenue, above Vine, at 10 1-2 A. M. 3 and 7 1-2 P. M.; in New York, at Brooks' Assembly Rooms, 261 Broome Street, at 3 and 7 P.M.; in Boston, at Cochituate Hall, head of School street.

The Utah Mail.

We promised our readers two weeks ago that when we learned the intention of the government to send a mail to Utah, we should notify them of that very important fact. It is with superlative pleasure that we now place before them the following very interesting despatch from the Federal City:

Washington, Aug. 21, 1857.

The Postmaster General awarded to Mr. S. B. Miles, of St. Joseph, Mo., the contract for carrying the mails from Independence to Salt Lake City, at $37,000 per annum, monthly service, in coaches during such season of the year as coaches can run, the residue of the time on mules. Ample security was given, and it is believed the service will be in operation by the 1st of October. The department desired the contract to be given to a gentleman residing at Salt Lake City, who has been engaged in transporting the mails over the Plains. Governor Brown felt assured that this gentleman possessed the proper energy and ability to perform good service, but upon opening the bids his was found to be $100,000, which, of course, lost him the bidder at less than one-third of the amount.

Had it not been "the dog days" when we first read the above we certainly should have immediately doffed our hat in humble reverence and thanked the Administration for this magnanimous act, this other act of kindness towards the Utonians; but as our Kossuth was hanging on its peg we could only shrugg our shoulders and dig forward our head in the most approved French style. The perspiration then flowed down our cheeks in torrents, and fearful that bystanders should mistake the oozing out of our warmth of affection and sincere gratitude towards the government for the trickling tears of grief, we shouted capital! first-rate! vive Postmaster-General Brown.

"The king can do no wrong"—the Hon. Aaron V. Brown, Postmaster-General, was certainly intended for royal lineage—if not intended for a monarch, should have been one.

It is astonishing. A gentlemen in his relations with his fellow beings, would shudder to be guilty of a mean dishonest act, but make him a cabinet minister, and then "all things are possible." Let our readers calmly ponder over the letter of President John Taylor, in another column, on the preparations of Mr. Kimball to carry out faithfully and efficiently his contract with the government for carrying the mail between Independence and Great Salt Lake City and vice versa, from the 1st of December, 1856, to the 30th November, 1860, and ask if the breaking of that contract on the part of the Postmaster-General is calculated to raise the government of which he is a part, very highly in the estimation of Mr. Kimball, associates and friends, and all the inhabitants of that Territory, who are not permitted to hear a word of friendship or business from June to October, and these intervening months, almost the only months calculated upon by them to hear from their friends and "the rest of mankind." Need any one wonder that the Mormons talk? The fact is, the Utonians have been bullied, kicked, abused, and insulted in every shape and form, but in spite of it all, and contrary to the expectations of everybody, they re main loyal to their country. It does appear to us that the present government is spiteful because the Mormons will keep quiet, and they leave no stone unturned to goad them on to that rebellion which would justify the murder the troops now on the plains are ready to perform. We'll bide our time, and live to see our enemies covered with sackcloth and ashes.

Solemn Meditations

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 20, 1857.

Presr. Appleby: The following verses were composed by a medium, in Cincinnati, Ohio, while under the control of a spirit, and as they appeared to me a very pretty specimen of poesy, I concluded to send it to you for insertion in the Mormon, if you consider it worthy a place in its columns.

Yours in the gospel,
Josiah M. Cooms.

SOLEMN MEDITATIONS.

How blessed are the pure in heart, from vile affections free;
The fruits of goodness they impart, wherever they may be;
Let me be numbered with the pure in word and thought and deed,
And live that life that will ensure God's help in time of need.

Now the whole armor I'll put on, and fight my passage through,
To where the faithful all are gone—the pure and holy few;
Lord help me walk this lovely road, and leave all else behind,
And when to purity I've sow'd, eternal life I'll find.

Now in the morning of the day, the gospel trumpet sounds
For volunteers, and I'll obey, and tread the wine press round;
I'll follow those who've gone before, and have the prize possessed—
Who've all their trying scenes passed o'er, and entered into rest.

This pure, this bright celestial way, for ages hid from mortal eye,
I'm thankful I can walk this day with Saints of the Most High;
For Prophets, Kings, and Holy men, did long to reach this light,
Yet lingered out their days in pain, and died without the sight.

I will not flinch by night nor day, I will not cease the war,
While ever there's a foe to fight, or walk my castle o'er;
My pride and flesh I'll gladly stain, I'll sacrifice my all;
I must, I will the victory gain, let who may stand or fall.

[We make no comments on the poetry; but we always prefer to give credit to every author of anything that is praise worthy. We should be sorry to throw a doubt on the originality of the above through the spirit mediums; but there is so much plagarism practised in this world of ours, that we conclude it is safest to give names and dates, and take this occasion to invite all friends who are interested in what we publish, to share our faith and prejudice.—Ed. Mor.]

Domestic Summary.

On Friday morning, two steamboats—Splendid and Moses Taylor—lying next to the Cunnard dock, Jersey City, were almost entirely consumed by fire. The Arabia was close to them, and in imminent danger of the fire; but the active exertions of the firemen kept her cool. Loss considerable; fortunately no lives sacrificed.

The returned, helpless Fillibusters have had considerable trouble to raise the "where-withal" to get to their homes: some are still lounging around. Selfish world ours—and the wealthy portion of it is the deepest dyed with the disease. Thousands and tens-of-thousands of dollars could be raised for Walker's army, so long as his prospects were good; but the unfortunate tools he employed to carry out his ambitious object returned, and the Wall-Street speculators, who sent them out to Nicaragua, "know them not." "Success makes the man—the want of it the fellow."

Every week, in Gotham, there are murders—to chronicle them is the business of the Police Gazette. This week is not an exception! Swindling goes on bravely! Happy times! It may serve some good purpose to notice that a great amount of counterfeit $5-bills on the Lee Bank, Mass., have been put in circulation. All red-tinted $5-bills on the Lee Bank, Mass., should be refused—they are counterfeits!

The publishers of Putnam's Monthly have "busted up," and McElrath, the wealthy publisher of the Tribune, has "gone to the wall." The Herald is very anxious to know what he did with his eighteen shares when he "sneakingly withdrew his name from that very valuable 'nigger-worshipping newspaper.'" Picayune very humorously exposes this New York business-morality in last week's issue. With a few scrapes of his pencil, he places the very religious father, with closed hands, and "specs" lowering over his nose, and a thorough Methodistical air about him, giving his fashionable son the following key to prosperity:——

—"Yes, New York is the place to get on. Look at Jones; he started without a penny, and has lately failed for a hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Of course that's an extreme case. I don't expect you to do so well as that. Still, with honesty and industry, I see no reason why you should not, in the course of a few years, fail for fifty thousand dollars."

Few can content themselves with growing rich by honest industry. The pile at once! "Get money, my son, get money: honestly if you can, but get money."

The city has been considerably disturbed since Tuesday, by the announcement of the following failures:—De Launay, Iselin & Clarke, John Thompson and E. S. Monroe, bankers and stock brokers, and the reported failure of a Hartford Bank; the Rhode Island Central Bank, of East Greenwich; the Tiverton Bank, of Rhode Island; the Farmers' Bank, of Wickford; the Warren Bank, of Pennsylvania; the Bank of Kanawha, Virginia, and the Hancock Bank, of Maine.

Mr. Raymond, of the Daily Times, has devoted the earliest leisure, since his return from Europe, to reply to the "sledge-hammer" of Archbishop Hughes, which he published on Monday. The editor thinks he is a match for the "mitred gentleman," and wants a fair fight at the earliest convenience. They seem pretty well matched—"let them have a clear stage and no favor.

Roger A. Pryor, of the South, and a writer in the Richmond Enquirer, have just had a pretty tilt over the Administration, and the course of Governor Walker in Kansas, which led to an exchange of "cards," handed by "my friend," and nearly terminated with an order for "coffee and pistols for two." The "unknown writer" in the Enquirer was satisfied that something approaching a dozen charges of falsehood, made against him in the South, were not intended to reflect upon his personal honor, and they shook hands, and then—it ended!

Foreign Summary.

Favorable news from the squadron laying the telegraphic cable. Some slight accident, in laying the cable ashore, detained the expedition in Valentia Bay till the 7th, since that time every thing was reported well. At last advices they had got 300 miles on their track, and were paying out the cable at the rate of five miles an hour.

Turkey seems to vex Russia, Austria, France and Sardinia, in the course taken by that government in the elections of Wallachia and Moldavia. The Ambassadors of the four nations have presented notes announcing the cessation of diplomatic relations with Turkey unless the elections were annulled and made over again. Lord Palmerston assures the Commons that there was no reason to apprehend any difficulty between France and England over this squabble. The subject had been on the tapis at Osborne, during the visit of the Emperor, and the entente cordiale between "Monsieur Didon" and "John Bull" was in no danger whatever.

Louis and Eugenie had returned all safe to Paris, and her Majesty Victoria is reported to visit France shortly.

India is the all-absorbing subject of interest in England. Palmerston informed the Commons that 30,000 troops had been sent out to help the European troops there, and recruiting was being vigorously prosecuted throughout Britain. Several American vessels have been chartered by the government to take out troops from England.

Mr. John Bright, the great reformer and colleague of Cobden, who lost his seat in Parliament at the late English election, for his opposition to Palmerston's policy on the China war, has been returned to the House of Commons, by the Birmingham radicals, through the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Muntz their previous representative.

Dr. Dick, the author of "The Christian Philosopher," and many other works of a religio-scientific character, which have been and are still very popular on both sides of the Atlantic, died at Broughty Ferry, near Dundee, Scotland, on Wednesday, 29th of July, at the advanced age of eighty-three. Up to the close of his life he was an earnest devotee of the sciences, astronomy being his favorite study, and that in which he was probable most at home.

Editorial Correspondence.

DEER CREEK STATION, July 24, 1857.

BRO. APPLEBY—Dear Sir: I addressed you a long letter a few days ago which I sent to Laramie P. O., but as there is no certainty of the mail, I embrace an opportunity of sending this by a packer, whom I consider more reliable than the mail on this route, particularly at the present. We are informed here that there is a change of mail, and that it is taken from Mr. Hirum Kimball, under what pretext it is difficult for me to determine, for the last mail but one was carried in twenty-three days, and the last in eighteen; in much less time than it has ever been done in before. In fact the express company from whom he has obtained assistance are in better position to carry mail, or anything else, than any arrangement that Uncle Sam has ever had, or is ever likely to have for some time to come. They have laid out an immense amount of means and have stations all along the route between Horse Shoe Creek and the valley amply furnished with men, provisions, and animals. There is from eight to ten tons of flour at this station, fifty tons more are expected soon, besides oats and other necessaries for the route. There are seventy-six men engaged in building, hewing, hauling timber, &c., &c.: seventy-six horses and mules belonging to the company, and 123 cattle are employed in building purposes. They have been here about three weeks, they have fenced, broken and planted 15 acres, made a drain and taken out the water for irrigation, completed a carroll 150 feet square made of logs 12½ feet long, with their ends in the ground and dovetailed together near the top, and a stack-yard adjoining of the same dimensions nearly completed. They have also commenced a fort which will also be enclosed with a stockade enclosing 42 houses, the timber for one third of the houses already out and nearly one third on the ground. The size of the fort is 320 feet square. A portion of the hands are engaged in putting up hay for the winter. The whole plan is admirably laid out, and some of the best of workmen engaged in its execution.

The first station that we came to was Horseshoe. There is one commenced at La Bonte; there is also one at the Devil's Gate, and one at the head of Sweetwater, as well as at Fort Bridger, all having a corresponding amount of animals, &c., with this station; with two or three more stations on the other side of Laramie, of which Genoa will probably be one.

When the above are completed, and even now, we need ask no odds of Uncle Sam about our mail affairs; we can carry all our mails by express, and have them arrive at their destination in from ten to fifteen days less time than the mails can do it under their arrangements. We have been bamboozled long enough with a lot of nincompoops; there has been an eternal cry, but very little wool; it is high time that we attended to our own affairs, and this express will most effectually do it in mail matter, small parcels, and light merchandize. Nathaniel V. Jones is captain of this station. I would here remark that these stations have been got up under the direction of Hyrum Kimball, as mail contractor, under special act of Congress, for which he was to have certain mail facilities.

Bro. Snow, myself, and two other brethren, left Laramie on horseback in advance of our teams to the Horseshoe Station, where we were kindly received. We were then generously forwarded in a coach and four to this station, where we have been for two days.

A rumor has reached here that Indians occupying forty lodges of the Cheyennes have been killed by Col. Sumner's command; I feel, however, inclined to doubt it. The health of the brethren is good, and we pursue our journey in the morning. The Indians through this district of country are summoned to Rawhide Indian Agency to receive their annuities, and have a talk.

A large body of Indians of the Arraphoe tribe were encamped here on our arrival, who seem to be very friendly; they are a fine body of men; a great many of them are upwards of six feet high, and straight as an arrow. I had a short interview and talk with Black Bear, one of their chiefs. Little Owl, their principal chief, is not here at present. Our company obtained here four fresh animals. Adieu.

As ever, yours, &c.,

JOHN TAYLOR.

P.S.—I gave you full particulars of our moving camps in my last. I need not say how advantageous these posts will be to them, as well as to other emigrating parties. With these posts our handcarts from henceforth can move from place to place without any difficulty—stop awhile, or over the season—obtain supplies, and move as circumstances and convenience may dictate.

Utah.

From the Millennial Star, August 15.

THE TERRITORY OF UTAH.

Utah is a territory of the United States, bounded on the east by the Rocky Mountains, and on the west by California; and included between the parellels of 37 degrees and 42 degrees north latitude. Its length from east to west is about 700 miles; its breadth from north to south 350 miles; it contains about 225,000 square miles. Its average elevation is not far from one mile above the sea level. The most of this extensive region is an uninhabitable desert, destitute of water, and has but little vegetation, and intersected by parallel ranges of mountains running from north to south. Now and then a valley may be seen, susceptible of cultivation and the formation of settlements. It is supposed to be capable of sustaining only one or two millions of inhabitants.

THE INHABITANTS OF UTAH.

Utah was originally a province of Mexico, and inhabited only by small bands of roving Indians. In 1847, the "Mormon Batallion," in the service of the United States, took possession of the country, including California. In the summer and fall of the same year, several thousands of the Latter-day Saints formed settlements in this newly acquired province. Soon after, the inhabitants formed a provisional State Government; and in September, 1850, they were organized by an act of Congress, as a territory of the United States. By the census taken in the spring of 1856, the population of the territory had increased to over seventy-seven thousand. Of these, the majority are Americans and English. Several thousands are from Wales, Scotland, and Denmark. Some few also from Norway, Sweden, Iceland, Ireland, Germany, Switzerland, Italy, and France. Asia, Africa, Australia, and many Isles of the sea have likewise each contributed a small number to help swell the population of Utah.

THE GOVERNMENT OF UTAH.

The form of government was established by the Congress of the United States; and is the same as that of Oregon, Washington, Kansas, Nebraska, and all other United States' territories. The Governor, three Judges, Secretary, Marshal, and Attorney, are appointed by the general government; while the people are required to elect their own legislators, to make their own civil and criminal laws, and to appoint their own local judges and other officers. The laws enacted by the Legislature are required to be forwarded to Congress for their approval or disapproval. The citizens of Utah are also under the Constitution and laws of the United States. In all these respects, the territorial government of Utah is precisely the same as that of all other territories.

There are but very few of the laws of the United States that have any bearing upon territories. Any aggression upon the persons or property of the Indian tribes come under the Federal laws. Treason or rebellion against the United States would also come under the Supreme law. Rebellion against a republican form of government, established in a territory, also comes under the same code. But individual crimes, such as murder, robbery, house-burning, stealing, adultery, &c. &c., are tried by the laws of a territory, and not by the Federal laws. The Legislature of Utah, during its session, last winter, compiled what few of the United States' laws there are, applicable to the territory, which will be published with the territorial laws for the convenience of the people.

THE RELIGION OF UTAH.

In Utah all religions are equally tolerated and protected, to the same extent and in the same degree, as in all other territories of the American Republic. The principal religion now existing in the territory is that of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. The ecclesiastical forms of government, adopted by any religious denomination in the territory, have no connection whatever with the Civil or Republican form of government, established by the United States. The members of any religious body are alike eligible to hold any office under the Civil Government, according to the Federal Constitution. The United States, therefore, in 1850, appointed his Excellency, Brigham Young, the Governor of Utah, and have testified their unqualified approbation of all his official acts, by supporting and sustaining him in office for the long term of seven years; while the governors of the other territories have generally held their office only for the short period of four years, and sometimes for a period much shorter. Governor Young, though occupying the dignified station of President over all the Latter-day Saints throughout the world, has shown his condescension by being willing to accept the petty office of Governor in a civil capacity. He was willing to condescend to this position for the good of the citizens of Utah. As a United States' officer he has manifested to the Federal government, and to all the world, that unequalled wisdom, and that superior capacity for governing, which far surpasses the talents and abilities characterizing the governors of other territories. In what State or territory has a governor been so universally respected and beloved? Has the general government ever disapproved of one of his official acts? No. His whole administration, from first to last, has been in strict accordance with the Constitution and laws of the United States, and the laws of the territory over whom the Federal government appointed him as the Executive. This verifies the fact, that a truly religious man is better qualified to govern than one who is irreligious.

THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN ECCLESIASTICAL AND CIVIL LAW IN UTAH.

The Civil laws and Church laws in Utah are as distinct as in other territories. The Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians, "Mormons," and all other religious denominations in Utah, have the undaunted right to frame ecclesiastical laws, binding upon the individual members of their respective societies. If these laws are broken, they have the right to disfellowship the transgressor; but have no right, by Church law, to interfere with his person or property. The same rights and restrictions exist in all the States and territories.

But are not the great majority of the citizens of Utah Latter-day Saints? Have they not the power to elect all the legislators, and to frame such civil laws as they think proper? Have they not the power to enact laws partial to their own denomination and favoring their own society more than others? And does not this virtually combine Church and State? We answer, that all the laws of Utah must be sent to the Congress of the United States, and receive their approval or disapproval. Hence, the impossibility of the laws of Utah being partial, unless permitted to be so by the Federal government. Also, the Executive and Judges of the District and Supreme Courts are appointed by the general government; this is an effectual preventive against all partiality in the administration of law in Utah.

If any one supposes himself aggrieved by the decision of the juries, or lower courts, he has a right to appeal to the United States Supreme Court in Utah. No jury is allowed in this Court. This effectually protects him from partiality, should any arise in the lower courts and juries, and gives him the benefit arising from the decisions of United States officers. In this manner the power of Civil government is removed entirely beyond the reach of ecclesiastical government; and the two are as distinct from each other in Utah, as in the State of New York.

The press often accuse the Utonians of rebellion against the laws of the United States. But we have often asked the question, What particular law have they violated? Have they committed treason, by adhering to the enemies of the United States, or by giving them succor in time of war? Have they rebelled against Governor Young, whom the United States have placed over them? Have they rebelled against any of the lawful and official acts of the United States or of her authorities? Have they rebelled against the Republican form of government which they petitioned for, and which Congress granted them? Have they violated any Indian treaties, or stirred the Indians up to hostility against the United States? Have they proclaimed war against the general government, or manifested the least hostility to Republican institutions? To all these questions we boldly answer, No. And we defy the whole world to point out one law of the Federal government that the Utonians have violated. It is one of the easiest things imaginable to denounce the people of Utah, and to accuse them of open rebellion against the laws; but the sequel will show it to be one of the most difficult tasks ever undertaken to substantiate these wholesale denunciations and accusations.

We very respectively invite the gentlemen of the press to accommodate their readers with one solitary instance of Utonian rebellion against the United States laws. One instance, proved, will have more influence than volumes of unsubstantiated slander. Drummond's Reports have been proved by United States officers and other incontrovertible testimony to be false—utterly false—without even a shadow of foundation. And the rotten-hearted, loathsome reptile has crept away into obscurity, to hide his guilty head from the just indignation of the public and his amiable family whom he has so greatly dishonored. Whether he still lives in unlawful intercourse with "his dearly beloved" Ada Carroll, we have not been informed. His iniquity has found him out, and the public press is down upon him rough-shod. Thus Haman has hung himself with the rope he prepared for the innocent.

Mormon Enterprise.

THE new "Deseret Alphabet" is completed, and a fount of Pica type has been cast in St. Louis. Specimens of the type are published in the St. Louis papers, but they are unprodacible in types that common people use. The type-founders have supplied the Mormons with moulds and other apparatus for recasting their old metal. So the Deseret News will probably hereafter be a profound mystery, at least in part, to all but the Initiated. The new characters are forty-one in number, and bear a striking resemblance to those of the Ethiopic Alphabet; in fact, some of the letters are identical in shape—but whether the Ethiopic Waw is the Mormon Waw, or not, we confess ourselves incompetent to judge, not having been inducted into the secrets of this mystery of Mormonism. The ukases of Brother Brigham will hereafter be a sealed letter, literally, to Gentile eyes.—Daily Times, Aug. 25.

[We are not particularly posted on this "Mormon Enterprise," and can't say whether the "Deseret News," will be a "profound mystery" hereafter or not; but we will risk a "guess"—that it wont be just yet. We should be glad to see these forty-one new characters, and the first occasion thereafter our readers will get a glimpse of them too. Success to every "Mormon Enterprise."—Ed.]

Monogamic Problem.

A MONOGAMIST married one wife. At the age of twenty, there was born to him a son; at twenty-two a daughter was born; at twenty-four, another son; and so on, alternately, a son and a daughter every two years, until his wife had borne him ten children. Each of his male descendants, when about nineteen years of age, married a wife. At the age of twenty, each, like his father, was blessed with a son; at twenty-two, with a daughter; the increase, thereafter, being the same, in all respects, as in the family of the father. The female descendents remained unmarried. When this Monogamist became seventy-eight years old, what did his family number, including himself?

Polygamic Problem.

MR. FRUITFUL, a Polygamist, married 40 wives. At the age of twenty, he had ten sons and ten daughters born; and each following year he had ten sons and ten daughters born, until each wife had borne him ten children. His male descendants, shortly after becoming nineteen years of age, married forty wives each. And at the age of twenty, each began to increase in children, the same, in all respects, as in the family of the father. The female descendants remained unmarried. When this Polygamist became seventy-eight years old, what did his family number, including himself?—[Millennial Star.

TELEGRAPHIC.

WILMINGTON, Aug. 23, 1857.

A terrible explosion occurred here on Saturday. Alexis L. Dupont, assisted by seven workmen, was removing a large and heavy box from a building which had been used since 1812 as a powder house. The box coming in contact with the wall caused friction, producing fire, and an explosion followed, burning all hands in a shocking manner. Mr. Dupont leaped into a race near by, and the others made every effort to extinguish the fire on their clothes. Mr. Dupont having succeeded in extinguishing the fire on his clothes, hastened to see if the press roof had caught fire. As he approached a terrible explosion took place, shattering the building to atoms. By the flying fragments Mr. Dupont had his right thigh fractured, three of his ribs broken, and one of his lungs perforated. He was found among the ruins, and when taken up, gave directions to the persons persent to hasten and extinguish the flames.

To-day (Sunday) at five o'clock, Mr. Dupont, Anthony Dougherty, and Edward Hurt, the foreman of the mill, were dead.

Louis Vache was mortally wounded, and John McClafferty and George Fisher were injured, but not fatally. The others escaped unhurt.

News from Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22, 1857.

I learn this evening that Rev. Mr. Meek, of Pennsylvania, has been appointed Superintendent of Indian Affairs in Utah.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24, 1857.

The Secretary of War telegraphed General Scott to-day to come to Washington immediately. He will doubtless arrive here to-morrow. His visit has reference to the troops stationed at Kansas and those intended for the expedition to Utah. The programme which was made out some time ago, in reference to sending General Harney with a large force to Utah, will, I understand, now be changed. It is extremely doubtful whether the expedition will leave before next spring; but as soon as General Scott arrives the whole matter will be arranged.

August 25.

The War Department recognizes the virtual abandonment of the Utah expedition, and has relieved Gen. Harney of that command. The troops will remain in Kansas for service at the polls, and as a bodyguard to the bogus Constitutional Convention.

There are thirteen bidders for the contract for the new sloop-of-war. Their models are to-day on exhibition. The decision will be made in accordance with the recommendation of the Board yet to be appointed.

Charles E. Sinclair has been appointed one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of Utah, vice Stiles removed.

The dispatch from Washington of a previous date should have read: "Mr. Meek, of Pennsylvania, declines the appointment of Superintendent of Indian Affairs for Utah."

Terrible Hurricane in Wisconsin.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.

A terrible hurricane passed over the town of Woodland, Wis., last night, destroying every house in the place. Mr. Fox, the Railroad Station Agent, was run over and instantly killed, while endeavoring to stop a train of freight cars which the wind had set in motion. The telegraph lines were prostrated, and the railroad track considerably damaged.

News from Mexico.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22, 1857.

Col. Roberts, who has arrived here from New Mexico, reports that a battle had occurred between the Apache Indians and Col. Miles' command, on the Gila River, in which 25 Indians were killed and upwards of 30 wounded. Lieuts. Steie and Davis, and nine privates were wounded. Col. Miles recovered a large amount of property.

The Latest Foreign News.

By the arrival of the Asiatic at Halifax this morning (Wednesday), we are informed that the Atlantic telegraph cable broke, when 335 miles from the coast of Ireland, and the squadron had returned. It is stated that the Directors are still sanguine of ultimate success; but had concluded to hold a conference to determine whether the expedition would now attempt the task with the cable that is on board or to wait until another season.

The Indian mail has arrived with important intelligence. Delhi is not taken. More mutinies reported.

equilibrium of the wire was continually restored as fast as it was disturbed—each current clearing away the inductive influence which the other had left behind it. It was proved, moreover, in the course of these experiments that successive charges of electrical influence—either of the same kind or of alternate opposite kinds—may be traveling along lengthened conducting wires simultaneously,—the one following the other like successive waves upon the sea. Alternate, positive, and negative signals were sent along 900 miles of wire, at the rate of eight signals in each second, —and two signals arrived at the end of the wire after the acts of transmission had been discontinued. In another experiment by the use of a wire 1,020 miles long, three signals of a single-stroke bell were distinctly heard after the movement of the hand which originated the current had ceased. This, therefore, indicated a way in which the rapidity of transmitting electrical currents along a sub-marine wire could be increased; it was necessary only to employ opposite kinds,—positive and negative alternately.

The next point to be investigated was the ratio in which increase of distance a gutta-percha covered telegraph wire augments the difficulties of rapid transmission. It has been supposed that the available force was diminished in the ratio of the square of the distance traversed,—that is, that a current which has traversed 600 miles has only a thirty-sixth part of the working force of a precisely similar current which has traveled only 100 miles. In experimenting upon this point they had to consider: First—the diminution of the current's power to produce mechanical effects; and, Second—its loss of speed. A voltaic battery of 72 pairs of plates, each with a surface of 16 inches, was set to work, and it was ascertained how many grains the current would raise upon being transmitted through a wire just long enough to effect the connection. The number of grains lifted was 25,000. The experiment being repeated with the same current through 200 miles of wire, the number of grains lifted was 10,650; with 400 miles of wire it was 3,250; and with 600 miles it was 1,400. Clearly the loss of mechanical power in this case was not diminished in so large a ratio as has been supposed. In regard to loss of speed, nearly five thousand observations were made, with wires varying in length from 83 to 1,020 miles, to determine its ratio; and from these it appeared that with a wire 83 miles long the transmission was effected in .08 of a second; with 166 miles in .14 of a second; with 249 miles in .36 of a second; with 498 miles in .79 of a second; and with 1,020 miles in 1.42 of a second. This ratio was far less than had been supposed. The result of the experiments was to establish, with tolerable accuracy, the fact that the velocity of movement of a magneto-electric current, through a gutta-percha covered wire, is 300 miles in from one-twelfth to one-sixteenth of a second; 600 miles in from one-sixth to one-ninth of a second; and from 900 miles in from one-fifth to one-fourth of a second. Still further experiments proved that a rate of transmission could be obtained by the employment of magneto-electric currents from two and a half to three times as great as that of any simple voltaic impulse which can be used. The maximum speed attained by voltaic electricity was 1,800 miles per second; the maximum for the magneto-electric current was 6,000 miles per second. This shows conclusively that this is the current which must be employed. And it was also established that large coated wires, used beneath the water or the earth, are worse conductors, so far as velocity of transmission is concerned, than small ones; and it was this which led to the adoption of the small-sized copper wire, which was finally decided on as the conductor.

After these points had been established by experiment—rendering it theoretically probable that there would be no difficulty in using a wire, if it once could be laid down across the Atlantic—the next point was actually to record a signal by a current sent through a circuit of 2,000 miles. For this purpose last year the various lines of telegraph under charge of the English and Irish Magnetic Telegraph Company were used, and they are so extensive, have so many ramifications, and each line contains so many separate wires, that a continuous length of nearly 5,000 miles could be made up among them. The experiments were made with great care, under the supervision of Mr. Bright, the Engineer, and Mr. Whitehouse, the Electrician of the Company. On the night of the 9th of October, 1856, ten gutta percha covered wires, each measuring over 200 miles, were connected, so that a continuous circuit was formed of above 2,000 miles, and signals were distinctly and satisfactorily telegraphed through the whole length, at the rate of 210, 241, and upon one occasion 270 per minute. Experiment having shown that the conditions present in insulated wires placed under the ground and beneath the sea, are strictly analogous, this result was regarded as establishing, beyond all reasonable doubt, the practicability of working the Transatlantic Telegraph.

A still further experiment will be made to-morrow, when the ends of the cables upon the two ships will be joined, and the attempt will be made to send an electric current through the entire length of 2,500 miles. The result you will probably learn by telegraph through the London or Liverpool papers. [A dispatch received from the Liverpool correspondent of the Associated Press, which has already been published in the Daily Times, states that this experiment was entirely successful—the current passing through the whole length of the cable in less than a second.]

This rapid summary will give you a general notion of the precautions which have been taken to secure success to this great enterprise. The Company which has undertaken it has a capital of £850,000, which is divided into 350 shares of a thousand pounds each. The charter of the New York, Newfoundland and London Telegraph Company, which had been procured two years ago, mainly through the exertions of Cyrus W. Field, of New York, was at once made over to the new Company, and Messrs. Whitehouse and Bright also secured to it the patents of all instruments which would be needed for working it. The agreement with these three gentlemen and Mr. Brett is that, in consideration of their grants, upon attaining success, a half yearly dividend of ten per cent. per annum shall first be paid to shareholders, and that then one-half of any further profit shall be given to them, the other half being retained by the Company. The Prospectus was issued on the 6th of November, 1856, and in the first week of December, the whole capital of $1,750,000 was subscribed for, and a first installment of $350,000 paid up. Since that time the two Governments of Great Britain and the United States have agreed for twenty-five years to pay to the Company, up to the time when its dividends shall have reached six per cent., a subsidy of $70,000 a year, and of $50,000 a year after that time, besides affording valuable assistance in laying down the cable.

The cost of the Telegraph Cable, as I have ascertained it from entirely reliable data, has been as follows:

Contract price of deep sea wire per mile	$200
Price of spun-yarn and iron wire per mile	265
Price of outside tar per mile	20
Total per mile	$485
For 2,500 miles	$1,212,500
Ten miles of deep sea wire, with steel covering for mid-ocean connection at $1,450 per mile	145,000
Twenty-five miles of shore ends at $1,250 per mile	$1,250
Total cost	$1,388,750

This is the cost of the cable only, and takes no account of the cost of electrical apparatus, various machinery on board the ships, &c. &c. The furnishing of ships by the two Governments, with officers, crews, provisions, &c., has saved a very large sum to the Company,—but it is not at all unlikely that the entire capital will be required to meet the other expenses of the enterprise. There has been some discussion as to the rate of charges to be adopted for the line when completed. It cannot, however, exceed $5 for a single message between London and New York.

I shall send this letter by the Canada, which leaves Liverpool to-morrow. The subsequent steamers will bring you reports of our progress, as sent from the ships by telegraph to London, and unless we are all greatly mistaken, you may expect within ten days after receiving this to hear by telegraph from Newfoundland, of the safe arrival there of the Western end of the Telegraphic Cable, and in due course of time I shall furnish you a detailed account of whatever may occur, of general interest, during this novel and remarkable expedition. All on board the ships are very confident of success, and every one will certainly do everything in his power which may contribute, however slightly, to its attainment.

The New Oaths' Bill.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL'S bill for amending the statute law relative to the administration of oaths has been issued. It is entitled a bill to amend the act 1st and 2d Victoria, c. 105, intitled "An act for removing doubts as to the validity of certain oaths." The bill is as follows:

"Whereas in all cases in which the sanction of an oath is required the oath ought, by the common law, to be administered in such manner as will render it most effective and binding on the conscience of the person to be sworn; but doubts have arisen whether such rule of the common law be applicable to cases in which a special form of abjuration or special words of asseveration are prescribed by statute: for the removal of such doubts, be it declared and enacted by the Queen's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same:

1. That, notwithstanding any statute or usage to the contrary, whenever any person to whom an oath is tendered shall object to its administration in the prescribed or accustomed form, or in the prescribed words of asseveration, and the same shall be administered to him in such form of words and with such solemnities as he shall declare to be binding on his conscience, the oath when so administered shall be deemed to have been lawfully administered and taken; and every person so taking the oath shall, if guilty of false swearing, be liable to conviction for perjury, and shall be subject to every other consequence and entitled to every benefit to which he would have been subject or entitled if the oath had been administered in the prescribed or accustomed form, and with the prescribed words of asseveration and the prescribed or accustomed solemnities.

ADDRESSES.

ELDER A. M. CANNON, 202 New Market street, above Vine, Philadelphia, Pa.

ELDER ALEXANDER OTT, Mormon Office, New York.

Appointments.

ELDERS JOHN N. WAKELY, William Carter, [illegible] H. Lee, William H. Smith, William F. Bell, and Richard Hill are hereby appointed to travel and preach the Gospel in the Canadas. All the Elders on missions there will counsel and correspond together as often as necessary for the good of the cause, and the upbuilding of the Kingdom of God. They will act under the direction of the Presidency at New York, and report their labors from time to time.

All these brethren and those heretofore appointed on missions there, will labor, according to their appointments, until further orders, in preaching the Gospel, baptising those who believe, organizing Churches, hunting up the lost sheep, building up the Saints, comforting the hearts of all those who wish to do right, and counselling them in relation to their duties, gathering to Zion, &c. Always endeavoring to preach wherever a place may be open, and to labor in new places as much as possible.

They will also act as agents for THE MORMON, obtain all the subscriptions, donations, &c. they can, and remit the same to us at New York.

W. I. APPLEBY, President, &c.

Notice to Subscribers.

As the Six-Months' subscription to the Third Volume of THE MORMON expired with the previous number, we hereby notify all whose subscriptions terminated with the twenty-sixth number, and who wish their subscriptions renewed, will please forward the same to us, as all papers will be discontinued, as the subscription expires, unless renewed.

It behooves us necessarily to adopt the foregoing rule in order to continue the publication of the paper.

Letter Notice.

WE are constantly receiving letters from Europe, addressed to our care, with the postage unpaid. Now, we are willing to accommodate men, but we can't pay their postage, as one out of ten perhaps is not called for. This is to inform all such persons that no such letters will be taken out of the office, by us, in future.

[illegible]

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The four is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commençant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? On devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immergé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les excès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lascivété, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

JOHN TAYLOR.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

Notice.

THE Saints who desire to send means to their friends in Europe, can have the same attended to, by forwarding any sum they wish in current money, to this office, enclosing one dollar or more, in proportion to the amount sent, to defray the expenses of procuring Bills of Exchange, making remittances, foreign postage, &c., describing particularly to whom, and where they wish to have it sent; at the same time not holding myself responsible in any manner whatever unless the money reach me.

All subscriptions, donations, &c., for the support of THE MORMON, or Conference Fund (except the donations and Conference Funds raised in the Philadelphia Conference, which will be forwarded as usual through President Cannon) must be sent hereafter to my address; as also Tithing; P. E. Fund, and donations for the Temple from those who wish to contribute the same, so each person may be duly credited, and the means forwarded to Zion, and have their names entered in "The Book of the Law of the Lord."

No Power of Attorney, or other legal instrument of writing, going to Europe or elsewhere, forwarded to us for the purpose of sending to Washington in order to obtain the attestation of the Department, and the British Consul's Certificate and seal to the same, will be attended to in future, unless the means to defray the expenses and foreign postage accompanies the Instrument, as there is considerable expense attending it as well as labor. We would like to oblige all, and are willing to give our services when we have opportunity; but we cannot advance means to defray such expenses.

All communications intended for THE MORMON should be addressed—Editor of THE MORMON, New York. Otherwise direct to my address, Box No. 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. APPLEBY.

Notice to Subscribers.

WE frequently receive remittances for subscriptions to THE MORMON, without the sender giving the name of the place he desires the paper to be sent to. Sometimes the name of the Post Office or town is mentioned, but not the county, and as there are several towns in some States by the same name, unless the county is designated we are at a loss to know where to direct the papers ordered. We wish all communications to us to name distinctly the Post Office or town, county, and State or Territory, as then there will be no mistake.

PARTICULAR NOTICE TO

HORACE E. DIMICK & CO.'S

GREAT WESTERN EMPORIUM,

No. 42 Main Street, St. Louis, Mo., (at the Sign of the Deer in Windows.)

WE are now in receipt of our stock of Goods for the coming season, which enables us to say, that we have now in store, and for sale, the LARGEST and most COMPLETE assortment of Guns, Pistols, Sporting Apparatus, and Goods selected expressly for the arming of wagon trains, for crossing the plains, in the markets of Santa Fe, Salt Lake, and Oregon, &c., that can be found in any house in the Western COUNTRY!

Among the most staple articles now on hand, can be found upwards of 2,000 DOUBLE AND SINGLE SHOT GUNS; 2,500 MUSKETS AND UNITED STATES RIFLES, both new and second-hand, with flint or percussion locks; COLT'S REVOLVERS, of all sizes, ALWAYS on hand, in quantities to satisfy almost any demand, and at EASTERN PRICES. Also, all the most improved patterns of Revolvers and other Pistols now in use.

N. B.—We, the undersigned, being practical men in all matters appertaining to the arming and equipping of Emigrant and Merchant wagon trains for crossing the plains, renders our experience worthy of consultation, to make it the more easy for the emigrant and trader to supply themselves with the necessary articles, viz: FIRE ARMS, FIXED AMMUNITION, PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES, of all kinds, Wagons, Tents, Horses, Mules, Oxen; in short, everything necessary for their comfort.

We also beg leave to call the attention of EASTERN HUNTING PARTIES, that wish to spend a few months on the plains, that we have all the necessary arms and equipments, and at prices as low as can be furnished in any Eastern city.

We keep constantly on hand, (or make to order,) TARGET, HUNTING, and MINNIE RIFLES, which we guarantee to be superior to any in the country.

We also keep constantly on hand the CELEBRATED SHARP'S PATENT RIFLE, which is the safest and most destructive weapon ever invented, for sale at the Manufacturer's prices, for cash.

Please call and examine for yourselves, as it is no trouble for us to answer questions, or show goods. Remember the place, No. 42 North Main street.

Little Fools and Great Ones.

CHARLES MACKAY writes bits of most polished wisdom, now and then. The following (says the Home Journal) should be put into school books:

When at the social board you sit,
And pass around the wine,
Remember though abuse is vile,
That use may be divine;
That heaven in kindness gave the grape,
To cheer both great and small—
That little fools will drink too much,
But great ones none at all.

And when in youth's too fleeting hours,
You roam in earth alone,
And have not sought some loving heart
That you may make your own;
Remember woman's priceless worth,
And think when pleasures pall—
That little fools will love too much,
But great ones none at all.

And if a friend deceive you once,
Absolve poor human kind,
Nor rail against your fellow man,
With malice in your mind;
But in your daily intercourse,
Remember, lest you fall—
That little fools confide too much,
But great ones not at all.

In work of pleasure, love or drink,
Your rule be still the same—
Your work not toil, your pleasure pure,
Your love a steady flame,
Your drink not maddening, but to cheer;
So shall your bliss not pall—
For little fools enjoy too much,
But great ones none at all.

The Indian Empire.

Its History and People—The Mogul Dynasty—The Portugese—East India Company; its Rise and Progress; Commercial, Military and Political Power—The Indo-British Army, its Constitution—Causes of Revolt—The "Ryots"—Land and Salt Tax—Mode of Governing—Bishop Heber's Remarks, &c.

LYING between the eighth degree and thirty-fifth degree north latitude, covering an area of 1,280,000 square miles, and jutting out in a triangular-shaped peninsular into the Indian Ocean, lies Hindostan, India, or the East Indies. Here rises, in all their majestic proportions, 25,000 feet above the level of the sea, the snow-capped Himalaya Mountains; and here, too, roll the waters of the "Sacred Ganges," into which many a fair victim has plunged to rise no more, amid the applause of a superstitious multitude. One hundred and fifty-five millions of people inhabit this diversified and extensive tract of country, as mixed in manners, language and physiognomy as can be found in any equal portion of the world.

The Hindoos, whose history stretches into the realms of fable, were the original inhabitants. They seem to have been a simple, industrious and ingenious people, scrupulously adhering to their system of castes, and besides morning and evening purification in the Ganges (a practice worthy of imitation by Christian people in less sacred rivers,) appeasing Seeb, the destroyer of all, and looking after 330,000,000 of inferior gods and goddesses, they appear to have cared but little who ruled, provided they were left in peace to pray. The Hindoos fell an easy prey to the Mahommedan Affghans, a warlike tribe on the northwest of India; and they, in their turn, to the Moguls or Tartars, who, in 1526, established their seat of authority at Delhi. This once magnificent city covered a space of twenty square miles, and the ruins of its ancient splendor excite the wonder of the modern traveler. The Mogul dynasty was almost subverted by the Persians, and numerous dependent Nabobs, taking advantage of the distracted state of the country, set up for themselves, to be, in turn, subdued by more crafty and powerful adventurers.

In 1498, the Portugese, under Vasco De Gama, was the first to discover the route to India around the Cape of Good Hope, established themselves on the coast of Malabar, and, for a century, maintained the exclusive trade of the whole commerce of the East. Trying to reconcile God and Mammon, they were supplanted by the Dutch, who devoted themselves entirely to the service of the latter; and these were rapidly acquiring riches, power and territory, when, in the year 1600, the East India Company was formed in England. From that time to the present, this great and wealthy corporation has swayed the destinies of India; and, as late events have called attention to this part of the globe, a brief history of its rise and progress will not be uninteresting.

The only object this Company had in view at first, was to secure a share in the commerce of the country, and by their craftiness and perseverance they obtained the "lion's share"—having, step by step, become masters of the entire resources of Hindostan. They first asked permission to buy the products of India, and to sell those of Europe; then to build factories, which they soon converted into armed garrisons, and in order to carry the blessings of civilization among this benighted people, they fostered native jealousy, set Nabob against Nabob, and in the end took advantage of both. They disguised their ulterior views so well that in 1715 we find them granted liberty to purchase thirty-seven townships, in addition to what they held in Calcutta, besides important commercial privileges which they possessed, and had gradually been extended. Thirty-three years after, seeing their position so firm, and finding through the native jealousy, carefully fomented, a favorable opportunity to still further strengthen and extend their dominion, they assumed military and political power. In this struggle for ascendency they had a competitor in France; and then commenced, on the part of both these civilized and Christian nations, a series of aggressions, exactions and butcheries that have no parallel in history. It was then, for the first time, that the sepoys were instructed in European tactics, and, as country had no hold on their affections, they fought for whoever paid them best. Finally the English conquered, and by the sword, bribery, treachery and confiscation, ruled supreme; accused by their own countrymen "of having sold every monarch, prince and State in India, broken every contract, and ruined every state that trusted them."

In 1749 the Nabob of Tanjore was, on a flimsy pretext, driven out for the purpose of getting some of his territory, and and restored on making still further concessions. They deposed, in 1757, the Nabob of Bengal, and stripped him of large and rich provinces, and from that period, down to the presentation of the koh-i-noor to the Queen of England, in 1850, the government of the East India Company has been a continuous scene of spoilation, deception and oppression, squeezing out of one hundred and thirty millions of the unfortunate natives, the enormous annnal revenue of over $100,000,000, and whose enslavement they perpetuate by an army of 302,000 men. They have reduced the bulk of the population to the condition of Pariahs; the better class and Indo-British they have grossly outraged by their brutal and bulleying demeanor (see Bishop Heber's correspondence;) and those of the natives, who compose the "bone and sinew" of their immense army, they have treated so despotically, it is no wonder we see "the right arm of England," from time to time paralysed.

Upon the Indian army depends the possession of British India. It is composed of three distinct armed corps; the army of Bengal, the army of Madras, the army of Bombay; the component parts of which may be seen from the following summary:

Artillery	15,782
Native cavalry	26,094
Native Infantry	234,412
Engineers	4,575
Queen's troops	21,934

The cost of maintaining this enormous force amounts annually to over $50,000,000.

It will be seen from the above that the sepoys, or native Indian troops, compose the bulk of the Indo-British army. They are brave, obstinate and superstitious, clinging, with irremovable tenacity, to their peculiar practices of religion, and resenting any injustice or affront offered to their prejudices with more than ordinary vindictiveness. Their frequent mutinies have left the British-Indian possessions not worth a year's purchase; and from late accounts it may be that before this, they have taken summary vengeance on those they look upon as "aliens in blood, language and religion," and whose persecutions towards their ancestors are keenly remembered.

It is not alone the effort made to force the sepoy to bite off the end of "greased" cartridges, which in itself is insulting to his caste prejudices, the strongest feelings of the native Indian, but the conduct of British officers and East India Company has been such, as to foment a general revolt. That the former have acted dishonorably and with unbecoming hauteur towards the troops, and the latter with undue severity towards the native population, is to be seen from the debates in Parliament and the many published statements of travellers; and we may expect a continuation of revolts as long as injustice and tyranny are practised. Slavery exists to a large extent, and so great is the distress of the natives, they are frequently obliged to sell their offspring to preserve them from starvation. The "Ryots," or cultivators of the soil are reduced to the lowest starving point, and between unbearable taxation and official exactions, have scarcely wherewithal to feed and cover their bodies. Here is a picture of one of that class drawn by the author of "Ancient and Modern India." "The Bengal Ryot is described in England as 'feeding on rice and wearing a slight cotton frock,' but the fact is he lives upon coarse rice and dall (vetches,) for good vegetables and fish would be luxuries to him. His dress consists of a bit of a rag around his loins, and a slender sheet called chudder. His bed is a coarse mat and pillow; his dwelling a low thatched roof; his only property an uncouth plough and two badly fed bullocks, and one or two waterpots called lotahs, with a little seed called beej dhan. From early morn to noon, and from noon till sunset he toils, and still he is in appearance a haggard, poverty smitten, wretched creature, often fasting for days and nights without food, or having only one miserable meal in twenty-four hours. The East India Company once had the power of preventing much of this misery; but instead of doing so, have only riveted the chains on the Ryots." And this is the condition of over 100,000,000 of people, in a land flowing with milk and honey.

No wonder that millions of families in England have been enriched by the slavery of the unfortunate natives, and no wonder that they should try and rid themselves of so inhuman a degradation. Besides the land tax, which in Hindoo times was fixed at one-sixth, but which under English dominion has been raised to one-half, there is the salt monopoly, which raises the price of this primary necessity to three times its value, thereby forcing the natives to use the most unhealthy substitutes.

The affairs of the East India Company are regulated by twenty-four Directors with a Chairman and a Board of Control sitting in London; the English government appointing the Governor General, under whose control are the presidencies of Calcutta, Bombay, Madras and Agra. The relations which subsist between the company and the tributary and dependent States are thus described:—"The company undertake the defence of the dependent princes' territories against all enemies, domestic or foreign. He is bound, on the other hand, to enter into no alliance with other sovereigns or States without the company's consent, and he pays them a certain annual subsidy out of his revenues for their protection, while he generally keeps up an army at the same time for the maintainance of internal tranquility. In some cases, in place of paying a subsidy, the prince cedes a portion of his territories, of which the company draw the entire taxes. The company keep a resident at the prince's court, who is entitled to demand an audience at any time; and by this agent the company do, in fact, interfere pretty regularly in the internal concerns of the State, particularly in settling the succession to the throne." These dependent princes are mere puppets of the company; they are used as tax gatherers, and pensioned off and dethroned at pleasure.

We shall conclude this sketch with a few remarks from Bishop Heber and others, to show the social character of this extraordinary people. "This remarkable people have preserved their national character, their religion, manners, customs and habits of life for thousands of years, under the dominion of foreigners. They are a temperate, frugal and hospitable people, generally of a brownish complexion, except the higher classes, who are almost as white as Europeans. The most extraordinary peculiarity in the Hindoos is their division into castes. There are four castes, and it is strictly enjoined by the Hindoo religion that no transition from one to the other shall take place; no connection between them by marriage or any other way is allowed, and no individual of the one class can assume the habits or engage in the occupations of another. Even the difference of food is precisely marked out. The three higher classes are prohibited altogether the use of flesh; the fourth is allowed all kinds except beef; all others are outcasts and may eat what they please." From this may be inferred the obstinacy of the sepoys, who belong to the higher classes, in not touching "greased" cartridges. Bishop Heber thus writes of them:—"To say that the Hindoos or Mussulmans are deficient in any essential feature of a civilized people, is an assertion which I can scarcely suppose to be made by any who have lived with them; their manners are at least as pleasing and courteous as those in the corresponding stations of life among ourselves; their houses are larger, and full as convenient as ours; their architecture is at least as elegant; nor is it true that in the mechanic arts they are inferior to the general run of inferior nations. Their goldsmiths and weavers produce as beautiful fabrics as our own; they are most successful imitators of our patterns and and products, and the ships built by native artists at Bombay are notoriously as good as any which sail from London or Liverpool." Another writer says, "The Mahommedans of India are more intelligent and possess greater strength and courage than the Hindoos; they are also more proud, jealous, revengeful and rapacious, and their fidelity is much less relied on by the British government. In some districts the Mahommedan population is nearly as numerous as that of the Hindoos; and both seem to live in a state of mutual amity." Speaking of the arrogance of the British settlers towards the natives, Bishop Heber remarks: "Of this foolish, surly, national pride, I see but too many instances daily. We are not guilty of injustice or wilful oppression, but we shut out the natives from our society, and a bullying, insolent manner is continually assumed in speaking to them."—Herald.

Cronological History of the Electric Telegraph.

1726.—An Englishman named Wood discovered that the electric fluid could be conducted long distances by wires.

1746.—Herr Winkler of Leipsic, discharged a Leyden jar by a friction machine, through a wire of considerable length, the river Pleis forming part of his circuit.

1747.—Dr. Watson made a successful experiment of a similar character, over a space of four miles, at Shooter's Hill, near London, embracing his circuit of two miles of wire and an equal distance of ground. A writer in the Philosophical Transactions (vol. xiv., 1848,) gives him the credit of having been the first to suggest the application of electricity to telegraphic purposes.

1748.—Dr. Franklin set fire to spirits by an electric current sent across the Schuylkill on a wire, and allowed it to return by the river and earth.

1774.—M. Lesage, of Geneva, constructed an electric telegraph, consisting of twenty-four wires, each properly insulated, and terminating at one end in a pith ball electrometer. When the other end of either was put into communication with the prime conductor of an electrical machine, the ball was repelled, and a corresponding letter thus indicated.

1784.—M. Lomond, of France, communicated telegraph signals to a neighboring room by means of a potato ball electrometer acted upon by electricity.

1795.—M. Cavalo proposed to form an electric telegraph by firing a gas pistol at the distant end of a wire, and thus to give signals.

M. Savary attributes the first idea of an electric telegraph to Dr. Franklin.

1798.—Betancourt established a telegraph between Madrid and Aranjuez, a distance of 26 miles, through which a current of electricity was passed and gave signals for letters.

1809.—Soemering constructed the first galvanic telegraph at Munich, which operated by the decomposition of water, and which he also caused to ring a bell at the opposite end of the wire. Soemering's was the first decomposing or chemical telegraph, and can be even now successfully but less rapidly worked than Bain's.

1816.—Dr. John Redman Coxe, of Philadelphia, proposed to establish an electric telegraph, and to make signals at a distance, by the decomposition of water and metallic salts, causing a change in color to ensue.

1819.—Professor Versted, of Copenhagen, discovered electro magnetism or electro magnetic motion.

1820.—M. Ampere, of France, discovered the electro-magnetic telegraph. This he constructed of as many wires as there were letters, and used the deflection of the needle as a signal. He broke and renewed the circuits by finger keys, something similar to those of the keys of a pianoforte.

1823.—Francis Ronalds, of England, proposed a telegraph by the use of frictional electricity. In his arrangements there were clocks at the stations which kept time with each other, and which were furnished with a light disc of cyphers in place of hands, having twenty different signs towards their circumference. At the moment the proper signs at the disc passed before the index at one station, the spark was discharged, and an electrometer placed at the other discharged and caused the signs on the disc at the other to be noted. This telegraph is stated to have extended to Hammersmith, eight miles, and to have used the discharge of a gas pistol as an alarm.

1825.—Mr. Barlow, of Greenwich, England, made an attempt to put a galvanic telegraph in operation, but was baffled by the dimunition of fluid, when he endeavored to transmit it for a great distance, so as to produce mechanical effects. This difficulty the discoveries of Henry, however, afterwards overcame.

In the same year Mr. Sturgeon, of England, constructed the first electro-magnet by coiling a copper wire round a piece of iron of a horse shoe form, the bent turns of the wire being so far apart as to prevent contact. He found that when the electric fluid passed through this coil the enclosed iron became a magnet, and was again demagnetised in breaking the current. The wires were afterwards coated with non-conducting substances, and wrapped around the iron in close contact, as we now see them.

1826.—Mr. Harrison Gray Dyar erected a telegraph on Long Island, in New York. He used fractional electricity, and dyed marks on chemically prepared paper by the passage of sparks.

1831.—Prof. Joseph Henry, of Princeton College, discovered a method of forming magnets of intensity and of quality produced from correspondent batteries, and by the use of which, with relay magnets, &c., prepared by him, he made known the practicability of producing mechanical effects at a great distance, say from 1,000 to 2,000 miles.

1832.—Baron Schilling, of St. Petersburgh, contrived a deflective magnetic telegraph, which had an alarm bell connected with it.

1833.—Gauss and Weber first constructed and simplified electro-magnetic telegraph. It was Gauss who first employed the incitement of induction, and who demonstrated that the appropriate combination of a number of signs is all that is required for the transmission of communications. Weber discovered that a copper wire 7,400 feet long, which he carried over the houses and church steeples of Gottingen from the observatory to the Cabinet of Natural Philosophy, required no special insulation. This was an important point of discovery in the construction of telegraph lines, and it is made available to the present time.

1837.—Stienhiel constructed and put to use between Munich Bogenhausen, in the July of this year, his registering electro-magnetic telegraph. By the deflection of a needle he produced dots or short marks on fillets of paper to stand as signals for letters, &c., the paper being drawn forward by clock-work in an endless slip of ribbon.

On the 12th of June of this same year the deflective electro-magnetic telegraph of Cook & Wheatstone was patented in England. They first employed receiving and relay magnets.

In the October following, Samuel F. B. Morse, of New York, entered his first caveat for an American electro-magnetic telegraph, in which he chiefly relied on a kind of type and port rule for making signals by the mechanical force of electro-magnetic motion. Morse claimed that he first thought of a magnetic telegraph on his passage to the United States in the brig Sully in the year 1832.

1838.—Edward Davy, of London, had his patent sealed for a chemical telegraph, which was enrolled January 4th, 1839. In his plan he employed chemically-prepared paper, similar in its general character to that used on the instrument of Bain.

1849-'50.—Mr. Horn, of New York, invented his igniting telegraph, which made dots and lines by burning them on slips of revolving paper by the heat of the electric fluid while passing.

About the same time Mr. Johnson, of New York, contrived a machine worked by electro-magnetism to let that drop on to slips of paper, which, being prepared at the same moment, left visible marks which stood as signs for letters.

Also, about the same time, Mr. Daniel Davis, of Boston, prepared an Axial telegraph, which, with that of Horn and Johnson, does not seem to have met with much attention.

1855.—Mr. Hughes obtained his patent for his ingenious and admirably combined printing telegraph, which is destined to effect a revolution in all the existing systems. Its superiority consists in its working reliably on a larger circuit than any instrument previously invented. Not only does it transmit messages with greater rapidity, but it has the advantage of receiving and transmitting simultaneously on a circuit of at least five hundred miles, performing the work of two ordinary wires on one; it is also less liable to interruption from atmospheric electricity.

"THAT'S SO."—The Cincinnati Gazette says that "the New Yorkers have stopped fighting and gone to injuncting. They get up every morning and injunct each other all around. They then spend the rest of the day in getting the injunctions dissolved. They then get out a fresh set of injunctions the next morning, and begin the dissolving process where they left off the day before."

News from the Plains.

FORT KEARNEY, N. T., Aug. 7, 1857.

THIS is becoming decidedly a most lively place. The other day, as you have doubtless been informed, the Cheyenne Indians dropped down upon the beef cattle intended for the Utah army, and made a pretty clean sweep, driving off all the cattle, killing and scalping one of the herders and dangerously wounding another. The latter is in the Military Hospital at this post, under charge of Dr. Summers. All this occurred within a few miles of this post, but the Indians could not be pursued, as there is but a single company of infantry here, the authorities having very wisely withdrawn all the mounted force. Colonel Sumner is out after the Cheyennes, but his expedition is also broken up, and his troops turned over to that all-absorbing Utah command, which appears to swallow up everything in its way. The Western prairies are now turned over to the Indians, and murders and robberies will be the order of the day.

The 10th infantry and Phelp's battery, of the Utah army, reached here to-day. The other regiment of infantry, the 5th I believe, is expected in a few days. These troops do not appear to be very much delighted with the service on which they are ordered. The season is so late that they anticipate a great deal of suffering during the approaching winter in the Rocky Mountains, as they will have only their canvas to protect them from its rigors. The consequence is, that the number of desertions has been unparalleled. The 5th and 10th infantry have lost nearly five hundred men since they first received orders for Utah. It is very difficult to see why this expedition was not put off until next spring, instead of being pushed on at the eleventh hour at such an immense sacrifice of men and money. For the last six or seven years the Mormons have been conducting themselves the same as at the present moment, and it is fair to presume that the next spring would have found them no worse. The secret is, however, that the Utah movement was popular, and every politician feels it his duty to mount the highest wave of popularity at once, for fear some one else might get there before him.

The Mormons are a bad people in many respects, but they are not worse than many of their calumniators who have been instrumental in getting up this excitement against them.

The merchants of Salt Lake, who wish to turn an honest penny from the government and troops, have also had a hand in this business, as they represented to the authorities at Washington that the season was not too late for moving troops across the plains to Utah. They did not remember, or did not choose to, that when they arrive late in Utah a warm and comfortable house awaited them; not so with the poor soldier, he has to be exposed to the bleak winds and cutting blasts of that most inhospitable of all inhospitable countries, with a thin tent his only protection. Our army swore some in Flanders, it is said, and it must be confessed that a listener might now and then hear curses, not loud but deep, from our army for Utah.

The Mormon emigration this year is truly formidable. It is confined almost exclusively to the road along the north of the Platte. Some of the trains contain very nearly a thousand souls!

I omitted to state that the Tenth Infantry is commanded by Colonel Alexander, and the Fifth by Colonel Wait.

Aug. 9, 1857.

Our mail does not leave with the morning, so I add a postscript, to inform you that the Fifth Infantry will be here to-morrow. Captain Van Vliet, of the Quarter Master's Department, U. S. A., arrived here yesterday, with a small escort, on his way to Salt Lake. He travels rapidly, and expects, I understand, to reach Utah in twenty-five days. He goes in advance on some important business, the nature of which I cannot ascertain, and will reach Utah some time before the troops.

THE MORMON.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, SEPT. 5, 1857.

The Wood's Meeting.

WE have just returned from "The Wood's Meeting," held at Hornerstown, Monmouth County, New Jersey, and though lungs and limbs are somewhat affected by the exercises of going there, while there, and returning, we feel our fingers still under obligation to furnish a hasty sketch of the proceedings.

President Appleby, accompanied by a few friends, left for Hornerstown last Thursday morning, where they were very kindly received in the evening by Elder Peter Wikoff and family, with whom they resided during their visit. President A. M. Cannon, Dr. Clinton, and Elder Karl Maeser, recently from Dresden, Saxony, arrived there on Friday afternoon, and were as kindly received at the mansion of Mr. Edward Wikoff, who, with his most amiable lady, were unbounded in their kindness to them and to all who had the honor of their acquaintance. Elder E. R. Young, of Connecticut, and Elder Stenhouse, left on Saturday morning, and on the way had a narrow escape from danger. One of the driving-wheels broke loose from the locomotive, took an independent run from the track, and by this liberty endangered the lives of the passengers. After a run of a quarter of a mile, the exhausted boiler of the smashed-up locomotive brought the train to a stand still, and revealed to the wondering travellers the dangers through which they had passed. Having been detained some hours on the iron road, they did not reach Hornerstown till after the monarch of day had retired behind the western hills.

The weather being unfavorable in the early part of the day, the meeting on Friday was rather thinly attended. Prest. Cannon called the people to order at 3 P.M., and opened the meeting by prayer. Prest. Appleby, Dr. Clinton and Elder Maeser addressed the audience.

On Saturday, meetings were held at 10 A.M. and 3 P.M. The weather being very favorable for out-door gatherings, the audiences were considerably larger than on the preceding day, and the Elders had quite a free time in the exposition of the principles of the Kingdom of God.

On Sunday morning, the weather was everything that could be desired, and thousands of persons, in carriages and on foot, flocked to "the Mormon camp." The Saints composing the Hornerstown Branch are not very numerous; but general invitation brought many of the brethren and sisters from other parts of the State and likewise from other States, so that a goodly number of the members of the Church were assembled on the occasion.

At 10½ A.M. the people were called to order by President Appleby, and the hymn, "Oh! say, what is truth?" was sung. Prayer by Elder Harrison, of Philadelphia.

After singing the hymn, "Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning," Dr. Clinton was introduced. As the wind, which was blowing rather strongly, was a hindrance to his being audibly heard, he made a very liberal promise to permit his hearers to speak as much as they chose on the morrow, craved for himself the present half hour, and commenced on "The plan of Salvation."

He found that the people had an idea that the Mormons taught doctrines which were not in the Bible; but this idea had its foundation in the fact that ministers had not preached Bible doctrines, and the people were therefore not familiar with them. He was aware what the Apostles and Christ contended for when they said that the Gospel was unchangeable; and, in the words of the Apostle Paul, cursed would be the man who would teach any other Gospel than that laid down by Christ for the redemption of the world. The more that the Bible was examined the more the people would discover that the Lord would speak to them by His servants, and it was their duty to find out who those servants were, and by adhering to their instructions and counsels they would obtain salvation. He was aware that there was much religion in the world; but much of it was a fraud upon the people, and their curse.

The scriptures declare that an angel of the Lord would reveal the Gospel in the last days, and he could bear testimony that that angel had come to Joseph Smith. He would, earnestly invite the people to examine what Joseph had taught, and they would then be able to judge whether he had been sent of God or not. Joseph did not ask the people to accept his testimony on his own word; but required them to be obedient to the commandments of God. Joseph Smith, if enquired of, would say: "Believe in God and in Jesus Christ His Son." Well, that was right. What after? He would answer: "Repent of your sins, turn from them." And then? "Be baptized for the remission of those sins." These were Bible doctrines, and none can dispute them. But besides teaching these principles of the Gospel, Joseph Smith placed himself in a position to be detected if a false prophet. Joseph promised to those who would keep the commandments of God that they should receive the Gift of the Holy Ghost. Now every person who became obedient to the ordinances taught by that man, could learn through the Gift of the Holy Ghost that he was sent of God. The Gifts of the Holy Spirit, such as the gift of healing and the gift of tongues, and other gifts enjoyed in the primitive church, were now enjoyed by the Saints, and the persons around him could of that bear testimony. Many would probably like to see these manifestations of the Spirits. Go and do what God has commanded, and render yourselves worthy of God's blessing, and you shall not fail to receive the manifestation of that spirit promised to the believing and repentant.

The Doctor spoke for some time on baptism, and made some very excellent remarks on the Christian practice of sprinkling, and bore testimony to his acquaintance with Joseph Smith, whom he knew to be a man of God. He left religion for history—was the descendant of revolutionary sires—was the only son of an honorable father, who got his death at New Orleans; but though he was an American, and was faithful to the Constitution of his country, he had been driven out from the United States, and Uncle Sam, poor old man, sat quietly by, and said "Go it, boys." He was much afraid that if Uncle Sam did not wake up, sedentary habits and high living would soon give him the gout. Of Utah it was said the Mormons there were in rebellion. In what? No one could point out any act of the Utonians that was contrary to, or in opposition to, the laws of the United States. Such charges were false, and came from the devil—they came from hell, and would go back to hell.

He spoke of sending an army to Utah. Well, let them do so, and good would doubtless be achieved by this step. Col. Steptoe went there, and not only found all well, but some of the best men in his command got converted to Mormonism, and are this day preaching its principles in different parts of the earth. Nothing could hinder the spread of Mormonism, and all that the people did now, or at any future time, would only accelerate its progress. To the army he would therefore say, "Go;" and the Lord would teach some of them to beat their swords into plough shares, and earn an honest living by the sweat of their brow; but they had not got there yet, and he was afraid they would not go.

The Doctor spoke of the spirit of persecution that prevailed where the Gospel was preached, and how the Devil could influence men to murder the servants of the Lord.

After some favorable remarks on the Constitution, he closed, asking the blessing of the Lord on the congregation.

Elder Samuel Harrison was introduced, and spoke on the fulfilment of prophecy. He showed how the prophecies relative to the birth of Christ had been disbelieved, yet were literally fulfilled. So would also the predictions of the prophets touching the latter-day work of God be accomplished.

A hymn was sung; and after prayer by Elder Cannon, the congregation was dismissed till afternoon.

At 3 P.M., the meeting was again called to order.

A hymn was sung; and Elder Treseder, President of the Hornerstown Branch, offered prayer.

President Appleby spoke as follows:

I wish the congregation to come to order. If there are any present who do not wish to hear me, I hope they will keep silent, or if they wish to talk or converse with their friends, they will retire, so as not to discommode those who wish to hear. We wish all to hear our doctrines, investigate them for themselves, and compare them with the scriptures of eternal truth, and whether they believe them or not, it is of no consequence to us. I feel happy in my religion, also at seeing so large a congregation as there is here on the present occasion.

It is not my intention to detain you long; but whatever I may say, my prayer is that it may be indicted by the Holy Ghost and carry conviction to the hearts of the hearers; I therefore crave your undivided attention for one half hour, as my lungs are so weak, rendered so on account of much public speaking, that I do not purpose detaining you longer than that time. I wish to lay our principles before you in a pure, plain, unsophisticated manner—adapted to the comprehension of all, so that all may understand them.

I see many familiar faces around me this afternoon, associates of my youth, now men and women. It brings to my mind past reminiscences, and a feeling of sorrow sometimes pervades my bosom when reflections of the past rush into my mind, because here is the land of my birth, here are the scenes of my childhood, and near by are the graves of my father and mother, and where their ashes repose in peace. When I reflect upon those things, and look upon friends and acquaintances of former days, also many of my relatives now present, without the knowledge of God or the principles of eternal life, indifferent to all appearance of their future welfare, enjoying themselves here as they think regardless of consequences in relation to the future—when a few more days or years at most, must consign them to their mother dust, whether prepared to meet their God or not—surely, without preparation, their sun will set in a dark cloud, and the night of death will close over their devoted heads, full of misery; these reflections produce sorrow. But I have passed by that day, and I feel thankful, and I would to God that all present felt as I do this day. People may look upon me, and think me deluded—that I am foolish, and an impostor; they have a right to think of me as they see proper; they may consider me in what light they please; I am perfectly satisfied with my position; I am not uneasy, or in any way despairing of my salvation, if I continue to walk in the faith I have embraced.

I know there is intelligence in relation to God, and a hereafter in Mormonism, which is the fulness of the gospel of Jesus, that the world, religious or otherwise, does not understand, comprehend, or know but little concerning, and never will, unless they obey the commandments of the Almighty, and pass through the ordeal that all will have to pass if they inherit a celestial glory, that is, eternal life. I have investigated the doctrines called Mormonism, socially, morally, religiously, and philosophically; I have compared them with the faith and teachings of the religious world, with the scriptures, with history sacred and profane, with reason and common sense, and the more I investigate and the more experience I get, the more I am convinced, confirmed and strengthened in the principles of Mormonism—the principles of eternal truth that I have embraced. We have, and do throw down the gauntlet to the whole world—to priests, editors, and people—to successfully refute any principle of Mormonism, either scriptural, philosophical, or otherwise. You cannot find in it the first thing that will clash with the scriptures of truth. If the world, with all its boasted light, intelligence, and profound erudition, cannot overthrow it, then I say the Mormons are in possession of principles that the world, Christians and all, have not, and which they cannot refute. Why? Because it is the principle of everlasting truth—the Gospel of Jesus Christ. God has unveiled the heavens in this our day—the dispensation of the fulness of times—and given revelation to man. The Prophets who lived on the earth thousands of years ago, when wrapt in the visions of heaven, looked into the embryo of time, spoke, wrote, and prophesied concerning the latter-day work in which we are engaged, and they have left it on record; and in fulfilment of these prophecies has God sent bright legates from the throne of Heaven, beaming with light and intelligence, bearing to earth truth's unfading laurels, asserting the rights and privileges of every son and daughter of Adam that will call upon the Most High and obey His commandments. But against this pure and Heavenly truth, emanating from the fountain of light, what do we behold? All the cold and bitter prejudices of an ungodly, unbelieving world arrayed in one consolidated phalanx to oppose and endeavoring to overthrow the truth, murder the servants of God—His people—and drive them from the earth.

Who was the humble instrument under God to bring forth and establish this truth, and teach such heaven-born principles as has been revealed in our day? I answer, Joseph Smith, an illiterate youth of sixteen years old. He it was to whom God spoke from the Heavens, and sent His Holy Angel in fulfilment of Prophecy—Rev. 14: 6 and 7v.—and committed the everlasting Gospel unto him to preach to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. He it was who organized the Church and kingdom of God now on the earth, by the command of the Almighty, according to the order of Heaven, and pattern of heavenly things, with Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Pastors and Teachers; revelations, visions, ministering of angels, tongues, healings, miracles, and gift of the Holy Ghost; together with the keys of Apostleship and Priesthood, Aaronic and Melchizedeck. Teaching faith, repentance, and baptism for the remission of sins, and the laying on of the hands of those duly authorized for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Joseph Smith it was, I repeat, who brought forth and taught those doctrines, and established the Church of God in this last dispensation by revelation, the order of the church government, the truths taught and advocated by him and his followers, the Saints of the Most High, cannot be refuted, because they are invulnerable, being founded on truth. Joseph laid down his life for the truth, and so has many others. Mormonism is bound to go ahead and prosper, because God is its author, upholder and protector. In the short space of twenty-seven years, with all the combined powers of hell and earth arrayed against it, it has gone to almost every nation, kindred, tongue and people, and still it is onward, and no earthly power can stop it, and I know it. I know the work is true, and scores of others who are here surrounding me, know it also, and can bear testimony to the same. I have had an experience in this church of some seventeen years, and the more I investigate and prove Mormonism, the more am I convinced of its truth and stability. If there is anything I am proud of, it is my religion. Because it gives me peace, joy and comfort; calm as a summer's morning is my bosom; peace and happiness flow through my soul like a pure current, and I know if faithful, eternal life will be my reward, and that of all others who obey the heavenly mandate and hold out faithful to the end.

There is a great deal said concerning the Mormons and Gov. Young, originating from base and corrupt men, in relation to Mormon rebellion, treason, &c. You who know me would take my word in relation to any other subject—will you not on Mormonism, when I tell you I know for myself that the reports you hear about Gov. Young and the Mormons are false? The Mormons are a true and loyal people, and I know it. No better man than Gov. Young lives upon the face of the earth. I know him, and have proven him. He is the undeviating friend of truth and of the oppressed—a patriot, a righteous and holy man; the uncompromising enemy of vice and hypocrisy; a protector of the weak and innocent; a terror to despots and evil doers—and so are his counsellors, Heber C. Kimball and Daniel H. Wells. I know them; they are my friends, and the friends of all good men and women; their aim is the good of their fellow-men. I know that the Twelve Apostles are also good men, and hundreds and thousands of others in this church, who are willing to leave home, friends and family, —traverse sea and land,—brave the dangers of the raging deep, and the disease and pestilence of foreign climes, without purse or scrip, to proclaim the truth revealed to them, and of which they are in possession, for the benefit of their fellow-man, bearing testimony to the truths revealed from Heaven, the divine mission of Joseph Smith, and teaching the principles of life and salvation, that will exalt them in the worlds to come.

No arguments are ever used by our enemies to refute the principles we teach, only calumny and persecution, because the truths we proclaim are invulnerable, and our opposers know it well. We will abide our time and trust in the Lord, and see who will overcome, the Saints or their enemies—whether the Kingdom of God will triumph or the kingdom of the devil. The Government is going to send an army to Utah, we understand, to make the Mormons behave themselves, and put down the rebellion of Gov. Young, &c. The Mormons are quite willing an army should be sent there if the Lord wills it; but I think if it had not been for political cliquery, and fanaticism we should never have heard tell of an army being sent to Utah. Speculators and political favorites have been made rich by the excitement produced against the Mormons; by supplies furnished the army, &c.; pecuniary considerations were their object, and Utah must be made the base of their operations, and the Mormons the "scape-goat" to accomplish their designs; however Kansas wants attending to until after the election, and it is necessary to have a portion of the troops there to attend to political operations, and the alleged treason of the Mormons must be the hobby, and an excellent opportunity for sliding them into that peaceful Territory. But let the troops go to Utah, there will be a great many honest souls among them, (like those who were in Col. Steptoe's command) who have never heard the gospel. They will hear it in Utah, believe, and embrace it, join the Church, get the Priesthood, and instead of fighting, be sent on a mission of peace to preach the gospel. This has been the case with many I know of, so let the troops go, all is right, and all is well. When the troops arrive at Utah, they will find the Mormons attending to their own business, and duties, and all we ask is for the troops and all others to attend to theirs. But as I have spoken longer than I expected, I give place to my brethren.

Elder Stenhouse was introduced to and addressed the audience: I am here to-day to speak of Mormonism, and if any wish to hear me I shall endeavor to speak plainly that they may understand; but should others within the sound of my voice be indifferent I wish them to understand that there is no necessity for their remaining.

President Appleby and Dr. Clinton have spoken to you plainly on the principles of the Gospel, and each as an American citizen had something to complain of. Because of their adherence to Mormonism, they have both suffered from mobocracy and been unprotected by the governments in the States where the Saints were located. I am not an American and have not been long in the country; of personal injustice, therefore, I have nothing to say, but I think it awful foolishness for men to seek to stop the progress of Mormonism by persecution. If the Mormons are deluded they should be objects of pity and commiseration. No one would ever think of applying a stick to the backs of the blind to restore them to sight; but such an application of the rod would be no more ridiculous and wicked than the persecution of any person for his faith. I have preached Mormonism in different nations of the earth and have been a witness of its power upon those who would receive it and abide by the laws of God; but I have likewise learned that every person is free before God to do right or do wrong and reap the reward that springs from an upright course or the consequences which flow from the practice of iniquity. I am ever ready to bear testimony to the truth and urge men and women on to the examination and adoption of correct principles, as by a life of righteousness alone can happiness be obtained, but I never would seek to force my principles upon any one.

To me, Mormonism is not only in perfect harmony with the Scriptures, but in whatever manner I look at it I find traces of Divinity. To others it may appear differently; yet I see no reason for warfare between us. I am so fully convinced of the power and influence of circumstances upon men that instead of feeling uplifted because of the light and intelligence which the Lord has been pleased to bestow upon me, I consider myself under greater obligations to be humble and more faithful in extending a knowledge of that truth to others—and in doing so I approach this audience with a clear remembrance of what I have been, the rock from whence I was hewn, and the pit from whence I was dug. My feelings are, therefore, to do good and I ask your best attention.

Of Joseph Smith various and conflicting are the opinions. By those intimately acquainted with him, his name is held in reverence; by those unacquainted with his life and labors, he is generally regarded as an impostor. Probably enemies may be as sincere in their adverse conviction to Joseph's claim to be a servant of the Most High, as his brethren are in support of the divinity of his mission. Sincerity in either fails to prove anything for or against him. The work Joseph has introduced into the world speaks for him. By the princles he taught can he alone be judged. It has been said by the brethren who have preceded me that he taught the Gospel of Jesus Christ—faith, repentance, baptism, and the laying on of the hands of the elders for the gift of the Holy Ghost—as taught and practiced anciently by the Apostles, Peter, James, John, Paul and others. This is true; but I would add that the great and glorious effects of that teaching is more evidence to me of his high calling than the preaching of such scriptural doctrines

What has been accomplished? Thousands of men and women, who have been wavering over the salvation offered to the world through Jesus Christ, have learned through the labors of Joseph Smith, and the brethren on whom he conferred the Priesthood, that the Gospel had indeed within itself the power to save man from the corruptions in the world and their direful consequences. The unwavering faith of the Saints is proverbial. It was not that milk and water faith—the result of education and circumstances of birth, which nourished in the British Isles alone three popular divisions of Christians, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Catholics, or elsewhere in the world worshippers of the sun, moon, stars, and idols, the workmanship of human hands. The faith of the Mormons was that abiding confidence in the Lord for present and future direction, that secret whispering something which buoys them up and enables them to endure all things for His name's sake. It was not a mere recognition that God was good, that Christ was His son; but it was that perfect assurance that life and happiness were in the narrow way—and there alone to seek for them. This was the faith that Joseph Smith taught and the thousands and tens of thousands who are this day gathered in far off Utah, united heart and hand in building up the Kingdom of God, are so many evidences of the power of that faith. The repentence of the Mormons is not that equivocating thing known among christians—repent to-day and sin to-morrow. It is repent and sin no more. He that has stolen, steal no more and he that has committed adultery let him turn from his wickedness and abstain from evil, or the long suffering of a virtuous God will be exhausted and the messenger of death will be on his heels. What men have done in past times God will forgive; but when men name the name of the Lord they have got to turn their back upon the world and its corruptions. There is no easy going morality among the Mormons as exhibited in the ranks of Christians. What a man sows in Mormonism it will tell its own tale, good or evil. Can we, therefore, sin, can we injure one another? We cannot: we dare not: for our salvation is at stake. I can trust these my brethren around me, because I know that they are good men, and are hedged up by the pure laws of God from doing iniquity. Joseph Smith's labors have thus not only taught men confidence in God; but confidence in each other. You are divided and you cannot trust your neighbor; but whenever I meet a man who lives Mormonism I can trust him. In the hour of danger you fly from each other, and when a favor is wanted you are not on hand. The very nature of your business transactions and worldly practices lead you into the adoption of the meanest habits; but when trouble threatens a Mormon his friends are around him.

When we believe in God and Christ, repent of our sins and are baptized, we seek after the Holy Ghost to lead and guide us in the way of righteousness. The world seeks the light of the almighty dollar—he is their best friend. By his guidance the most artful cupidity is practiced, and men seek by every stratagem to overreach each other; and whatever you may think of the Mormons, it is only the truth when I tell you that you have got to do much better than Christians do in general before you can with safety walk in Mormonism. The Mormons seek the light of the Holy Ghost to guide them in the accomplishment of every duty—not on Sundays particularly, but every day alike. If your religion were not so much of a Sunday operation, perhaps you would be a better people; but the habit of putting on Sunday clothes, going to church when the bell rings, and on return laying down the good old Bible in a quiet corner and casting off the church-going garments, without looking at them again till the following Sunday, has become so popular, that you have got into the idea that the service of God consisted in going to meeting, and that when that is done you may forget God and His cause on Monday, and as the world is wicked, you can only do as the world does, and there you sin. But in Mormonism every day is alike, and righteousness all the time.

Permit me, therefore, to say to you, in conclusion, that before you speak against the Mormons, see that you are better than they are, that your actions will stand the scrutinizing eye of Almighty God better than theirs, that your professions of faith in the Bible be nearer the spirit and the letter of that holy book than theirs, and your condemnations will have some value. I thank you for your attention, and pray God to bless all who desire to work righteousness, and to live in the enjoyment of His holy Spirit.

President Cannon arose and said it was the third season that he had met with the people from that section of country in camp meeting at that place, and as he did not know whether he should have another opportunity of speaking to them, he could bear testimony that what had been spoken during the meetings had been spoken for the benefit of the people, and by men who were honest, upright, and desirous of saving them. He knew what was said was true, and if anything had been said harshly it was not from bad feelings in the speakers, but was from the earnestness of their souls to arouse the people to an examination of that which would lead them to salvation. He exhorted the people to do right, bore testimony to the work of Jehovah in the Last-days, and left a favorable impression on the minds of many that Mormonism was onward and upward in spite of indifference and opposition.

Before terminating the meetings, President Cannon proposed a vote of thanks to Moses Ivins, Esq. and Elder Wikoff for the accommodations they had each rendered for holding the meetings on their grounds: likewise to Elder Treseder and the Hornerstown Saints for their labors in preparing the necessary accommodation for Saints and strangers.

The meeting was dismissed by Elder E. R. Young. The Trenton band, under the leadership of Elder Eardley, played several sacred airs during the intervals of service, which was something by way of variety to some of our christian neighbors of Cream Ridge.

Had time permitted to have called other Elders, we fully expected to have listened to Capt. Reamer, Elder Robbins and Elder Asay who were on the stand, but this privilege we were denied.

On Monday morning, Prest. Appleby, his counsellors and Dr. Clinton met in council, and adopted such measures as were necessary for the further progress of the work of the Lord in the Eastern States.

In the afternoon, the Saints had a picnic on the camp ground. We did then intend to try our descriptive powers at recording the meats, the preserves and the fruits that loaded down the bountiful table, but our space is now limited, and our time is considerably taxed to make up for our absence; we must, therefore, only say that everything was first-rate, in abundance, and richly enjoyed by all. We returned home to Elder Wikoff's after dusk, well pleased with ourselves and every body else, not aware that a wrong word had been uttered, or an evil thought harbored in any bosom.

On Tuesday, we all left for our different fields of labor, thanking our Heavenly Father for the light, joy and intelligence in Mormonism. We take this opportunity of thanking Elder Wikoff and his family for the courtesies of their house which they so very kindly extended to us and numerous brethren, and our thanks are likewise due to Mr. Edward Wikoff and lady for many acts of kindness.

DOMESTIC SUMMARY.

MRS. CUNNINGHAM is ever an interesting subject, and continues to occupy the attention of the bulletin readers at the doors of the dailies; but a greater than Mrs. C. is now before the country—"the Almighty Dollar." Failures are numerous, and banks "busting" is a common business. For more than a week the absorbing subject kept before the public is the "money panic," and brokers have been doing a stout business at shaving even good notes. Thompson, the great broker, has himself broken; and his "Reporter," that was busy reporting others, has to stand quiet a moment to be itself reported, and at the present moment his name on the bulletins has fairly cast Mrs. Cunningham and the "Bogus Baby" in the shade. The crisis is not over, and trade that was before dull is duller to a painful heaviness in many branches of industry.

City politicians are beginning to show early signs of preparations for the autumnal State elections. Campaign journals are sending out their prospectus—publishers are great patriots! The world could not budge without the willing sacrifices they make! Poor men, what persecutions they are willing to endure for the salvation of the nation! The coming struggle is not altogether party against party; but the Democratic parent has the mortification of beholding the division in his own family. The office plunder has not been fairly shared, thinks the outside party, and therefore Greek is to meet Greek in the tug for the crumbs.

"The Emancipation Convention" commenced its sittings last week at Cleveland, and the philanthropic Elihu Burritt and friends have been quite in earnest discussing the entire emancipation of slavery in the States—at the expense of Government. The convention adjourned sine die on Friday.

Old Hickory's gold snuff box has made the heroes of Mexico strut about, and, peacock like, display their feathers; but, apparently, the exhibition has been of no avail. The committee appointed to find out the bravest man stick to their choice, in the person of Lieutenat-Colonel Dyckman, and their representatives are off to General Jackson's heir for the valued treasure, in order to present it to the Lieutenant-Colonel at an early day. That box is destined to be a bone of contention, so long as it is considered worth presentation from brave to brave, as most assuredly the plains of Mexico are not to be the last fields of battle in American history.

New York has its seasons of epidemics. Last winter was famous for garrotting and murders. Small affairs, such as drowning, hanging, poisoning, seductions, and duelling, fill up the intervals between the last to the next. The fever for embezzling is now at its height. Persons of trust and respectability are almost daily dragged before the public, and their pilfering dishonesty detailed to gratify the morbid curiosity. Several cases within a few days have been quite interesting to those who take pleasure in unrighteousness, the details serving as important lessons for future use. Weary world.

On Friday morning last, a destructive storm along the coast led to a number of serious disasters to vessels, and to a loss of several lives. Several vessels are now lying sunk near Barnegat.

A medical gentleman in Philadelphia is now before the public, charged with rape and producing abortion. What a nice sense of morality a Philadelphia judge must have when such a scamp is let at large on $2,000 bail The victim is a young Jewess. Have her relatives forgotten Moses?

A greater scamp than the doctor, a minister of Burlington, N. J., committed rape last week on the person of a young girl of fifteen years of age. By flight he got clear from the enraged father, who was on his track, and has not yet been taken. This holy, hypocritical blackguard should be given up to a father's or brother's administration of law.

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

NATURALLY enough, the breaking of the Atlantic telegraphic cable, and the consequent failure, for the present, of the greatest undertaking of the day, is the subject of interest in the old world. At last advices, no decision had been arrived at by the directors; whether they would immediately attempt again the great task, wait till after the equinoctial gales or till next summer has not been announced. The despatch from the Plymouth correspondent of the London Times, published elsewhere, shows how the cable broke. The engineer, directing the paying out of the cable comes in for a large share of censure. It is an easy matter to criticise and condemn a failure.

Any news from India is important at the present moment in England, hence by the arrival of the last steamer "Important News" was announced. Though Delhi had not fallen "the rebels" had made several desperate sorties and were repulsed with great loss. The city is reported to be full of sick and wounded. The cholera is telling upon the besieged. The British force before Delhi is stated to be from 7,000 to 8,000 Europeans and 5,000 natives. The native portion of the force has proved trustworthy. The rebels had been dispersed at Allahabad, and the post saved. The barracks at Carowpore were closely beseiged by the insurgents, but hold out bravely. Re-enforcements were marching to their relief. The whole of Oude had risen; but Sir Henry Lawrence with his small force kept the enemy in check. At Sirsa, Gen. Van Cortlandt had attacked and completely defeated the insurgents, inflicting heavy loss. Gen. Woodburn's column had completely crushed rebellion at Auruagzebad. Intelligence had been received of the mutiny of the troops at Mosandabad, Syrabad, Soctopore, Sangor, Nogwong, Puthighur, Inbow and Indore. Pshawar is disturbed, and three regiments had been disarmed there. Sir Colin Campbell arrived at Aden on the 28th of July.

The first batch of the China corps had arrived at Calcutta and the re-enforcements from Europe were expected to pour in daily till the rebellion should be crushed. The English in India speak confidently of ultimate success, and think that now "the flood of the insurrection has been past."

The British government is fully sustained by both Lords and Commons, and any additional "material aid," which the premier may call for will be granted with little or no opposition. The stakes are great and so many interests involved that India must be conquered.

The Parisians had quite a gay time at the fete of the Old Napoleon—15th August. The great national work—the building of the Louvre, which had occupied the time and attention of royality in France for generations, got finished the day before, just in time for Louis to receive a bumper of congratulations, make a speech, distribute decorations and grant pardons to criminals—all which he knows how to do as well as any living man, when required to strengthen his reign. It was currently reported that the government had already spoken with the English Ambassador at Paris for Ledru Rollin on the law of extradition; but Palmerston, in the House of Commons on the 21st, dissipates the illusion from Louis' mind by replying to a question there asked of him. We have no power by law to grant any such application. This will do "Pam" more good than all he has lost by previous flunkeyism around crowned heads.

Mr. Bright, the chief engineer charged with laying the Atlantic Telegraph, publishes a very interesting letter on the breaking of the cable, and shows that by a slight blunder of a subordinate it snapped and ruined for the time the expedition.

The Greek Church in Syria and Egypt seems to be again in hot water.

Intelligence from Tunis announces considerable sanguinary disturbances there, in which the Jews come in for a large share of persecution. Christians have likewise been menaced. Several persons killed, and among the insulted, the British Consul. Now for a roar from the Lion.

By the arrival of the Vanderbilt yesterday (Wednesday) we have advices from England up to the 22d August.

The latest news from India gives the death of General Barnard, from dysentery. The general was commanding the British army besieging Delhi. That city still holds out. Sir Henry Lawrence died of wounds received in a sortie from Lucknow.

Schamyl, with 25,000 Circassians, is said to have defeated the Russians on the banks of the Kuban after a battle of ten hours' duration and taken several fortified places, previously occupied by the Russian troops.

FOR THE MORMON.

Consistency and Inconsistency.

BY ALEXANDER OTT.

No matter what a vast conglomeration of heterogeneous dispositions and talents—what endless gradations of intellectual, physical and social improvement the human family represents—the intercourse with our fellow-beings shows that nature operates in all alike; that is to say, the same frailties and weaknesses of mortality are visiting the humble cottage of the peasant, and the gorgeous palace of the prince; the same moral and intellectual imperfections find access to the study of lofty genius and the workshops of the most illiterate.

Man is but man; his ideas, words, motives and actions have more or less the characteristic hue of a certain position; in fact the whole intellectual and moral circle is tinged with the influence of a certain sphere; further it would be more than human nature to meet with a man who is entirelg free from a little over estimation of his ownself; yes, from a downright dunce up to the most refined genius, man is more or less inclined to look only upon the demerits of others without noticing his own—hence his judgment is only relatively consistent or inconsistent, and consequently every being from the highest to the lowest scale of human existence has his peculiar views of consistency and inconsistency, and fancies he can do certain things better than his neighbor; this arises from the great difficulty with man to see a thing in its real light—but inasmuch as almost every one likes to contemplate the mirror of his own greatness, looking upon the weaknesses of others generally through green glasses, everything he does is consistent, and everything done by his fellow-beings is inconsistent.

It has always been with feelings of great interest that I have watched the natural movements of the mind. The very same thing which appears to us to-day consistent, may appear to-morrow inconsistent, and so vice versa; not because it is so, but because we look to-day, when in good or buoyant spirits, upon a thing through a kaleidescope (a beautifying glass,) to-morrow, when gloomy or excited, the same thing appears to us through green glasses; in fact there is a variety of external and internal influences operating upon us which cause a constant fluctuation of the mind, and this variety of changes disturbs naturally the mental harmony; changes consequently our views, in fact, we look, when of a morbid mind, upon a thing different from what we do when intellectually sound.

The great difficulty with man is to know what he does know, and to know what he does not know, if he did, a fool would know himself to be a fool, and not endeavor to impalm himself upon the world as a wiseacre. Further, man can seldom see a thing in its true light, and call it by its right name, hence to pronounce a person or a thing inconsistent, on account of its disagreement from our views, which may be just as inconsistent as those of our fellow beings, proves nothing. The greatest inconsistency with man is, to suppose to make a person or a thing appear inconsistent, because he says so, forgetting entirely that not by words but by facts a consistency or inconsistency is proved.

How often do we not hear persons of mental insignificance blaming the actions of others without remembering, however, that the very same thing which they pronounce foolish, absurd, was done by them, with the only difference, that being in a higher position, nobody dared to oppose them, but the actions of inferior are directly anathemized, hence the very same actions of a person of smaller influence is often called inconsistent, stupid, a disgrace to common sense, but when performed by a person of higher standing, it is a paragon of wisdom and intelligence, consequently the consistency and inconsistency of an action does not always depend upon its intrinsic value or worth, but upon the position and influence of the doer, hence a consistency is often an inconsistency and so vice versa; this is in accordance with the weaknesses of mortality, and is only a consistent inconsistency, viz.: it is inconsistent with good sence, but consistent with human nature.

It is evident from the foregoing that consistency and inconsistency are merely relative terms. A consistency may be real or imaginary; again, a real consistency may be either narrative or argumentative. A real inconsistency is the advancement of two propositions of which one involves the negation of the other, so that one destroys the other, for instance: a certain author giving a description of the capitol of the fabulous land of Utopia, says, in the midst of the city stands the royal palace, one apartment of which is larger than the whole building, in which it is situated; here the reader will see the incongruity and utter impossibility of a part of the palace being larger than the whole building. The above would be an inconsistency in a narration. An argumentative inconsistency would be to believe or infer, that because one member of a society or nation is dishonest, the whole society or nation should be dishonest, but if the majority of a society or nation were dishonest, the natural and consistent conclusion would then be that the whole society or nation is corrupt, because the moral or immoral value or worth of a society or nation is established by the virtuous or vicious conduct the majority of a society or nation, and further, because by the majority of similar cases in the mental, moral and physical creation, rules, principles and characteristic features are established.

Reader, take always things as they are, do not look upon them through artificial but through natural glasses of sober senses, be consistent in all your words and actions, and if you cannot help yourself, be inconsistent with consistency.

Under what Circumstances is Polygamy a Sin?

MARRIAGE is a divine institution; but like other institutions of heaven, it has its limits and conditions. If the limits be not transcended, nor the conditions violated, the parties marrying are justified; otherwise they are condemned.

Among ancient Israel, marriage was forbidden within certain degrees of consanguinity. However lawful it were for a man to marry one wife, yet he was not at liberty to select any one of the number which the Lord had forbidden. If the Monogamist did not observe these conditions, he subjected himself to the penalty of death.

The Polygamist was not only laid under the same restraints as the Monogamist, but placed under additional restraints in regard to the persons whom he should select as additional wives. He was not permitted by the law of Moses to marry the sister of his wife. (See Leviticus xviii. 18.) Neither was he permitted to marry a mother and daughter. "And if a man take a wife and her mother, it is wickedness; they shall be burnt with fire both he and they; that there be no wickedness among you." (See Leviticus xx. 14.)

Before the law of Moses was given, the Patriarch Jacob married four wives, two of whom were sisters, and the Lord approved and greatly blessed both him and his wives, and made the latter honorable mothers of the twelve tribes of Israel. Some things which in the days of Jacob were righteous, under the law of Moses were forbidden. While this law was in force, no Israelite could marry the sisters of his wife without incurring its penalty.

In the beginning, the sons of Adam married their own sisters, and were justified; but under the law of Moses such marriages were condemned, and the offenders punished with death. (See Leviticus xx. 17.)

The law of Moses did not permit marriages with daughters-in-law; yet the Lord Jesus, and all the kings of Judah descended from Phatez, who was the son of Judah by his daughter-in-law Tamer.

The law of Moses did not permit marriages with daughters, yet righteous Lot begat Moab and Amon by his two daughters. To what extent these acts of Judah and Lot were sinful, under the circumstances, we are not informed; but it is evident that many things that were forbidden under the law of Moses were justifiable, under certain circumstances before the law was given.

Neither the old nor New Testament condemns Polygamy, yet the Polygamist Israelite was under a law restricting him within certain limits. Though he had a right to marry wives, yet he had no right to marry a mother and daughter or two sisters. Though justified as a Pluralist, he had no right to withhold from either wife, "her food, her raiment, and her duty of marriage." (See Exodus xxi. 10.) It was said concerning each of the kings of Israel, "he shall not multiply horses to himself. . . . . Neither shall he multiply wives to himself, that his heart turn not away; neither shall he greatly multiply to himself silver and gold." (Deut. vii. 16, 17.) This restriction did not limit a king to one horse, nor to one talent of gold, nor to one wife; but the idea conveyed was, that he should not multiply any of these things to excess. Though justified in marrying a reasonable number of wives, he had no right to increase the number to that extent that he could not fulfil to each "her duty of marriage."

But the Polygamist and Monogamist were strictly forbidden to inter-marry with certain idolatrous nations. Also the High Priest in Israel was forbidden to marry even a widow. The Lord said, "He shall take a wife in her virginity. A widow or a divorced person, or profane, or an harlot, these shall he not take; but he shall take a virgin of his own people to wife. (Leviticus xxi. 13, 14.)

Though the Bible does not condemn Polygamy, yet the Book of Mormon prohibited it among the colony of Israelites who settled in ancient America. They were strictly limited to one wife, unless the Lord commanded otherwise, for the purpose of raising up seed unto Himself. "David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord." Solomon had multiplied to himself "seven hundred wives and three hundred concubines." David had taken Uriah's wife unlawfully. In these respects they became transgressors of the law; also Solomon transgressed the law in marrying many idolatrous wives, which thing the Lord had expressly forbidden. All these things were abominable before the Lord, just as the Book of Mormon declares.

Neither David nor Solomon were condemned for marrying the reasonable number of wives which the Lord gave them. The Lord Himself gave into David's bosom all the wives of his master Saul. (See 2 Samuel xii. 8.) David already had a family of seven wives, (See 2 Samuel iii.) and the Lord knowing him to be a man after His own heart, concluded to give him all Saul's wives in addition. It was not for these things that David was condemned; but both he and Solomon were condemned for multiplying or increasing the number unlawfully, or contrary to the law of Moses. The Lord says, "In nothing did they sin, save in those things which they received not of me. (Seer p. 10.) Clothing, food, and other property, when obtained lawfully are blessings; when obtained unlawfully, the act is an abomination before the Lord. So likewise wives given to a man, by the Lord, are blessings; but when taken unlawfully are curses. To receive them of the Lord is righteous; to take them unlawfully is exceedingly sinful.

The Latter-day Saints, from the rise of the Church in 1830, till the year 1843, had no authority to marry more than one wife each. To have done otherwise would have been a great transgression. But when the commandment came for the purpose of multiplying a righteous people, Polygamy became lawful, under circumstances where it would not trangress the laws of the land.

It would be unlawful to marry a plurality of wives in England, or in any other parts of the earth where it is forbidden by the laws of man. But to practice Polygamy in Utah, under the restrictions and limits which God has ordained, is not a transgression of any law either human or divine.

If marriage is a divine institution, God has the most perfect right to control, by revelation, everything appertaining to it; either to give His servants but one wife each, as among the ancient American Israelites; or to give to some a plural number, as He did to His ancient servants on the eastern hemisphere. Indeed, God has the undoubted right to permit one man to marry a widow or divorced person; to forbid another to marry any but virgins; to give to a third, one wife; to give to a fourth, because of his wickedness, none at all; and to give to a fifth a plural number, because of his righteousness. Thus dispensing His blessings according to the worthiness of the individuals who receive them.

Arrival of Missionaries in Liverpool.

THE following missionaries from Great Salt Lake Valley, arrived here on the 4th inst. from New York, per ship Dreadnought, after a passage of twenty-six days:—Henry Herriman, Ebenezer C. Richardson, Joseph W. Young, Brigham H. Young, Seymour B. Young, Samuel H. B. Smith, Enoch Reese, Phillip Margetts, James Brooks, Eli H. Peirce, David Wilkin, William J. Stewart, Robert Logan, William P. Thomas, William J. Harris, Martin L. Ensign, John Y. Green, Ruben McBride, James Andrus, and Peter Harrocks.

Also, on the 9th inst., the following missionaries arrived at this port, by the Columbia, from New York:—Elders Iver N. Iverson, Richard G. Evans, and John W. Berry; by the Nonpareil, from Philadelphia, Elders Jabez Woodard, Frederick Roulet, Jean D. Malan, William Bramall, Robert E. Miller, Samuel Longbottom, George Stanaforth, and Amos Taylor.

We hail with pleasure the arrival of these brethren, and feel assured that they will give renewed strength and energy to the work of the Lord. In company with fifty other Elders, destined for various portions of the earth, they crossed the plains with hand-carts. They all testify that the hand-cart mode of crossing the plains is cheap, practical, agreeable, and expeditious, and far less hazardous and laborious than crossing with oxen, which require watching day and night. These Elders have proved their faith by their works. Let the Saints in Europe do likewise—save means as fast as possible, and make your way to Zion, that you may not partake of the sins of Babylon, nor receive of her plagues.

Appointments.

ELDERS JOSEPH W. YOUNG, John Y. Green, are appointed to labor in the Scandinavian Mission, under the direction of Elder Hector C. Haight.

Elder Ebenezer C. Richardson is appointed to preside over the Cape of Good Hope Mission.

Elder James Brooks is appointed to labor under the direction of Elder Ebenezer C. Richardson, in the Cape of Good Hope Mission.

Elders Enoch Reese, and William P. Thomas, are appointed to labor in the Welsh Mission, under the direction of Daniel Daniels.

Elders Samuel H. B. Smith, William J. Stewart, and Seymour B. Young, are appointed to labor in the Sheffield Pastorate, under the direction of Elder L. H. Hatch.

Elder Robert Logan is appointed to labor in the Glasgow Pastorate, under the direction of Elder James Ure.

Elders William J. Harris, and Peter Harrocks are appointed to labor in the Manchester Pastorate, under the direction of Elder Miles Romney.

Elder Ruben McBride is appointed to labor in the Nottinghamshire Pastorate, under the direction of Elder Thomas R. King.

Elder James Andrus is appointed to labor in the South Pastorate, under the direction of Elder Robert F. Neslen.

Elder Brigham H. Young is appointed to labor in the Southampton Pastorate, under the direction of Elder Bernard Snow.

Elders Henry Herriman, and Phillip Margetts, are appointed to labor in the London Pastorate under the direction of Elder James D. Ross.

Elder Martin L. Ensign is appointed to labor in the Newcastle-upon-Tyne Pastorate, under the direction of Elder William J. Smith.

Elder David Wilkin is appointed to labor in the Irish Mission, under the direction of Elder John Scott.

Elder Eli H. Peirce is appointed to labor in the Birmingham Pastorate, under the direction of Elder William S. Muir.

Correspondence of President Ott.

LOWELL, Mass., Aug. 24. '57.

PRESI. APPLEBY—Dear Brother: On the 15th inst. I left New York for Norwalk, Conn., where I arrived the same day. On Sunday, the 16th, I attended, in company with Bro. Young, a meeting in a grove near Bro. Merril's, and spoke for some time to the audience on the principles of eternal truth. After I had finished, Bro. Young made some excellent and pointed remarks on the principle of exclusive salvation. In the evening I rode with Bro. Young to his residence near Westport, where I was received with that kindness and hospitality which forms a conspicuous feature of every Saint.

On the 18th I took the cars for Canaan, in the north-west part of Connecticut, and reached on the afternoon of the same day the picturesque home of Bro. Joshua Benedict. I baptized in that place four persons, two of whom are new members. In the evening, I called the Saints together, and, after a short address, I organized them under the name of the East Canaan Branch, with Bro. Benedict as President. The people in the little village being informed of the arrival of a Mormon Elder, I preached on the 19th to a goodly number of strangers in the house of Brother Moses.

On the 20th, I took the cars for Wallingford, and arrived in the evening at Brother Doolittle's.

On the 21st, I went to see the Saints in Fairhaven, and gave them instructions concerning their duties as members of the Church of Christ. I returned the same day to Wallingford, and preached there in the evening on the first principles of the Gospel. Early in the morning, I re-baptized Bro. Doolittle, who was anxiously waiting for me, and feels more than ever determined to live his religion. I left the same day for Holyoke, where I found Bro. William Walker, with his branch of the Church, well in body and mind. I addressed the Saints three times on various principles. An excellent spirit prevailed as usual in the meetings, as was evident from the gift of tongues and prophecy in their midst. Several were re-baptized, and one young lady joined the Church and was confirmed under my hands.

On the 24th, I took the cars for Lowell, where I was received by Bro. Davis and his family.

Dear brother, it is with feelings of satisfaction and pleasure that I can inform you of the good condition of the Saints generally in this Conference, and that they are desirous to carry out the instructions of the authorites of the Church. I have likewise gratefully to acknowledge the many kindnesses I have received from the Saints among whom I sojourned for a short time, and I pray that God may bless them with His choicest blessings. Wherever my steps led me, I have found more or less a spirit of enquiry among strangers, and I had no difficulty in settling questions amicably, without causing any ill-feeling among the people. I always endeavor to leave a good influence behind me, and if I cannot convince strangers of the truth of Mormonism, I want them at least to be our friends, knowing that whoever can do me no good as a friend, can always do me some harm as an enemy.

Hoping that these lines will find you in good health, I beg you to receive my kindest regards.

Yours in the Gospel of Peace,
ALEXANDER OTT.

Letter from Brother Seager.

TOMS RIVER, Aug. 24th, 1857.

DEAR BROTHER APPLEBY: The Lord has thought proper to call from this world my dear and much beloved child, Mary Elizabeth. She was born in England, April 22nd, 1850, and departed this life at Toms River, Aug. 20th, 1857. Her body was taken to the Mormon grave yard, and there deposited in a grave consecrated for that purpose by President Wm. C. Reamer, on Saturday, the 22nd, in the presence of a goodly number of the priesthood and the brethren and sisters comprising the Toms River Branch. Dear brother, I cannot find words to express myself for the many acts of kindness conferred upon me by Ed. W. Ivins, Esq., and sister Ivins, for had the dear child been their own I could not have expected them to have been more kind than they have been. The sisters Brown, likewise, and I might say all that live near have paid the greatest respect to their departed sister. I feel to appreciate their kindness, and I would to God that the love that animates the Saints at Toms River did animate everyone that has the name of a Saint throughout the world, as nothing less than the love of God abides in them, and it is with this people that I mean to live, and with them I hope to die, and with them and you, and all the faithful in Israel I hope to come forth in the morning of the first resurrection and receive my dear departed child, and all my dead in the Lord with a celestial Crown of Glory—these are my earnest prayers to God, my heavenly Father—I ask these blessings in the worthy name of Jesus Christ, amen.

I remain your brother, in the new and everlasting covenant, G. SEAGER.

DIED,

In Williamsburgh, N. Y., September 2, 1857, Elder JOHN WHALL, of consumption, after a long and painful illness, beloved and respected by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. In his last moments of consciousness he expressed his full faith and confidence in the Latter-day work of God. He departed calmly in full hope of a glorious resurrection.—COM.

[We cannot say that we are greatly pained in reading the above communication. For nearly two years Bro. Whall's friends had lost all hopes of his recovery. During that time he has suffered much. He bore his affliction with patience and longed for his immortal spirit to be released from its tenement of clay. We went to see him a short time before his death, and, though weighed down with suffering, found him the same good, free, honest-hearted and lively Bro. Whall. So visibly was the disease rapidly shortening his days that we sat looking upon him in silent sadness for some time—reflecting on the power that the destroyer had gained over mortals—yet we could not refrain from rejoicing in the work of redemption, again revealed to man, that freed Bro. Whall from the miserable uncertainties of sectarianism and led his spirit to contemplate with joy the morning of the First Resurrection when he should be clothed with immortality and triumph over death.

We deeply sympathize with sister Whall in her bereavement. We know no one who need take greater comfort from the sense of a faithful discharge of a wife's duties to a husband in health and in sickness, and from the knowledge that the partner of her life was universally beloved.

Bro. Whall's relatives in Utah need not be told, we presume, that the deceased was, and is, interested in the emigration of his widow to the home of the Saints.—ED.]

TELEGRAPHIC.

Later from Santa Fe—Acquittal of Gov. Robinson.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 26, 1857.

The Santa Fe mail, as late as due, has arrived here, but it brings no news of importance.

The contest between the candidates for Congress was violent and exciting.

The mail party met Col. Sumner at Fort Atchinson, en route for Bent's Fort. A few days previous to this, Col. Sumner was attacked by 400 Cheyennes. Col. S. routed and killed nine of them, destroying their property and taking their animals.

Gov. Robinson of Kansas has been tried and acquitted.

News from Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26, 1857.

General Scott arrived here this morning. He has been busy all day with General Jessup in making out a programme for the movement of troops for Utah. They have finally decided that the expedition to Utah shall proceed. It is not decided yet whether General Harney or Colonel Johnson will command the expedition. Governor Walker is very anxious to retain Harney in Kansas. A messenger will be despatched to Kansas to-morrow to settle the matter.

Dr. Forney, of Pennsylvania was to-day appointed Superintendent of Indian Affairs for Utah. This completes all the appointments for that Territory. They will all proceed West immediately, and join the army at Fort Laramie. Governor Cumming is now at Fort Leavenworth, waiting for the other appointees to arrive

WASHINGTON, August 27th, 1857.

The Secretary of War to-day received intelligence that a desperate engagement recently took place between the United States troops commanded by Colonel Sumner and a large band of Cheyenne Indians, in which two officers and one or two privates were killed. The slaughter among the Indians was terrible. Full particulars are expected in a few days. Colonel Sumner was sent out on this expedition to chastise these Indians for depredations committed last year.

Despatches were received to-day from Governor Walker, in Kansas. He reports everything quiet in the territory. He is, however, apprehensive that difficulties may arise at the October election, and that it will be necessary to have a full military force stationed in some localities in case any riot or outbreak should occur.

The New Granadian negociations are drawing to a close. The treaty will doubtless be concluded in a few days.

The accident to the telegraph cable and its probable failure for this season are seriously regretted by the President and Cabinet. The President was very sanguine of its success.

Attempted Assassination.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 26.

Mr. James Brown, of the firm of Wm. McKee & Co., of this city, dry goods merchants in South Front street, on returning yesterday in company with his four children in a carriage to his country seat, below Marcus Hook, on the western bank of the Delaware, drew up opposite his residence to let the upward train of cars from Wilmington pass, when he was fired at by a passenger from a six barreled revolver, and struck in the left cheek, the ball lodging under the left ear. Mr. Brown was carried to his residence in an insensible state, and up to 9 o'clock this morning the ball had not been extracted. The would-be assassin has been secured. No cause is assigned for this cowardly attack. A subsequent account says that the shot was fired at an agent of the railroad line who had incurred the displeasure of the miscreant.

Appointments

ELDER JETER CLINTON is hereby appointed to take charge of, and preside over the New York Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, in the place of President Alexander Ott, who is appointed on a mission to preach the Gospel to the Germans in said conference. Elder Clinton will also act as an Assistant Counsellor to the Presidency of the Church in the Eastern States.

All the Presiding Elders over Branches of the Church, and Traveling Elders in said conference, will hereafter correspond with him in relation to their several duties in their respective fields of labor.

Elder Karl Gottfried Maeser is hereby appointed on a mission to preach the Gospel to the Germans in the Philadelphia Conference of said Church.

Elder John F. Sandiker is hereby appointed to assist Elder Maeser in said German Mission.

Those Elders appointed on missions to the Germans will correspond with, and report their labors from time to time, to the Presidency at New York.

W. I. APPLEBY,

New York, September 4th, 1857.

As Elder Ott has been released from the Presidency of the New York Conference, and appointed to an important mission to preach the Gospel to his countrymen, the Germans. We think it due to him that we express our approbation of his labors since he was called to occupy the position of President of said conference. Brother Ott has labored diligently and faithfully in his conference, and carried out our instructions in counselling, teaching, and in building up the Saints; preaching the Gospel, whenever an opportunity offered, and his labors have been blessed and crowned with success, and he has our blessings.

But, in conformity with the wishes of President Brigham Young, we are desirous to spread the Gospel among the German population, and for this work Brother Ott is eminently qualified. He came from Utah on a mission to the German population of this (New York) State, and we ardently trust that he will yet do a good work among them. Wherever Brother Ott may labor, we hope that the Saints will minister to him, and strengthen his hands.

Conference at Philadelphia.

THE Traveling Elders and Presidents of Branches, comprising the Philadelphia Conference, are expected to meet in Council on Saturday, October 3, at 7 P. M., at the house of Elder William Wright—the first house in Weaver street, below Coates, between Fifth and Sixth streets, Philadelphia. They will please come prepared with a report of their labors and of the situation of the Saints committed to their charge.

The Semi-Annual Conference will be held the following day, October 4th, at the Saints' Hall, commencing at half-past ten A. M.

ANGUS M. CANNON, President.

How the Cable Broke.

PLYMOUTH, Aug. 14—Evening.

The United States steam frigate Niagara, Captain Hudson, from the Atlantic, followed by the Susquehanna, Captain Sands, and her majesty's screw steamship Agamemnon, Master Commander Noddall, entered the Sound this afternoon on their return from their unsuccessful effort to lay the telegraphic cable. On board the Niagara they report that at the time of the soversance, a quarter to four o'clock on Tuesday morning, 335 nautical or about 380 statute miles had been laid, at a distance of 260 to 280 miles in a direct course from Valentia. The wind was southerly there was some sea, and the ship was going from three to four knots, and the cable paying out five to six, and sometimes seven, knots.

As the quantity of slack thus expended was greater than expected at starting, and more than could be afforded, the retard strain was therefore increased to a pressure of 3,000 pounds, and the cable broke.

The extra expenditure of slack commenced on Monday evening, when a strong breeze and heavy swell prevailed, and a powerful undercurrent was experienced. This current forced the wire from the ship at a considerable angle.

When the break was applied with increased power the stern of the Niagara was down in the trough of a sea, and the extra strain created by her rising was the immediate cause of the cable parting.

The Susquehanna was a mile off on the Niagara's starboard beam; the Agamemnon, the Cyclops, and the Leopard, were within hailing distance.

At 12 o'clock the Cyclops left for Valentia, and the Leopard for Spithead. The other three remained to make some experiments.

Soundings were found by the Cyclops at 2,000 fathoms. At night they kept a course E. S. E., under easy steam, and on Wednesday morning at ten o'clock bore up for Plymouth Sound. The Niagara is gone into Hamoaze. The general opinion is that the season is too far advanced for another effort now, but every confidence is expressed in the ultimate success of the undertaking. The machinery now aboard the Niagara is considered too heavy for the purpose. It is stated that the wheels ceased to revolve when the pressure was applied on Tuesday morning.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the trangression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeving any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and stonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The four is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, ou est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaitre Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

Notice.

THE Saints who desire to send means to their friends in Europe, can have the same attended to, by forwarding any sum they wish in current money, to this office, enclosing one dollar or more, in proportion to the amount sent, to defray the expenses of procuring Bills of Exchange, making remittances, foreign postage, &c., describing particularly to whom, and where they wish to have it sent; at the same time not holding myself responsible in any manner whatever unless the money reach me.

All subscriptions, donations, &c., for the support of THE MORMON, or Conference Fund (except the donations and Conference Funds raised in the Philadelphia Conference, which will be forwarded as usual through President Cannon) must be sent hereafter to my address; as also Tithing; P. E. Fund, and donations for the Temple from those who wish to contribute the same, so each person may be duly credited, and the means forwarded to Zion, and have their names entered in "The Book of the Law of the Lord."

No Power of Attorney, or other legal instrument of writing, going to Europe or elsewhere, forwarded to us for the purpose of sending to Washington in order to obtain the attestation of the Department, and the British Consul's Certificate and seal to the same, will be attended to in future, unless the means to defray the expenses and foreign postage accompanies the Instrument, as there is considerable expense attending it as well as labor. We would like to oblige all, and are willing to give our services when we have opportunity; but we cannot advance means to defray such expenses.

All communications intended for THE MORMON should be addressed—Editor of THE MORMON, New York. Otherwise direct to my address, Box No. 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. APPLEBY.

Notice to Subscribers.

WE frequently receive remittances for subscriptions to THE MORMON, without the sender giving the name of the place he desires the paper to be sent to. Sometimes the name of the Post Office or town is mentioned, but not the county, and as there are several towns in some States by the same name, unless the county is designated we are at a loss to know where to direct the papers ordered. We wish all communications to us to name distinctly the Post Office or town, county, and State or Territory, as then there will be no mistake.

PARTICULAR NOTICE TO

HORACE E. DIMICK & CO.'S

GREAT WESTERN EMPORIUM,

No. 42 Main Street, St. Louis, Mo., (at the Sign of the Deer in Windows.)

WE are now in receipt of our stock of Goods for the coming season, which enables us to say, that we have now in store, and for sale, the LARGEST and most COMPLETE assortment of Guns, Pistols, Sporting Apparatus, and Goods selected expressly for the arming of wagon trains, for crossing the plains, the markets of Santa Fe, Salt Lake, and Oregon, &c., that can be found in any HOUSE in the WESTERN COUNTRY!

Among the most staple articles now on hand, can be found upwards of 2,000 DOUBLE AND SINGLE SHOT GUNS; 2,500 MUSKETS AND UNITED STATES RIFLES, both new and second-hand, with flint or percussion locks; COLT'S REVOLVERS, of all sizes, ALWAYS on hand, in quantities to satisfy almost any demand, and at EASTERN PRICES. Also, all the most improved patterns of Revolvers and other Pistols now in use.

N. B.—We, the undersigned, being practical men in all matters appertaining to the arming and equipping of Emigrant and Merchant wagon trains for crossing the plains, renders our experience worthy of consultation, to make it the more easy for the emigrant and trader to supply themselves with the necessary articles, viz: FIRE ARMS, FIXED AMUNITION, PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES, of all kinds Wagons, Tents, Horses, Mules, Oxen; in short, everything necessary for their comfort.

We also beg leave to call the attention of EASTERN HUNTING PARTIES, that wish to spend a few months on the plains, that we have all the necessary arms and equipments, and at prices as low as they can be furnished in any Eastern city.

We keep constantly on hand, (or make to order,) TARGET, HUNTING, and MINNIE RIFLES, which we guarantee to be superior to any in the country.

We also keep constantly on hand the CELEBRATED SHARP'S PATENT RIFLE, which is the safest and most destructive weapon ever invented, for sale at the Manufacturer's prices, for cash.

Please call and examine for yourseles, as it is no trouble for us to answer questions, or show goods.

Cease railing at fortune;
Meet life with a kiss,
Nor needlessly wish it
One cycle of bliss:
For cares but embellish
Our seasons of joy,
Like feathery cloudlets
That sprinkle the sky.

Cease railing at fortune,
Take life as it comes;
If wanting its dainties,
Make glad o'er the crumbs.
Each little is sweet, if
A smile the lip wears,
But bitter the morsel,
When moistened with tears.

The Church—its Relations to Freedom.

LETTER FROM JOSHUA R. GIDDINGS TO THE EDITORS OF THE NATIONAL ANTI-SLAVERY STANDARD:

THE communication signed "B," published in the Standard of the 13th ult., is so kind, so catholic in spirit, that I feel impelled to answer it. I think, however, that he is better versed in the Presbyterian policy than he is in that of the Congregational Church. The church of which I have been an humble member for more than thirty years, was formed upon the "accommodation plan," adopted in the early settlement of the Western country. Such churches were composed mostly of Congregationalists, but in nearly all were members who preferred the Presbyterian form of church government. While such members remained in any of those churches, they were, of course, members of the presbytery in which they were situated. When they ceased to have such members, they no longer held connection with the presbytery, but acted solely on their Congregational platform.

The church of which I am a member held this relation to the "Presbytery of Grand River," when, in 1847, they elected me, a lay member, to represent that body in the New School General Assembly. I had myself been bred to the school of New England Congregationalists, and held to the policy of that order, but I gladly complied with the feelings of the presbytery.

My object was, so far as able, to induce the Assembly to avow the "Most High," as the author of human existence, and of that liberty so necessary to sustain and defend the life which God hath given us, to render it useful and happy. I had been for some years engaged in efforts to separate our people and government from the barbarous system of African slavery; I had seen that mankind were looking to the religious sects for example and instruction upon great moral truths; and I had no doubt that the New School Presbyterian General Assembly would stand forth in the avowal and maintenance of these fundamental doctrines.

But I speak in great sorrow, and not in anger, when I say there appeared very little disposition among the great body of its members to take any action upon the subject. They did not deny the doctrines. Indeed, some could not believe that any Presbyterian would deny them; while the Assembly, as a body, repudiated them in the most practical and emphatic manner.

Among both the clerical and lay members were men whose lives had been a practical denial of these self-evident truths; men who were in the practice of buying and selling God's image; of holding their brethren in chains; scourging the Saviour in the person of his followers; lending their moral and political influence to a system of human degradation which excludes three millions of our fellow beings in this nation from reading the gospel; closes up the windows of their intellects; shuts out the sunlight of truth from their souls, and envelops their moral existence in the gloom of mental night. They denied the brotherhood of man, denied that a just God had given to others the natural right to life and liberty which they claimed for themselves. They put forth their powers in favor of an institution which consigns five hundred thousand American females to prostitution, and annually dooms twenty-five thousand human victims to premature graves. When the Assembly gathered around the sacramental board, methought I saw the blood of those victims dripping from their hands, besmearing the sacred vessels and defiling the holy emblems which were swallowed by Northern doctors of divinity. My soul sickened at the sight. I turned away in anguish. I wept in sorrow.

To have said all I felt would at that time have been offensive to many sincere and pious men. Others did not see things as I saw them—did not feel as I felt. The church to which I belonged quietly and silently ceased to send representatives to the presbytery, as no member desired to hold further connection with that order, and we thereby became an independent Congregational Church—holding no more connection with Dr. Adams or Dr. Ross than with Alexander Campbell or Brigham Young. Your correspondent is entirely mistaken when he supposes that either of these men could be received or regarded as a Christian, either by me or by the church of which I am a member.

In saying this I would not offend any human being; but I must not disguise the fact that I regard no man as a Christian who hesitates to avow the right of every human being to understand the duties of Christianity.

I write under peculiar circumstances. My sun of life is near its setting. I know the time of my departure draws nigh. And as I thus stand on the verge of existence, your correspondent demands an explanation of my sectarian views. If I leave those views for him or any other person to examine, I would leave them so distinctly expressed as to be understood. I therefore express my full conviction that neither one, nor any, nor all of the religious sects which now exist, meet the intelligence or the real Christianity of the present age; and that, as time advances, these defects will still become more apparent.

For three hundred years our theology has remained stationary, while the arts and sciences have been constantly extending, intelligence, has been increasing, and mankind becoming more and more elevated. The present age sees nature, discerns her laws, understands them to be the will of God, regards the duties of mankind, the rights of humanity amid the full blaze of moral light which the noontide of civilization is now pouring upon mankind; while Luther, and Calvin, and the reformers of the Sixteenth century avowed doctrines which they discovered by the dim moral twilight, which then merely began to dawn upon the earth.

The gospel had been proclaimed under the rule of imperial Rome, when men had very little conception of civil and religious liberty. The Saviour was crucified for speaking truth. His apostles fell martyrs to the civil power. The Church of Rome at length, extending its influence over the civil authority, enforced its sectarian doctrines by the Inquisition, or by the horrors of the "auto-da fe."

The reformers of that age struck at some of the prominent errors of the Church, both in faith and practice, but they advanced no fundamental truths on which all men claiming Christianity must agree. The reformers themselves held the divine right of kings to bear civil rule over their fellowmen to establish privileges for one class and impose heavy burthens on others; that the Church held the same rule over the conscience and the faith of mankind. They were intolerant, persecuted those who disagreed with them. Calvin himself advised, nay, caused the burning of Servetus, for uttering the honest sentiments of his own heart. No one then dared avow the right of all men to think for themselves, to decide upon their own form of faith, to proclaim the equal rights of all men to civil, religious and spiritual freedom. Luther's ninety-five propositions were aimed at the sale of indulgences under the Papal rule. These propositions are of little interest to the present age. Calvin's five points of theology, to wit:—"Predestination," "Limited Atonement," "Total Depravity," "Irresistible Grace," and "Final Perseverance of the Saints," are far less interesting to the present generation than are the practical doings of "Doing unto others as we would have them do unto us." The reformers of that age sought to control the thoughts, to guide the faith of mankind by metaphysical theories and abstract dogmas but little understood by the people or divines. Hence the great number of sects of the present age, each holding to some doctrine, some article of faith, which distinguishes it from others. Yet, all reflecting Christians now hold that the great object of human existence is the instruction, the elevation, the unfolding of each, and of every moral being, preparing him or her for moral usefulness here and for enjoyment here and hereafter, in just such degree as the moral faculties are developed. That philosophy, religion, the laws and revelations of God, teach us that no vice can escape punishment and no virtue can be separated from its appropriate reward.

Thus while our religious sects have adhered to creeds and covenants, and articles of abstract faith, the popular mind has progressed in religious knowledge, and the great body of the American people now occupy a higher religious position, and avow religious truths which are more practical, more fundamental, than those proclaimed by any religious sect of the present day. Indeed, we see a great and rapidly increasing political party basing its existence, its expectations of success upon the self evident truths, that all men hold from the Creator the equal and inalienable right to enjoy life, and that civil, religious and spiritual liberty which is so necessary to render life useful to the individual and to the world; that human governments are constituted to secure the enjoyment of these rights which God has conferred on mankind; that no human enactment which attempts to repeal the will of the Most High can bind the conscience or command the respect of good men.

Neither Luther, nor Calvin, nor any of our religious sects of either ancient or modern times, has ever proclaimed these primal doctrines in its creed, its articles of faith or its covenants. On the contrary, most of our religious denominations admit the authority of rulers and legislators to change, to modify the laws of God, to rob their fellowmen of those rights which God has bestowed upon all mankind. Indeed, a portion of the members of most of the leading denominations assert and maintain that God has authorized one portion of our race to enslave and brutalize another portion. And members of those sects who are engaged in the daily commission of these crimes against God's law and our common humanity, avow confident hopes of salvation through imputed righteousness and irresistable grace.

I hesitate not to declare such theology opposed to the laws of God, the teachings of the Gospel, to the philosophy, the judgment and conscience of enlightened Christian men, however it may accord with the sentiments of a barbarous age.

I think the time has arrived when some modern Luther, or Calvin, should erect the standard of a higher, a purer theology, a theology in harmony with the laws of purity, of justice, of God; a theology in harmony with the teachings of the Gospel; a theology approved by the philosophy, the judgment of enlightened men; a theology that acknowledges and proclaims the primal truths, that life, that civil, religious and spiritual freedom are the gifts of God—that every member of the human family has received from the Creator "an equal an inalienable right to enjoy them"—that such enjoyment is necessary to develop the intellect, elevate the soul, and prepare the individual for usefulness, for happiness here and hereafter—that every attempt to limit the sphere of human thought, or to hold the mind or the body of one man in subjection to the views or the will of another, or to prevent the enlargement of the immortal mind, or prevent the full and perfect development of any human soul, constitutes a crime to which, by the laws of nature and of nature's God, the appropriate penalty is inseparably connected, while every act in harmony with those laws necessarily elevates the individual and prepares him for higher attainments.

For the protection of these rights and the encouragement of these duties all governments and associations should be adapted. Of all the nations of the earth ours is the most favorably situated for carrying forward this great reformation. Our government was founded upon these truths, and most of our people believe them. The reformation has commenced—is in rapid progress. In all parts of the country men are awakening to the necessity of a more practical theology. The open and undisguised infidelity recently avowed in the Presbyterian General Assembly, that "there is no such thing as eternal right and wrong," has awakened the most thoughtless. Men see that mere theories, bald forms of sectarian faith, are impotent and useless. Our old organizations are becoming inert, inefficient, worn out. Men long to lay them aside, to disconnect themselves with these theoretic technicalities which retard the union of hearts upon those great and vital truths which elevate mankind and prepare them for usefulness, for happiness. Many of our ministers have caught the inspiration of these truths. They are giving utterance to the solemn convictions of their own judgment, unfettered by sectarian prejudices. The sea of human thought, which has remained quiet for a hundred and fifty years, is troubled. Its waters, nearly stagnant from long repose, are now ploughed by many keels. Discussion is stirring its deep foundations. The billows of agitation are rolling, and I trust the storm will continue until false theories and infidelity, the love of oppression, of tyranny, violence, polygamy and slavery shall be overwhelmned, and their broken wrecks cast upon the sterile coast of political and religious conservatism.

The President on Kansas Affairs.

THE MEMORIAL OF PROFESSOR SILLIMAN AND FORTY-TWO OTHERS, AND THE REPLY OF PRESIDENT BUCHANAN.

To His Excellency James Buchanan, President of the United States:

The undersigned citizens of the United States and Electors of the State of Connecticut, respectfully offer to your Excellency this their memorial:

The fundamental principle of the Constitution of the United States, and of our political institutions is, that the people shall make their own laws, and elect their own rulers.

We see with grief, if not with astonishment, that Governor Walker, of Kansas, openly represents and proclaims that the President of the United States is employing through him an army, one purpose of which is to force the people of Kansas to obey laws not their own nor of the United States, but laws which it is notorious and established upon evidence they never made, and rulers they never elected.

We represent, therefore, that by the foregoing your Excellency is openly held up and proclaimed to the great degradation of our national character as violating in its most essential particular the solemn oath which the President has taken to support the Constitution of this Union. We call attention, further, to the fact your Excellency is in like manner held up to this nation, to all mankind, and to all posterity, in the attitude of "levying war against a portion of the United States" by employing arms in Kansas to uphold a body of men and a code of enactments purporting to be legislative, but which never had the election, nor sanction, nor consent of the people of the Territory. We earnestly represent to your Excellency that we, also, have taken the oath to obey the Constitution, and your Excellency may be assured that we shall not refrain from the prayer that Almighty God will make your Administration an example of justice and beneficence, and with this terrible majesty protect our people and our Constitution.

[Here follow 43 names of Professors and Ministers.]

THE PRESIDENT'S REPLY.

Washington City, Aug. 15, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: On my recent return to this city, after a fortnight's absence, your memorial, without date, was placed in my hands through the agency of Mr. Horatio King, of the Post Office Department, to whom it had been entrusted. From the distinguished source whence it proceeds, as well as its peculiar character, I have deemed it proper to depart from my general rule in such cases, and to give it an answer.

You first assert that "the fundamental principles of the Constitution of the United States, and of our political institutions is, that the people shall make their own laws and elect their own rulers." You then express your grief and astonishment that I should have violated this principle, and, through Gov. Walker, have employed an army, "one purpose of which is to force the people of Kansas to obey laws not their own, not of the United States, but laws which, it is notorious and established upon evidence, they never made, and rulers they never elected; and as a corollary from the foregoing you represent that I am "openly held up and proclaimed to the great derogation of our national character as violating in its most essential particular the solemn oath which the President has taken to support the Constitution of this Union." Those are heavy charges proceeding from gentlemen of your high character, and if well-founded ought to consign my name to infamy. But in proportion to their gravity, common justice, to say nothing of Christian charity, required that before making them, you should have clearly ascertained that they were well-founded. If not they will rebound with withering condemnation upon their authors. Have you performed this preliminary duty towards the man who, however unworthy, is the Chief Magistrate of your country? If so, either you or I are laboring under a strange delusion. Should this prove to be your case, it will present a memorable example of the truth that political prejudice is blind even to the existence of the plainest and most palpable historical facts. To these facts let us refer.

When I entered upon the duties of the Presidential office on the 4th of March last, what was the condition of Kansas?

This Territory had been organized under the act of Congress of the 30th of May, 1854, and the Government in all its branches was in full operation. A Governor, Secretary of the Territory, Chief Justice, two Associate Justices, a Marshal and District Attorney, had been appointed by my predecessor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and were all engaged in discharging their respective duties. A code of laws had been enacted by the Territorial Legislature, and the Judiciary were employed in expounding and carrying these laws into effect.

It is quite true that a controversy had previously arisen respecting the validity of the election of members of the Territorial Legislature, and of the laws passed by them, but at the time I entered upon my official duties Congress had recognized this Legislature in different forms and by different enactments. The delegate elected to the House of Representatives under a Territorial law had just completed his term of service on the day previous to my inauguration. In fact I found the government of Kansas as well established as that of any other Territory. Under these circumstances, what was my duty? Was it not to sustain this government? To protect it from the violence of lawless men who were determined either to rule or ruin? To prevent it from being overturned by force? In the language of the Constitution to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed." It was for this purpose, and this alone, that I ordered a military force to Kansas, to act as a posse comitatus in aiding the civil magistrate to carry the laws into execution. The condition of the Territory at the time, which I need not portray, rendered this precaution absolutely necessary. In this state of affairs, would I not have been justly condemned had I left the Marshal, and other officers of a like character, impotent to execute the process and judgments of Courts of Justice, established by Congress, or by the Territorial Legislature, under its express authority, and thus have suffered the Government itself to become an object of contempt in the eyes of the people? And yet this is what you designate as forcing "the people of Kansas to obey laws, not their own nor of the United States," and for doing which you have denounced me as having violated my solemn oath.

I ask what else could I have done, or ought I to have done? Would you have desired that I should abandon the Territorial Government, sanctioned as it had been by Congress, to illegal violence, and thus renew the scenes of civil war and bloodshed which every patriot in the country had deplored? This would indeed have been to violate my oath of office, and to fix a damning blot on the character of my Administration.

I most cheerfully admit that the necessity for sending a military force to Kansas to aid in the execution of the civil law, reflects no credit upon the character of our country. But let the blame fall upon the heads of the guilty. Whence did this necessity arise? A portion of the people of Kansas, unwilling to trust to the ballot-box, the certain American remedy for redress of all grievances, undertook to create an independent Government for themselves.

Had this attempt proved successful, it would of course have subverted the existing Government prescribed and recognized by Congress, and substituted a revolutionary Government in its stead. This was usurpation of the same character as it would be for a portion of the people of Connecticut, to undertake to establish a separate Government within its chartered limits, for the purpose of redressing any grievance, real or imaginary, of which they might have complained against the legitimate State Government. Such a principle, if carried into execution, would destroy all lawful authority and produce universal anarchy. I ought to specify more particularly a condition of affairs which I have embraced only in general terms, requiring the presence of a military force in Kansas.

The Congress of the United States had most wisely declared it to be "the true intent and meaning of this act—the act organizing the Territory—not to legislate Slavery into any Territory or State, nor to exclude it therefrom, but to leave the people thereof perfectly free to form and regulate their domestic institutions in their own way, subject only to the Constitution of the United States." As a natural consequence, Congress has also prescribed by the same act that when the Territory of Kansas shall be admitted as a State, it "shall be received into the Union with or without Slavery, as their Constitution may prescribe at the time of their admission."

Slavery existed at that period, and still exists in Kansas under the Constitution of the United States. This point has at last been finally decided by the highest tribunal known to our laws. How it could ever have been seriously doubted is a mystery. If a confederation of sovereign States acquire a new territory at the expense of their common blood and treasure, surely one set of the partners can have no right to exclude the other from its enjoyment, by prohibiting them from taking into it whatsoever is recognized to be property by the common constitution. But, when the people, the bona fide residents of such Territory, proceed to frame a State Constitution, then it is their right to decide the important question for themselves, whether they will continue, modify, or abolish Slavery. To them, and to them alone, does this question belong, free from all foreign interference. In the opinion of the Territorial Legislature of Kansas, the time had arrived for entering the Union, and they accordingly passed a law to elect delegates for the purpose of framing a State Constitution.

This law was fair and just in its provisions. It conferred the right of suffrage on "every bona fide inhabitant of the Territory," and for the purpose of preventing fraud and the intrusion of citizens of near or distant States, most properly confined this right to those who had resided therein three months previous to the election. Here a fair opportunity was presented for all qualified resident citizens of the Territory, to whatever organization they might have previously belonged, to participate in the election, and to express their opinions at the ballot-box on the question of Slavery; but numbers of lawless men still continued to resist the regular Territorial Government. They refused either to be registered or to vote, and the members of the Convention were elected legally and properly without their intervention. The convention will soon assemble to perform the solemn duty of framing a Constitution for themselves and their posterity, and, in the state of incipient rebellion which still exists in Kansas, it is my imperative duty to employ the troops of the United States, should this become necessary in defending the Convention against violence whilst framing the Constitution, and in protecting the bona fide inhabitants qualified to vote under the provisions of this instrument in the free exercise of the right of suffrage, when it shall be submitted to them for their approbation or rejection.

I have entire confidence in Gov. Walker that the troops will not be employed except to resist actual aggression, or in the execution of the laws, and then not until the power of the civil magistrate shall prove unavailing. Following the wise example of Mr. Madison towards the Hartford Convention, illegal and dangerous combinations such as that of the Topeka Convention, will not be disturbed, unless they shall attempt to perform some act which will bring them into actual collision with the Constitution and the laws. In that event they shall be resisted and put down by the whole power of the Government: In performing this duty I shall have the approbation of my own conscience, and, as I humbly trust, of my God.

I thank you for the assurance that you will "not refrain from the prayer that Almighty God will make my Administration an example of justice and beneficence."

You can greatly assist me in arriving at this blessed consummation by exerting your influence in allaying the existing sectional excitement on the subject of Slavery, which has been productive of much evil and no good, and which if it could succeed in attaining its object, would ruin the slave as well as his master. This would be a work of genuine philanthropy.

Every day of my life I feel how inadequate I am to perform the duties of my high station, without the continued support of Divine Providence; yet, placing my trust in Him, and in Him alone, I entertain a good hope that He will enable me to do equal justice to all portions of the Union, and thus render me an humble instrument in restoring peace and harmony among the people of the several States.

Yours very respectfully,

JAMES BUCHANAN.

The Dred Scott Decision in the General Land Office.

THE general pre-emption act of 1841 contains a stipulation that the recipient of its benefits shall be "a citizen of the United States," or shall "have filed his declaration of intention to become such." By the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, at the last December term, it is held, in substance, that "a free negro of the African race whose ancestors were brought to this country and sold as slaves, is not a citizen within the meaning of the constitution of the United States." Free pre-emption lands; and claims of persons of the class contemplated by that decision have been ruled out and regarded as null, we learn, at the General Land Office.—Washington Star, Aug. 20.

Remarks on J. R. Giddings's Letter.

WE publish on our front page of this week's issue, Mr. Joshua R. Giddings's letter to the editor of the National Anti-Slavery Standard—not because we have any faith whatever in his system or devices, or in what he recommends. As it regards slavery, we have but little to say either for or against it; but there is one question we would like to ask Mr. Giddings:—If he or all the abolitionists in the world, calculates or expects to remove the "curse" of bondage and blackness from the negro, until He who permitted the same to come upon them sees proper to remove the curse? When will it be that Ham will rise up and stand in his place? Or when will the time come that "there shall no more a Canaanite be found in the house of the Lord?" Or what is the cause of the negro's deformity, bondage, or of their spirits having to take bodies or tabernacles cursed with bondage and blackness? Mr. Giddings, declare unto us, if you have understanding. Know ye not that there must be a cause to produce an effect? The effect is apparent; but what is the cause? Ye wise men of the world, tell us if you can. But we know you cannot; therefore you "go it blind."

Mr. Giddings says the church of which he has been a member for more than thirty years was formed upon the "accommodation plan" of the western country, composed mostly of Congregationalists, who preferred the Presbyterian form of church government.

How very "accommodating!" What condescension the Lord must have! How pliable the gospel! Mr. Giddings thinks it can be twisted, turned, bent, so as play any "accommodation" tune upon it, even to the Presbyterian form of church government. Mr. Giddings, why not throw aside your "accommodation plan" and Presbyterian form of church government, and take the plan and imitate the pattern laid down in the Holy Scriptures; the only plan or order that will save any one, if the Scriptures be true. We read there that "God set in the Church; first, apostles; secondarily, prophets; thirdly, teachers; after that, miracles, gifts of healing, helps, governments, and diversity of tongues." And "when Christ ascended up on high he gave gifts unto men; he gave Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Pastors and Teachers, for the work of the ministry and the perfecting of the saints, that they should not be carried about by every wind of doctrine." And he that believeth these words, (and what you my apostles teach,) and is baptized, says the Savior, shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." Not much "accommodation plan" here, Mr. Giddings, only one way to walk. No Protestant or Catholic form of church government here; verily, no. But Mr. Giddings says he held to the policy of the Presbyterian order, and gladly complied with the feelings of the Presbytery. Compare the order of the Presbyterians, or the order of any other Protestant denomination, with the order Jesus and his apostles established, Mr, Giddings, and where is the comparison? Compare noonday with midnight darkness, or the wisdom of the Almighty with uninspired men, and you have some comparison in relation to the so-called christian churches of the present day and the Church of Christ as revealed in the scriptures.

He says clerical and lay members were in the practice of buying and selling God's image, denied the brotherhood of man, denied that a just God had given to others the natural right of life and liberty which they claimed themselves. Mr. Giddings, as you prefer the Presbyterian form of church government, you ought not to repudiate their faith, which is election and predestination—"some men and angels ordained to everlasting destruction, others to everlasting life, without any faith or works of the creature." How do you know, Mr. Giddings, of which election the negroes are subjects? If God is no respector of persons, why should there be an election? We do not mean the Presbyterian ideas of election, but the Apostle Paul's.

Mr. Giddings, do you believe that the negro is in the "image of God?" If you do, you certainly have a contemptible idea of your Creator; but you do not; for the God the Congregationalists, Presbyterians, and all other Protestant sects, believe in, has neither "body, parts, or passions." Hence the negro, or any other person, according to this faith, cannot be in the "image of God." Mr. Giddings, if all men are equal and God is no respecter of persons, tell us, if you can, to whom Jesus referred when he said: "Some were made eunuchs for the kingdom of God's sake." Does he have reference to the negro, whites, or who, tell us; if you have understanding?

Mr. Giddings says no member of his church desired to hold no more connection with Dr. Adams or Dr. Ross, than with Alexander Campbell or Brigham Young, not regarding either of these men as Christians. As it regards Drs. Adams, Ross, or A. Campbell, they can speak for themselves; we have but little faith in them. But we know President Brigham Young would think himself disgraced to descend from his high and exalted station, to imbibe or notice such fanatical or absurd ideas as Mr. Giddings advocates and believes in.

Mr. Giddings says his "sun of life is nearly setting, and he leaves his views for any one to examine." Then we would say to him, why not obey the gospel as it is recorded in the scriptures? Why not prepare for your "sun of life" to set in peace, with the hope of a glorious resurrection? Why call Lord, Lord, and do not the things he commands? or are you one of the elect?

He further says "that it is his full conviction that neither one, nor any, nor all of the religious sects which now exist, meet the intelligence or the real Christianity of the present age, and as time advances these defects will become more apparent."

That is true, none of the religious sects now existing or ever have existed since Revelation ceased and the Holy Priesthood left the earth, preached, embraced, or believed in real christianity, or the pure doctrine of Christ. The intelligence of the present age has left God and His truths, contained in His word, almost entirely, and thrown them aside; left the pure, plain, holy paths of old; despised the order of Heaven; and, instead of the law of God, a hireling clergy, preaching by their own wisdom, and teaching for gospel the commandments of men, reverencing corrupt doctrines, and venerating tradition for inspired truths.

None of the professing christians of the present day who profess to follow the Protestant reformers believe one-third of what these reformers taught, because what little light they once had has become darkened. None of the Protestant Reformers, or Catholics, ever pretended God had spoken to them, or commanded them to build up churches, or to act in His name. Neither did any of them ever preach or teach the Gospel of Jesus, as recorded in the New Testament, or have any church organization, as is required therein. "For God has set in the church; first, apostles; secondarily, prophets," &c. We ask Mr. Giddings where is the church, Protestant or Catholic, with their apostles, with their keys of apostleship and Priesthood, to act in, and administer ordinances in the Church of God? Mr. Giddings knows they are not to be found; and the apostacy of the Christian world is every day becoming more and more apparent. Every discerning mind cannot help but see it. The religion of the present day is nothing but a form of godliness without the power; moulded to be popular, because of pecuniary considerations, and adapted to the votaries of pleasure. It is a question easily answered by honest and discerning minds, why the increase of crime and infidelity in the world? Because there is no power of God, no gift of the Holy Ghost, or any of its fruits manifested by the religious professors, or in their churches, as promised in Scripture, and what the Saints of God anciently enjoyed. Hence nothing but a form without any power to give their members or any one else faith or support in what they hear preached or have embraced, without the knowledge of God—what man is doing here, the design of his creation, the relationship he sustains to his maker, his family, or his destiny hereafter, only the fear of that dreadful hell of fire and brimstone. Hence, no certain knowledge of a hereafter, blind leading the blind, both falling into the ditch together, crime increasing in all its hideous forms among Christian society, because of their apostate christianity, and their christian institutions. Honest men of no profession scan the religious professors, and behold them wrangling and jangling, one with the other, professing to be believers in the Bible, yet when scanned denying nine-tenths of it; full of dissimulation and intolerance, with few exceptions—what will be the remark of the honest beholder? He will certainly say, the religion of the present day is a grand speculation, full of hypocrisy, and just calculated to make infidels. We are astonished there are not ten infidels to where there is one, for the sectarian world is calculated to make them. The infidel will read in the Bible thus and so; he will turn to the professor and read the same to him, and ask the professor if he believes it. O, no, says the professing christian, that is done away, and no longer needed, &c. Which is the honest man, the infidel or the professor? The infidel, certainly. Mr. Giddings says, the intelligence of the times is ahead of Christianity, and becoming more apparent. Arts and sciences, it is true, have increased, and are flourishing at the present time; while Christianity, instead of keeping pace, is all the while on the decline, a deterioration perceptible to every observer. What are the reasons for this? Because the religious world for nearly eighteen centuries have been endeavoring to find out God and His ways by their own wisdom, or the wisdom of the world, by men's plans, without the aid of inspiration, apostles, prophets, angels or the gift of the Holy Ghost, substituting colleges, seminaries and professorships in their stead, and lo, and behold the result. History informs us that the more a nation is advanced in arts and sciences, the further they get estranged from God and His laws; because God is never acknowledged in any of their arts and sciences. But, like Nebuchadnazzar of old, they say "our hands and our wisdom have done this."

Look at the ancient Egyptians, Grecians, and others, when at the very zenith of their arts and sciences, were bowing down to Idol gods, made of wood and stone, and if the Christian world of the present day continues to decline for the next fifty years as fast as it has done within the last thirty years, the whole of them will run, not only into infidelity but into idolatry, because they profess to act in the name of the Lord, and administer in Holy things, without any authority from God, only what they have assumed, and the attendant consequences of such things always resulted in idolatry.

Noah, after he came out of the ark, and lay inebriated in his tent, was made sport of by his son Ham: Noah, thereupon, conferred the Patriarchal order and Priesthood upon Shem, blessed Japhet, to be enlarged of the Lord, and to dwell in the tents of Shem; he also blessed Ham with the blessings of the earth, and with wisdom, but cursed him as appertaining to the Priesthood. But some years after, a daughter of Ham, Egyptus, discovered the land of Egypt, who afterwards settled her sons in it, and thus from Ham, sprung that race which preserved the curse in the land. The first Government of Egypt was established by Pharaoh, (which signifies royal blood,) the eldest son of Egyptus, the daughter of Ham, and it was after the manner of the Government of Ham, which was Patriarchal. Pharaoh tried to imitate the Patriarchal order of his father, and claimed authority from his grandfather Noah, through Ham, and administered in the ordinances pertaining to the Priesthood, but without authority, because Ham, and all his descendants were cursed as pertaining to that, yet he acted in it, and idolatry was the inevitable consequence. Just so it will be with the religious world in time, if God should suffer things to exist, as they do and are increasing at present. We perceive that Mr. Giddings has no confidence in the religious sects of the present day, and very little in the reformers, but he wants a religion suited to the times. Arts and sciences have progressed, but religion is on the retrograde; and he does not "hesitate to declare the theology of the religious sects opposed to the laws of God, the teachings of the Gospel, and the consciences of enlightened christian men." Quite an admission, Mr. Giddings. So say the Latter Day Saints, or Mormons, that the teachings of the professing christian world, with their absurd, ridiculous, senseless, powerless forms, are a heterogenous mass of nonsense and absurdity—a burlesque on common sense to every enlightened, unbiassed mind that reads the scriptures and compares them with the sectarian teachings and doctrines of the present day, however sincere they may be in them. Mr. Giddings thinks "the time has arrived when some modern Luther or Calvin should erect the standard of a higher and purer theology."

Mr. Giddings, why not wish that God would raise up a Prophet, to speak His will through to man, and organize His Church with Apostles, and the keys of Apostleship and Priesthood, to teach all that would believe and humble themselves the way of salvation and eternal life. The order of God which is adapted to all times, circumstances, and conditions of men.

Mr. Giddings, do you not behold the absurdity of uninspired men with their powerless, nonsensical dogmas, in endeavoring to preach the gospel and build up churches according to their own wisdom and notions, without the aid of inspiration, and the Priesthood of the Almighty. Do you not see that division, jargon, animosity, hatred, variance, infidelity, bloodshed, &c., are the prolific results?

Mr. Giddings, did you ever read the scripture that says, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but revealeth His secrets to His servants the Prophets," and we here say, Mr. Giddings, a great modern reformer called of God has already "erected a standard of pure theology," in harmony with the laws of purity, and every enobling principle, adapted to this time, for all times, and for all eternity. Joseph Smith, the martyred Prophet of God was the man; he it was to whom God spoke from the heavens, clothed him with the Holy Priesthood, and keys of Apostleship, and commanded him to organize His Church after the order of heaven, and the pattern of heavenly things. That church and kingdom, Mr. Giddings, is now on the earth, conducted, guided, and led by revelation. Prest. B. Young, is the Prophet, Seer, and Revelator of the same, the lawful successor of Joseph the Prophet. The sound of the gospel, proclaimed by the servants of God in that Church, has been heard in almost every clime. Hundreds of thousands are rejoicing in the light, truth and glory of the gospel, and still it is onward, its nucleus is in the everlasting hills, on the tops of the mountains, and the law of God is going forth from Zion to all nations, and, Mr. Giddings, it is to you, and all others that wish salvation or a knowledge of God. That law is the only thing adapted to the times, and the only one that will abide the wreck of nature and the crash of worlds. And we say to all keep out of its way, and do not get in its track, for go ahead it will and prosper, for God has declared it. Indeed, as Mr. Giddings says the billows of agitation are rolling. Truth, eternal truth, from heaven is penetrating Babylon's citadel. Her towers begin to crumble, and fall to rise no more forever. Her votaries are alarmed and their cry is great, and the Lord says, "come out of her my people, lest ye partake of her sins, and receive of her plagues;" and false theories, false doctrines, infidelity, oppression, tyranny, violence, slavery, abolitionism, &c., will be overthrown forever, while the Kingdom of God, with all its ordinances, organizations, polygamy, or celestial marriage for time and all eternity, will stand forever—immutable and eternal.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE, Aug. 25, 1857.

By the act of 31st of August, 1852 (10 U. S. laws, 98,) the President is authorized to allow payment from the judicial fund of extraordinary expenses incurred by officers of the United States, though payment of such expenses be not specifically provided for. You sent me the accounts, and all papers relating thereto, of Joseph L. Heywood, late marshal of Utah, and asked my opinion whether the expenses for which he claims to be allowed come within the provisions of the act referred to.

To justify the allowance of expenses like those which the late Marshal of Utah exhibits, it is necessary he should show, 1, that they were incurred by a ministerial officer; 2, that they were incurred in executing the laws of the United States; and 3, that they were regularly taxed by the District or Circuit Court of the district in which the services charged for were rendered. If the accounts under consideration come within these requirements, they ought to be allowed; and if not, not. What are the facts?

More than twenty thousand dollars of this claim are for conveying the Judges of the Territory to and from the places of holding the Supreme and District Courts. A numerous guard was provided, and part of the account is for the pay of the men who composed it. The hire of horses, wagons, and other means of transportation for the guard is also charged. To this is added the price of provisions, forage and medicine, and the expense of teams to haul them, as well as carriages for the Judges themselves. The sum total is swelled by a great many curious items which it would be hard to classify.

These expenses are within the law, so far as they are extraordinary expenses, for they are very extraordinary both in amount and character. But they are not the expenses of a ministerial officer. The expenses of a Judge on his way to the court are his own expenses, and he cannot call them the expenses of a ministerial officer merely because he allowed the Marshal to hire his carriage and servants, and to pay his bills on the road. The large sums which these journeys seem to have cost makes no difference, since the law does not cover expenses of a judicial officer, however extraordinary they may happen to be. If the Marshal had furnished to each of the Judges a single horse, and made a claim upon the government for the use of them, he would have had a case just the same in principle as that which he has in fact presented. The legal merits of the case are not any better because it is for twenty thousand instead of a hundred dollars.

Another objection to this claim is equally fatal; the expenses were not incurred by the Marshal in executing the laws of the United States. The act of Congress confines the powers of the President so that he can allow no expenses except what are incurred in the execution of judicial process. But there was no judgment, decree, order, or process of any court to be carried into effect, nor was the marshal in the line of any duty which the law commanded him to peform. The law does tell the Judges to be at the court. It says nothing to the Marshal about bringing them there. The mandate is directed to the Judges alone. When a Judge obeys that mandate by going to court, whether on foot or on horseback, or in a carriage surrounded by a cavalcade of outriders, it can hardly be said that he is executing the law any more than a juror when he answers to his name, a witness obeys the subpœna, or a clerk when he makes up the record. Certain it is, at all events, that the Judge's performance of his duty by going into court is not an execution of law by the Marshal.

But even if these bills had been legal in other respects, they have not been legally taxed. The act of Congress requires a special taxation by the Court. This was taxed (if taxed at all) by a Judge at his chambers—by a Judge when he was not in the Territory—by a Judge after he resigned his office—by one Judge, when the Court consisted of three. You cannot consider a bill properly taxed under this act until it is done in and by the proper Court duly organized with a quorum of Judges on the bench, in regular service, and a record made of their decision. The exclusive evidence of this will be the certificate of the clerk, attested by the seal.

Some of these expenses might be allowed if they were properly taxed, but the greatest part of them are of a character which would exclude them, however they might be authenticated. J. S. BLACK.

Hon. J. THOMPSON, Secretary of the Interior.

We are personally acquainted with Marshal Heywood, and the most of the circumstances under which the "extraordinary expenses," for which payment has been refused, were incurred. It is quite different in Utah from what it is in the States. The Judges there are required to reside in their respective districts, which includes in some, a travel of 600 miles in distance, to the places of holding their courts, and a great portion of this distance, through a wild Indian country, where robberies, and oftentimes murders are perpetrated by the wandering Indian tribes with impunity. Sometimes heavy snows are encountered, and it is unsafe for people to travel except in companies, or by being guarded. Hence the United States Judges in Utah, knowing these dangers, gave orders to the Marshal to provide them with the necessary guards and conveyances, to escort them to the place of holding their courts, informing him at the same time, that the government was in duty bound to pay the expenses of the same, that they would certify to his bills, and under these circumstances the government would not hesitate to pay the expenses thus necessarily incurred. And the Marshal, like a dutiful officer, being subject to the courts, acted in good faith, and for the protection and comfort of the Judges, and we know it, because we have traveled with him and the Judges in going to and returning from attending courts, and slept in the snows before our camp fires, and hostile Indians around us.

We heard Judge Drummond remark last January one year ago, when returning from attending the Supreme Court at Fillmore City, in Utah, while carrying wood on his back through deep snows to make a camp fire to lie by, that he "wished to God Comptroller Whittlesey was there, and had to do the same thing, he would not then refuse to pay another bill thus incurred."

We earnestly think if Attorney General Black was to take one trip from G. S. L. City to Carson Valley, to attend the regular term of court in the Third District of Utah, or from G. S. City to Fillmore City, to attend the Supreme Court, in the month of January—have to carry wood on his back to make fires, and with his blankets bundle down in the snows with the Indians and wolves howling around him for one night, it would be sufficient for him. We are confident that he would reverse his decision and never refuse another bill for expenses incurred under such circumstances. What would have been the consequences if the Mormon Marshal had refused to obey the order of the Judges?

Mr. Heywood acted in good faith, done his duty as required, and the Judges have certified to the legality of his bills, and the absolute necessity of incurring the same. Hence, we say, Justice and Right demands that the government should pay them. But we understand Mr. Heywood is a Mormon, and, like Mr. Kimball the Mail Contractor, although doing his duty, deprived of his rights, while, at the same time, another for not doing his duty, receives a bonus of thousands of dollars for services he never rendered the government, and for losses he never sustained. When will Justice and Right take place?

Descent Upon a Disreputable House.

INSPECTOR HARTT, of the 17th Precinct, with a posse of the men under his command, on Friday evening, made a descent upon the disorderly house No. 16 Eleventh street, kept by a woman known as Sarah Sands, and arrested twenty-two males and females, ranging from 16 to 50 years of age. Immediately after the Police entered the premises, and the inmates became aware of what was going on, the most intense excitement prevailed. Men and women, divested of most of their clothing, ran in every direction hoping to find some door, window or other place of egress by which they might escape and elude the officers, but it was no go, and they all fell into the hands of the authorities.

Such a scene as was then presented has rarely, if ever, been witnessed in New York before. Church members, men holding high social positions in the community, having respectable families at home, were among those captured. They begged for God's sake, for the sake of their families and all that was dear to them, to be let go, promising never to be caught in such a scrape again, but their imploriations were of no avail, Inspector Hartt not having power to release them.

The prisoners were all detained till about 2 o'clock when Justice Wood appeared and discharged seven of the party.

The remainder of the prisoners were detained and sent before the magistrate the following morning for examination. The names given of the prisoners of course were fictitious, consequently we deem it unnecessary to publish them. Among the motley crew taken were merchants, lawyers, housekeepers, dressmakers, coopers, farmers, barkeepers, &c., &c. Never before, perhaps, was such a terror-stricken set of individuals brought before a court of justice. One of those most frightened, declared that his wife would kill herself before morning if she knew of his misfortune. He was one of the men discharged by the Magistrate. The house in question presents a very fine appearance from the street, and has been a place of great resort.—[New York Express, Sept. 5.

The foregoing exhibits some of the doings of the christian city of New York where the ne plus ultra of society exists, where fashionable and aristocratic life is manifest, and carried into perfection, where civilization is at its zenith, where church spires are pointing to heaven in all directions, (surrounded with houses of prostitution on every side) and where bells chime for church every day almost, where christian society, and christian institutions exist, and clergy as thick and plentiful, as they were in the days of Ahab, when fed by Jezebel the Queen. Here is the pure city, where monogamic institutions are displayed, with all their attendant train of evils. Here where holy, pious and church-going editors have the presumption to advocate and proclaim the beauties of their civilization, and rant, and howl against the Mormons, and the immoralites of Utah. "Shame where is thy blush!" We do not believe there was ever a crime committed in Sodom of old, but what is perpetrated in New York, and yet the beauty of their institutions, christianity and morality, are held up as a pattern of civilization, and particularly for the benighted heathen of Utah. We say God deliver the Utonians from such civilization, such morality, and such Christianity, as the foregoing exhibits. Here we find "church members," men holding high social positions in the community, "having respectable families at home," "merchants," "lawyers," "housekeepers," "dressmakers," "coopers," "farmers," "barkeepers," &c., collected together in one House of Prostitution, retired, each with their paramour, perpetrating their illicit and soul-destroying practices; the house "presenting a very fine appearance from the street," and no doubt presenting a very fine appearance inside also, to those who frequented the place. Here we find church members, lawyers, &c., men of high social position, having respectable families, degrading themselves as beasts. Let us inquire if such men ought to hold high social positions. Are they worthy of them, or are they worthy of having respectable families? Verily, no. But these are the fruits, as we before observed, of christian monogamic institutions; they are popular. How many thousands such houses are there in New York, that are daily and nightly visited, tolerated, and allowed to exist and flourish?—why, because Church members, lawyers, &c., must have accommodations other than their lawful wives. But the names of these gentleman "holding high social positions, &c.," must be kept a secret. Certainly, it would not do to reveal them; Justice Wood appears and discharges seven of them, but the rest are detained. Why all this partiality? All were caught in the "same fix!" But we understand, they, no doubt, were Church members, lawyers, &c., "holding high positions," having respectable families, while the other poor coots were detained and sent before the magistrate. No doubt all liberated; for such things are popular, and so are the institutions; and their arrest, no doubt, will all end in a farce.

While the christian world are wallowing in the filth and mire of their own corruption, clergy, editors, and people are railing out against the immoralities of the Mormons, what do the Mormons think of such miserable hypocrites? We answer, we think that they ought to be damned, and they surely will be; for God has declared that all whoremongers, adulterers, liars, &c., shall have their part in the lake of fire and brimstone, which is the second death. We have lived in Utah seven years, and can we find such doings there? No, indeed; death would be the penalty for such crimes there. But among christians such things flourish and grow. We say to clergy, editors, and people, if you have any respect for yourselves, do hereafter keep still and croak no more about Utah and the immoralities of the Mormons, unless shame has completely departed from you. But we do not consider New York is much worse than other Gentile cities. To back up what we have written, we add the testimony of the N. Y. Tribune:

"New York has boxed the compass of shame and sin. There is not, we suppose, a single law upon the statute book which has not been violated within the last year. Murder, arson, rape, grand larceny, petty larceny, highway robbery, seduction, adultery, abduction, forgery, defalcation, obtaining goods under false pretences—these are common crimes."

The Chief Executive and the Connecticut Clergy.

ON our front page we publish a correspondence between President James Buchanan and some forty-three Connecticut ministers and professors, on Kansas affairs; it has caused considerable talk, and brought out considerable opinion. The friends of the Administration think that the pious boys of Connecticut have got well "snubbed" for their meddling. Of course the friends of Kansas come to the rescue of their brethren, and make some unkind comments on the President's reply. We never expect to see anything very nice and fitly framed from gentlemen of that cloth; but we really did not expect that men of the stamp of Professor Silliman would lay themselves so open to criticism by such a loose, unpointed scribble as their memorial. Mr. Buchanan, of course, could not throw away such a glorious opportunity of entering the ring with such odds in his favor; he plucks up and carries off the laurels. We publish the correspondence entire, as it may be useful another day—it is good to have the Executive's profession of faith. We are pleased to find he goes in so strongly for even-handed justice. If his words can be taken at ordinary value, we should think that the Postmaster-General, in his unjust measures towards Mr. Kimball, the Utah mail contractor, acted unknown to the President. Try it, Mr. Kimball. Mr. Buchanan may see you get fair play. Try it—there is nothing like trying.

From Utah and the Plains.

AT the moment of going to press, Thursday afternoon, we have received dates from Great Salt Lake City, up to the 9th of August. We are glad to be able to report that the Saints are rejoicing in the work of the Great God, trusting in Him for the present and future and neither scared nor giving up the Ghost at the rumor of Uncle Sam's troops being on the plains.

We are happy to inform our readers that Presidents Taylor, Snow, and others, arrived in the City of the Saints on the 7th of August, well, and rejoicing in the privilege of mingling again with their brethren in the peaceful valleys of Utah.

The earth has yielded an abundant harvest, and plenty crowns the board of the faithful laborer. The children of Zion never felt better in this last dispensation. The prophet of the Most High is well and enjoys the unlimited confidence of the people. We expect to see Elder Samuel Richards, from the mountains, walk into our sanctum at an early day. He has come along with the Mormon express. We shall be happy to see him.

By letter from Elder Musser at Laramie we learn that the emigration goes on well—and with the exception of a stampede nothing particular to report. We shall publish his letter next week.

Arrivals.

ELDERS SAMUEL W. RICHARDS and George Snyder arrived here this (Thursday) evening, twenty-eight days from Utah, by way of Council Bluffs, Keokuk, and St. Louis. They are on a mission to the Churches in the States and in Europe. Their company consisted of five persons over the plains. They are in good health and spirits.

Telegraphic Fibbing.

WE do not think there is, among all the physical forces or powers, of nature, any one of them which is worse abuse, or put to more immoral uses, than the electric telegraph. The following despatch is a fair specimen of the mixed, light-headed scampism and folly which make up so much of the staple of communications by telegraph:

WASHINGTON, August 22.

The Interior Department has recieved intelligence from reliable gentlemen and fugitive Mormons, that Brigham Young is preparing to resist Gen. Harney, that he has relapsed into the grossest infidelity and atheism, and continues to hold up the government of the United States to supreme contempt.

Now, we are satisfied, we do not think a whit better of Brigham Young than we ought to. But Brigham Young was never accused before of atheism, and it is not possible he has now relapsed into a condition he was never in before. As to his preparing resistance to General Harney, we don't believe a syllable of it. Nor, in fact, do we believe that the Interior Department, unless the head of it is a very inferior judge of human nature, believes that "gentlemen," or simple men, who make such reports to it, are "reliable." By the way, what has the "Interior" Department to do with such representations?

Fortunately, the new Govenor and Secretary of Utah are sensible men, and will not be governed by mere prejudice. They will go to Utah, not expecting trouble, but yet perfectly prepared for it. Col. Cummings and Mr. Hartnett are not the kind of men who can be sent into hysterics by either fright or desperation by such stuff as this despatch is composed of, and which seems to be sent here just at this moment to operate on their minds.

It sometimes occurs to us to ask, who believes one out of five of the telegraphic despatches which record anything but the prices of pork and molasses? As to the despatches which relate to political matters and disputed points of moral interest, or any public concern that is in controversy, nine-tenths of them are the products of minds which belong only to knaves or fools, or mixed knaves and fools. For such communications the telegraphic wires are worse prostituted than any battered harridan of forty years service. Through them lies of all sorts and sizes, from a "lie out of the whole cloth" to the lie which is sometimes called "fiction founded on fact" are circulated by men who have some base party or personal pecuniary purpose to serve—who want to ruin an enemy or to raise themselves in his ruin. They are nameless, and they lie with impunity, for that reason often atrociously. They take pains often to lie shamelessly, even when, if they were taken, they could be found out. Witness the Washington and Kansas despatches of the New York papers.

So well does this seem to be understood, by the more knowing, that a telegraphic lie on one side is frequently offset by another telegraphic lie on the other. We should not therefore, be surprised if some scamp of a Mormon should try to neutralize the effect of this last report from Utah by sending over the wises some such despatch as this:

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.

We are positively assured that at a Cabinet meeting, yesterday, President Buchanan announced, that he has received information from Utah, in which he implicitly believed; and which satisfied him that Brigham Young had always been and intended to be a law-abiding citizen. In consequence, the President has notified Governor Cummins and General Harney, carefully to abstain from all acts calculated to mar the harmony which the President is satisfied can, with ordinary caution on their part, be established between the United States Troops and the Mormons.

To the foregoing we have nothing to add but the wish that the telegraph were a more responsible agent than it is. It has thus far undoubtedly caused an immense deal of mischief, being as it is, the overrunning source of so many lies, misrepresentations, erroneous statements, and truthful impressions. It is no answer to this statement that a misrepresentation on one side corrects a misrepresentation on the other. Two lies do not make one truth, any more than two wrongs make one right. The result of the whole is that the public mind is not only misled, and confused, but debauched and poisoned. Materially considered, the telegraph has accomplished miracles of good. Morally considered, it has been and continues to be the source of incalculable evil.

[St. Louis Sunday Herald, Aug. 30.

[We, and every other "we," a part of whose business is to watch the movements of parties and discover the motives which actuate the leaders of these movements, endorse our Western cotemporary's strictures on "Telegraphic Fibbing," a fact which must be regretted by every honorable, truth-loving person; but so it is: men are bent on accumulating gold, and burn after authority to rule their fellows. Seduced and corrupted by the influence of the yellow metal, they are ready to sacrifice everything in the way of its attainment—truth not excepted; and to the attainment of position and power, none who read the public press can fail to perceive that those who should elevate the minds of the people, who should encourage everything that ennobles man, are the very persons who corrupt and demoralize. The press, instead of being that pacificator and general benefactor, that truth-teller it should be, is prostituted to assist parties to the attainment of power. The character of the purest and best men must be sacrificed, if necessary, to clear the way for themselves, for in their souls it is indelibly engraved, "it is better to rule in Hell than serve in Heaven."

The telegraphic despatch that calls forth the comments of our cotemporary was published in this paper at the time of its appearance, and so palpable was the falsehood that we denied, not only the statements touching "Brgham Young," but likewise denied that any such information had reached the Department. We knew it then and said it was "something intended to cover something else," and so it was. The last mail from Utah had brought important documents from that Territory which shattered the fabrications, and the calumnies against the Utonians and paralyzed the Department and the Utah expedition. Prest. Buchanan and his advisers could not fail to perceive that the country, though ever unfavorable to Utah, was doubtful of the interested declarations of the enemies of "Brigham Young," and consequently somewhat doubtful of the wisdom and justice that had concocted and set on foot the military expedition. To justify, therefore, the decisions of the council with Generals Scott, Jessup, and the Secretary of War, it was necessary to throw out that "some fresh intelligence had been received by the Department!" But it was a falsehood; an ill-disguised falsehood, and in the absence of better authority, it had to drag in the assistance of "fugitive Mormons!"

The enemies of Democracy have grabbed the morsel and zealous to fury, they urge the Chief Magistrate of the Union on to a course of action against Utah, that the impartial historian of our age will be forced to chronicle as infamous. With what Governor of a Territory has any President acted as Mr. Buchanan has acted to his Excellency Brigham Young? Was Governor Young asked if the charges against him were true or false? To gain popularity, crush the Mormons was resolved upon, or at least a parade of solders, to show how terrible Uncle Sam could be at a time when blood and murder was the manifest popular influence of the age. And every statesman and stump orator, who hunts after spoils or presidency has petted the movement and found it a marvellous addition to his stock of Buncombe. But go it, gentlemen, Brigham Young and Mormonism will live and flourish, when you are clothed in sackcloth and ashes, and their is no help for it, but a thorough repentence from all your lying and iniquity; and after you have done something like purifying yourselves, the Lord through that Brigham may take pity upon you and show you some consideration. We advise you, for your own sakes, to quit lying, and seek after the Lord and He will tell you about Brigham.—Ed. Mormon.]

The Mail for Utah.

We scarcely ever think of Utah without the tyranny of the Post Master General disturbing the peace and quiet of our mind. We took our pen to try and say something to our expectant readers about the departure of the next mail for Utah; but found ourselves in a maze. What can we say? We have scraped up somewhere, from some anonymous Washington correspondent, probably, that a mail was to go to Utah in October. Friends, that is all we have learned about the next Utah Mail, and that is all the authority we have for expecting such a boon.

Poor Utah! Oh! Stop there! that's enough! We were going to relate the past—tell how every possible insult had been heaped upon her inhabitants; but we banish from our bosom grief, and, with buoyant hope, a bright future before our eyes, say to our enemies—pile on your injustice, pile it on! The folks out there have got used to the operation. Pile it on, and all the world will see "the patience of the Saints," and when the dark clouds and raging storm have passed away, the morrow's bright sunlight will reveal—RIGHTEOUSNESS HAS PREVAILED!

☞ Next week we hope to be able to lay before our friends something about the Utah Express. By this we hope to have uninterupted communication with that Territory.

Later from Europe.

By the arrival of the Europa at Halifax on Wednesday we have news from England up to the afternoon of the 29th ult. Parliament was prorogued the day previous; Her Majesty's speech delivered by Commission. India, of course, the chief subject; to be thrashed into obedience. "Aid" is to be rendered to British India—that is, England is to assist, with funds as well as men, the East India company. The last news from the seat of war are not too favorable for England. The troops have had considerable trouble to keep their ground. In addition to the deaths of Generals Sir Henry Barnard and Sir Henry Lawrence, Sir Hugh Wheeler is reported killed at Cawnpore. The garrison there, pressed by famine, surrendered the place to Neva Saheb, by whom, in violation of solemn promises, all were massacred. Neva Saheb was subsequently twice attacked, and utterly defeated with great loss by Gen. Havelock, who re-occupied Cawnpore. By the orders of Neva Saheb 240 women and children were murdered at Cawnpore; and among the killed at that place are Sir Geo. Parker, Col. Williams, Brigadier Yack, and other officers.

On the 5th of July an obstinate battle was fought before Agra between the garrison at that place and the Meerut mutineers, who had marched thither with reinforcements, which brought their numbers up to 10,000 men. The British forces were obliged to retire with a heavy loss. Several British officers were killed.

Two native regiments mutined at Seal Kote, Punjab, on the 9th of July, and massacred Capt. Bishop, Dr. Graham, and Rev. Mr. Hunter, with his wife and child. The remaining Europeans were safe in fort. These mutineers were totally defeated on the 15th at Meerut.

DOMESTIC SUMMARY.

Last Thursday the inmates of the New York Hospital were dreadfully alarmed and thrown into confusion by the violent and murderous conduct of a seaman who had been there but a short time suffering from delirium tremens. He seized a large knife and charged one of the employees; but was fortunately unsuccessful in his attempt to injure him. Returning to the ward he made his onslaught on a helpless patient and inflicted such wounds as have led to the decease of his unfortunate victim. The influence of the bottle, the cause of all!

The steamship Illinois, with her load of gold from California, and 600 passengers from the diggings, has been some days detained at quarantine on account of yellow fever making its appearance on board.

One of our cotemporaries by way of giving employment to a "supernumery," has turned its attention to an expose of swill-fed cow milk. The statistics show that the pure article is very scarce in Gotham and in the surrounding cities, Brooklyn, Jersey and Hoboken. Whoever values health in the family should be careful to get the real country milk, the distillery swill-fed cow milk is destructive to health, and particularly injurious to infants and children. That decoction of water, chalk and calf's brains sold in London under the name of milk is not a whit worse than thousands of quarts of the milk daily gulped by the Gothamites. The real liquid or none at all.

The Herald is likely to have some trouble for a few free remarks about the Hon. Daniel E. Sickles. The Honorable was one of the lawyers engaged in the city interest during the contest about who should be Street Commissioner. Our cotemporary threw out rather plainly that he had done unfairly by his client Mr. Devlin and the Honorable, who has got used to a good deal of kicking for politics, but won't submit to abuse on his professional career, lays damages at $25,000. He has not yet got them.

Another accident on the Camden railway. On Saturday two trains came into collison, smashed some of the cars, killed two men, and wounded serious a goodly number of passengers. The conductor of the freight train was in a hurry to get to Camden to take part in some excursion and was oblivious to every thing else.

On Monday evening no less than a dozen persons were arrested in the city, endeavoring to pass counterfeit $3 bills on the Hudson County Bank. The bogus bill is a good counterfeit—look out.

The Baltimore firemen had "a regular brush" on Saturday evening last; guns and pistols were used with great liberality, and quite a number of the combatants have been seriously wounded. The onset, on the part of the first belligerents, was a premeditated, cowardly attack from a house, while their unfortunate victims were running with their hose to, as they supposed, the rescue of the unfortunate. What is the state of the country, when every day there are numerous cold-blooded murders taking place? Men seem to have lost all value for their lives or for those of their neighbors. For self-preservation men may carry arms; but when, with a murderous purpose directly in their minds, as in the foregoing case, they set to preparing their weapons of death with calmness and deliberation, it talks loudly against the ruling influence. The Prince of Darkness still rules in the hearts of the children of men.

As a gravel train on the New Jersey Central Railroad was backing towards Fairfield on Monday evening, a farmer having occasion to cross the track in his wagon, mistook the direction of the train and got right before it. The wagon was caught by the last car, first on this occasion, and the farmer was thrown upon the track and killed instantly; two of the brakemen were killed at the same time, and one died shortly after from the injuries he received at the accident. The same evening the wife and daughter of the Postmaster of Hastings, were run over on the Hudson River Railroad. They were walking on the line and the train unlooked for suddenly made its appearance, rounding a curve on the line, and before the engineer could stop the train they were dashed to the ground. The child was killed instantly; the mother died six hours after We have frequently been astonished at the risk run by the public on the Railroad lines. We have traveled much by the aid of the iron-horse in other nation; but only in the United States did we ever see open lines where the public could promenade or travel. It should not be permitted where it possibly can be avoided.

On Tuesday Judge Peabody examined the claim of Mrs. Cunningham to bail, and the opposition of the prosecution, which resulted in his concluding that "the ends of public justice will be answered by admitting the prisoner to bail in the sum of of five thousand dollars."

FOREIGN SUMMARY.

The Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company have not yet concluded whether they shall attempt to lay the cable again this year. The London Times of the 24th ult. had been given to understand that the attempt would be renewed in October; but this has been contradicted, and we think it highly improbable. It would hardly be consistent to try again with between 300 and 400 miles less cable than they started with at first; particularly as they found a greater depth of sea than calculated upon. The chief engineer recommends no great change in the machinery for paying out; but the commanding officers of the squadron, on being solicited to give their opinion of the whole affair, recommend more perfect machinery for that purpose. The East India telegraph company are said to have offered to purchase the Atlantic telegraph cable for the purpose of laying it immediately in the Red Sea or the Persian Gulf so as to get the telegraph line to India open at the earliest moment. If the attempt to lay the Atlantic cable is to be put off till next June, the cable will be sold, and John Bull will hear from his own sons in India before he can catch a whisper from their cousins this side of the water.

The insurrection in India holds the first place in the attention of the British. Their papers contain very interesting private correspondence from parties who were taken by surprise when the insurrection broke out, in which many details of attrocity make the blood curdle in our veins. A near neighbor, famous for his spite against anything English, was horribly shocked last week at the cruelty of the British officers for, on one occasion, blowing some of the insurgents from the cannon's mouth; but so great has been the attrocity of the nations to captured British ladies he has got converted, and says, if report is true, "it affords a fair reason for the system of 'blowing.'" Some of the insurgents when they capture a European man or woman, slit the skin around the throat of their victims, and pull off mask, scalp, hair, face and all! Oh! the horrors of war! What a monster of cruelty is man when filled with the devil!

The French government has given orders to its fleet to render every assistance to British transports on their way to India. If becalmed, steamers are to tow them along till they get fair wind, or, if need be, pull them through to their destination. Prince Albert and the Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-chief of the British army, are going to visit the French camp at Chalons. Report had it last week that little Vic. was going to join the party, and no doubt parlez-vous sweetly with Messrs. "Didons."

The British Parliament is to be prorogued on the 28th ult. It is expected that among the gentlemen to be elevated to the peerage of the United Kingdom at the end of the session, will be found Lord John Russell. His powerful opponent, the Times, is strong in its recommendations of Little Johnny. That's noble.

The Pope has recently paid a visit to Florence, and had a respectful but cold reception. The powers that be did their best to warm "his holiness" with brilliant illuminations. He is too sensible a man to mistake the warmth from candles and oil lamps for the warmth of affectionate hearts. He won't stay long there.

The Olive branch of peace seems to find Italy a barren soil. When revolutionists of the Mazzini school are silenced, a row springs up between the crowned heads. Sardinia and Naples are presently anything but friendly. Bomba is famous for being a sulky tyrant, and Emmanuel has a good dose of his father's pluck and won't stand too much nonsense.

The peace of Jerusalem has been disturbed. Riots at its gates have resulted in the death of twenty-four persons, and among its inhabitants there is great excitement—no details given. Feuds and deadly strife will disturb the holy city till He who should reign descends in power to befriend the seed of Abraham. But a few more years and down trodden Jerusalem will be clothed with righteousness, and the voice of the Lord will be heard in her streets. Sister to Zion in the West, in afflictons and trouble alike, both shall yet rule and triumph, though mockers do laugh in their intoxication. Blind with rage, they perceive not the day of the Lord drawing nigh; but the wise see and understand.

Men Who Have Been Some.

It may be interesting to your readers, says a correspondent of the Washington States, to know who of those that have occupied executive offices in our government are now among us. For this purpose we subjoin a list below:—Of the ex-Presidents there are four still living, vix.: Martin Van Buren, John Tyler, Millard Fillmore and Franklin Pierce. Of the Vice Presidents, also four: Van Buren, Tyler, Dallas and Fillmore; and four Secretaries of State: Van Buren, Louis McLane, Buchanan and Everett. Eleven Secretaries of the Treasury: Rush, Ingham, McLane (L,) Duane, Taney, Ewing, Bibb, R. J. Walker, Meredith, Corwin and Guthrie. Seven Secretaries of War: Cass, Bell, Porter (J. M.,) Wilkins, George W. Crawford, Conrad and Jefferson Davis. Also seven Secretaries of the Navy: Paulding, Badger, John Y. Mason, Bancroft, W. B. Preston, Graham and Kennedy. Eight Postmasters General: John McLean, Kendall, Francis Granger, Wickliffe, Cave Johnson, Collamer, N. K. Hall and Campbell Eleven Attorneys General: Richard Rush, Taney, B. F. Butler, Gilpin, Crittenden, Nelson, Mason (J. Y.,) Clifford, Toucey, Reverdy Johnson and Cushing. And all the Secretaries of the Interior, viz.: Ewing, McKennon, Stuart and McClelland, are yet living. There are also seven gentlemen who have served as Speakers of the national House of Representatives, now living, viz.: John Bell, R. M. T. Hunter, John W. Davis, Robert C. Winthrop, Howell Cobb, Linn Boyd, and N. P. Banks.

Notice.

Elders William H. Branch and Millen Atwood are requested to come to New York immediately, as their services are wanted.

☞ The columns of The Mormon are open to the correspondence and articles of the Elders; but, while we believe in according full liberty to all, we hold ourselves irresponsible for the particular sentiments of any.

Correspondence from Elder Ursenbach.

New York Aug. 22, 1857.

Elder T. B. H. Stenhouse—Dear Brother: Knowing your deep interest in the progress of the work of God in the Swiss and Italian Missions, where the recollection of your past labors is held in grateful remembrance by many who are the blest recipients of the Truth through your administration, and being recently in receipt of a letter from Elder S. Francis, containing some interesting news of the Saints in those regions, I have thought a few extracts would not be uninteresting.

Elder Francis has been for more than a year President of the Italian Conference, where he has labored with untiring energy to bear testimony to the Truth of the work of God, and, in spite of the opposition of Catholic priests and Methodist ministers, he has succeeded in planting the standard of Truth in several places in the Waldensian Valleys, where the Gospel was not previously introduced. Elder Ruban has been his fellow laborer, but as you are well acquainted with Elder Francis, I will leave him to speak for himself.

Geneva, July 7, 1857.

Dear Brother Ursenbach—Not having returned to Piedmont since your departure for Zion, and being now located in Geneva, I have had the pleasure of reading the different letters you have written to Prest. Smith and to the Saints in Geneva, all of which have caused us to rejoice, with the exception of one announcing the assassination of Elder Parley P. Pratt: this grieved us to the heart, we could hardly believe that such an atrocity had been perpetrated; the Saints were much affected by such sad news. Please tell me in your next if his assassin, McLean, has been punished, and the law has taken its course.

After the return of Prest. Smith, we held a conference in Geneva, in which I was appointed President of the Italian Mission and of the Geneva Conference. This appointment, in connection with the attending to the re-baptism of every member connected with the Church here, will keep me employed. The work in this Canton is now in a prosperous condition, The brethren have organized themselves into companies, and are distributing tracts in the villages around Geneva, on the other hand, the sisters are zealously endeavoring to do their best to warn their neighbors and their efforts in connection with those of the brethren are producing successful results. A young man has recently joined the Church and this evening we expect to baptize two young ladies, who have boldly come forth in the face of public opinion and acknowledged their belief in the principles of the Church. Elder Ruban has been sent to the Canton of Neufchatel, where we hope he will be able to gain over some honest souls to Truth

Elder P. H. Morel, of the Branch of Geneva, who, by his age and experience, combined with commendable zeal, may be said to be the father of the Branch, preaches continually, both by leading a correct life, and by his tongue. He desires to be kindly remembered to his friends.

The Italian Conference is doing well, and presents an aspect of joy, union and peace; the brethren are laboring dilligently to preach the gospel in all the Piedmontese valleys. Elder Smith is now in the Canton of Thurgovia; from there he goes to St. Gall. He has visited Zurich, where everything moves on in order and prosperity; that Branch now numbers from 200 to 225 members, presided over by Elder Bear. His Satanic majesty had been diligently endeavoring to sow the seeds of discord among them; but the presence of Elder Smith had re-established order, and all is now going on for the better.

Thus you see, Brother Octave, that I have nothing but good news for you, as far as we are concerned. The people around us are, as you may know, still the same; they take public opinion as their guide, and that opinion being controlled by evil influences, leads them to seek more after the vague, chimerical ideas of the present day, than the principles of truth.

We have had the pleasure of having your father, Elder Frederick Ursenbach, in our midst; he has been the means of doing much good by his exortations and example. He joins with me and the rest of the brethren and sisters in kind love to you, to Bro. Stenhouse and family, and Bro. Savage.

Several Saints are preparing to go to Zion next spring.

Adieu, Bro. Octave, and believe me to remain, as ever, your friend and brother in the New Covenant,

Samuel Francis.

Correspondence from Canada.

Wainfleet, C. W., Aug. 31, 1857.

Mr. Editor—Dear Sir: I have had the opportunity of hearing one of the Latter Day Saints preach here in Canada; not one only, but I am glad to say three of them. I was so much surprised on hearing them that I cannot refrain from informing you of my great disappointment. Instead of my hearing a wild and disgraceful doctrine, it was just what I found contained in my Bible. I was always taught by our learned men here that a Mormon was a thief, a murderer, a mocker of Christ; but, Mr. Editor, I am glad that God has sent His servants the Mormons here. It is just what I have been looking for, it is just what I have wanted to bring me out of Babylon; for our preacher here, instead of bringing me out of Babylon, was sending me further in. All they want is your dimes, and they do not care for you nor for me if Babylon swallow us up. They say that they preach the same doctrine that Christ did; but since I have heard the voice of a poor despised Mormon, I find that our Methodist preachers are the thieves and the liars that they call the Mormons. I thank Mr. Brigham Young for his good kindness in sending us Mormon missionaries, for it is the first time that ever I heard the doctrine of Christ preached in my native Canada. Mr. Hill, Stephen H. Goddard and George Goddard are the first who ever learned me the Plan of Salvation.

Mr. Editor, I do not scribble these few lines to you because I am a Mormon; not so, for I am not a Mormon yet, and perhaps never shall be; but I hope, if ever I can embrace any religion, it may be Mormonism, for Mormonism is just what my Bible teaches me, and every honest-hearted man or woman would not say any thing else, if they were not afraid that their craft was in danger.

Mr. Editor, I think if we had had a Mormon missionary in this country ten years ago, our land would have flourished with milk and honey, instead of there being so many husbands and wives in our jail here at Merrittsville, Canada West.

Mr. Editor, please excuse my scribble, but I cannot resist the pleasure of sending a few lines to you; if you think them worthy a place in your paper, do so with my goodwill and consent.

I remain, yours,

Aaron Farr, a Canadian Subject.

Died,

At Williamsburgh, N. Y., Sept. 8th, Elder Thomas McCreery, of diarrhea.

Thus we are again called to chronicle the demise of a good man. Elder McCreery was a native of Ireland, entered the Church several years since in Liverpool, and came to this country with the view of reaching Utah, a little more that two years ago. He was a humble man, affable with all, and richly generous in the days of prosperity towards the Elders of Israel. He has died, highly respected by all who knew him, and leaves in our midst his aged widow, a lady highly esteemed. No tongue can speak consolation to her nor no hand minister to her in this her hour of trying affliction and fail to receive the blessing of the Lord. Who will be her friend?

Army Orders.

Washington, Sept. 3, 1857.

The War Department has issued an order to the following effect:—

It being deemed inadvisable to detach Brevet Brigadier General Harney from service in Kansas, Col. A. S. Johnston, of the Second Cavalry, is assigned to the command of the Utah expedition, and will proceed to join the same without delay.

As Col. Sumner of the First Cavalry may be daily expected with his column of horse and foot, General Harney will, in anticipation, dispatch six companies of the Second Dragoons to escort the civil officers to Utah on their mission, and remain attached to the command of Colonel Johnston. The companies so detached will, if possible, be carried to at least sixty privates each, by transfers from the remaining companies.

The staff department will supply all the wants of those dragoons as well as the wants of other portions of the Utah expedition that may be remaining behind.

Brevet Major Porter, Assistant Adjutant General, will promptly report himself for duty to Col. Johnston before the latter shall pass Fort Leavenworth.

Serious Collision on the Camden and Atlantic Railroad—Three Persons Killed and Thirteen Wounded.

Philadelphia, Sept. 5, 1857.

A serious collision took place on the Camden and Atlantic Railroad to-day, between an express and a freight train. The disaster occurred neat Whitehorse, N. J., eleven miles below this city. Wm. Siner, a merchant doing business here, and the engineer and a fireman of the express train were killed and thirteen wounded, some of them seriously. The cause of the accident is said to be the anxiety of the employees on the freight train to reach the city in time to participate in an excursion, and to do this they violated the time tables. One of the employees has fled to the woods.

Quebec, U. C., Sept. 5, 1857.

The steamship Clyde, which left Quebec for Glasgow on the 22d ult., was totally wrecked on Perroquet Reef, in the Gulph of St. Lawrence, on the 24th. The passengers and crew are safe. The passengers were put on board the steamship Anglo-Saxon, off Point Des Mouts, the 30th ult., (Sunday.)

The Late Lieut. James McGary.

New London, Sept. 7, 1857.

The remains of James McGary, Second Lieutenant with Dr. Kane in his Arctic Exploration, were interred here yesterday by the Masonic fraternity. The funeral was attended by one of the largest assemblages ever congregated here. Lieut. McGary was one of Dr. Kane's most reliable men. He leaves a wife and two sons to mourn his loss.

The Military Expedition to Utah, etc.

Washington, Sept. 9, 1857.

The Acting Commissioner of Indian Affairs, Mr. Charles E. Mix, this morning received the following despatch from J. Haverty, Superintendent of Indian Affairs at St. Louis:—

Col. Johnson left yesterday to escort Governor Cummings to Utah. It is supposed that the command will start as soon as the Colonel arrives.

Dr. Forney, the newly appointed Indian Agent for Utah, having given the required bond, leaves immediately for the West.

Another Missionary.

Elder James Galley, writes us from Philadelphia, that he has arrived there on his way to England. He has been working at Florence for means to continue his travels and been by that detained considerably longer than he desired. He has taken his passage on the packet ship Stalwart, to sail from Philadelphia for Liverpool on the 22d instant.

Appointments

Elder Jeter Clinton is hereby appointed to take charge of, and preside over the New York Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, in the place of President Alexander Ott, who is appointed on a mission to preach the Gospel to the Germans in said conference. Elder Clinton will also act as an Assistant Counsellor to the Presidency of the Church in the Eastern States.

All the Presiding Elders over Branches of the Church, and Traveling Elders in said conference, will hereafter correspond with him in relation to their several duties in their respective fields of labor.

Elder Karl Gottfried Maeser is hereby appointed on a mission to preach the Gospel to the Germans in the Philadelphia Conference of said Church.

Elder John F. Sneddiker is hereby appointed to assist Elder Maeser in said German Mission.

Those Elders appointed on missions to the Germans will correspond with, and report their labors from time to time, to the Presidency at New York.

W. I. Appleby,

New York, September 4th, 1857.

Conference Notice.

The Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, comprising the New York Conference, will be held at the Saints' Hall, Brookes' Assembly Rooms, No. 361 Broome Street, New York, on Sabbath, October 11th, 1857, commencing at 10½ o'clock A. M.

Traveling Elders and Presidents of Branches in said conference who can make it convenient, are expected to meet in council at the residence of President Appleby in Williamsburgh, on the Saturday evening previous, at seven P. M. They will please come prepared with a report of their labors, and of the situation of the Saints committed to their charge.

All those who cannot attend, will send in a report of their respective Branches, &c., previous to that time, directed to W. J. Silver, Box 3957 Post Office, New York.

Jeter Clinton,
President of the New York Conference.

Conference at Philadelphia.

The Traveling Elders and Presidents of Branches, comprising the Philadelphia Conference, are expected to meet in Council on Saturday, October 3, at 7 P. M., at the house of Elder William Wright—the first house in Weaver street, below Coates, between Fifth and Sixth streets, Philadelphia. They will please come prepared with a report of their labors and of the situation of the Saints committed to their charge.

The Semi-Annual Conference will be held the following day, October 4th, at the Saints' Hall, commencing at half-past ten A. M.

Angus M. Cannon, President.

Sunday Meetings.

The Saints meet every Sunday for Public Worship in Philadelphia at Mitchell's Hall, 312 Fourth Street—or York Avenue, above Vine, at 10 1/2 A. M. 3 and 7 1-2 P. M.: in New York, at Brooks' Assembly Rooms, 361 Broome Street, at 3 and 7 P. M.

Another Walker Expedition.

Some parties in this city, who have heretofore been conspicuously engaged in General Walker's Central American crusade, significantly assert that preparations are on foot for another grand demonstration at no distant day. A secret plan is said to exist which contemplates the raising of an army of ten thousand men, all of whom shall embark or set sail about the same time for some port in Nicaragua. Nothing is to be left undone which shall tend to secure efficiency and eventual success. Baltimore is to furnish from three to four hundred, as her complement to the above named army, with full equipments, money, &c. It is further stated that persons fully pledged have already been secured in the city, who are only waiting due notice and the full consummation of General Walker's plans to be off. It is known as the "Central American League." Who the parties are that are attached to this league we are unable to say, or whether they have been absolutely consolidated as rumored cannot be fully ascertained, except so far as current rumor goes. Such secret fillibustering expeditions are reprehensible; and if the one in question does really exist, its movements will, doubtless, be more fully ascertained in due time. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, New Orleans and all the other leading cities of the Union are said to be united in this movement.—Baltimore Patriot, August 20.

Ho! for Nicaragua!

Under this heading the Gonzales (Texas) Inquirer, of the 22d ultimo, has the following card from Captain J. C. G. Key, of that town:—

"Notice is hereby given, that the undersigned intends raising a company of 'emigrants' to join General Walker, who will leave New Orleans for Nicaragua on or about the first day of October next, with not less than three thousand men. All who are desirous of joining the colonists can do so by meeting me in Gonzales between the 15th and 20th of September. Emigrants will only be required to furnish themselves as far as New Orleans, from thence their passage is engaged and paid for by the 'colonization committee.' Persons desirous of emigrating to the rich lands of Nicaragua would do well to go early, as the first settlers will obtain great advantages in the way of choice locations over subsequent settlers. It is my intention to visit several adjoining counties previous to my departure, and explain to those who wish information the arrangements made for all who wish to join the colony. Due notice will be given of my appointments."

The same paper has the following paragraph:—Several of our citizens have contracted the Nicaragua fever. Should Major Ben McCulloch go with General Walker, as it is currently reported he will, he will find a large number of gallant boys in Western Texas ready to accompany him.

A Giant.

Miles Darden, who died recently in Tennessee, was said to be the largest man in the world. The Jackson Whig has the particulars of the deceased, furnished by the Rev. John Brooks:

"He was twice married. His children are very large, but probably none of them will ever be more than half the weight of their father. He was quite active and lively, and labored until about four years ago, when he became so fleshy that he was compelled to stay at home, or be hauled about in a two-horse wagon.

"In 1839, he made a contract with a tailor to furnish him a suit of clothes for $50—the cloth to cost $5 a yard. Upon measurement it took 12 yards of cloth—so the tailor lost $10 and the making. The tailor states that three men, each weighing over 200 pounds, put the coat on, buttoned it around them, and walked across the square at Lexington. In 1850, it took thirteen and one-half yards of flax cloth, yard wide, to make him a coat. It took 16 yards of cambric for a shroud; 24 yards of black velvet to cover the sides and lid of his coffin; 125 feet of plank to make his coffin.

"His coffin was eight feet long; across the breast, thirty-two inches; across the head, eighteen inches; across the feet, fourteen inches; its depth, thirty-five inches. He weighed in 1854 eight hundred and seventy-one pounds. His height was seven feet six inches. His weight when he died, as nearly as can be ascertained, was a fraction over one thousand pounds."

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the transgression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The four is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaîtraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours?

Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconqu demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés?" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent, ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaître Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les ecès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

JOHN TAYLOR.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

Notice.

THE Saints who desire to send means to their friends in Europe, can have the same attended to, by forwarding any sum they wish in current money, to this office, enclosing one dollar or more, in proportion to the amount sent, to defray the expenses of procuring Bills of Exchange, making remittances, foreign postage, &c., describing particularly to whom, and where they wish to have it sent; at the same time not holding myself responsible in any manner whatever unless the money reach me.

All subscriptions, donations, &c., for the support of THE MORMON, or Conference Fund (except the donations and Conference Funds raised in the Philadelphia Conference, which will be forwarded as usual through President Cannon) must be sent hereafter to my address; as also Tithing; P. E. Fund, and donations for the Temple from those who wish to contribute the same, so each person may be duly credited, and the means forwarded to Zion, and have their names entered in "The Book of the Law of the Lord."

No Power of Attorney, or other legal instrument of writing, going to Europe or elsewhere, forwarded to us for the purpose of sending to Washington in order to obtain the attestation of the Department, and the British Consul's Certificate and seal to the same, will be attended to in future, unless the means to defray the expenses and foreign postage accompanies the Instrument, as there is considerable expense attending it as well as labor. We would like to oblige all, and are willing to give our services when we have opportunity; but we cannot advance means to defray such expenses.

All communications intended for THE MORMON should be addressed—Editor of THE MORMON, New York. Otherwise direct to my address, Box No. 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. APPLEBY.

Notice to Subscribers.

WE frequently receive remittances for subscriptions to THE MORMON, without the sender giving the name of the place he desires the paper to be sent to. Sometimes the name of the Post Office or town is mentioned, but not the county, and as there are several towns in some States by the same name, unless the county is designated we are at a loss to know where to direct the papers ordered. We wish all communications to us to name distinctly the Post Office or town, county, and State or Territory, as then there will be no mistake.

Poetry.

National Song.

BY MISS E. R. SNOW, G. S. L. CITY.

Thrones, Kingdoms, Dominions, and all Institutions
Of human erection, are bound to decay;
But the heavens introduce, in this last dispensation,
Their own order of things, that will not pass away.

Chorus.

Lo! here in the midst of the snow-cover'd mountains,
We call to all nations—all people forsooth;
Come, come to our Standard, the Deseret Standard,
The Standard of Freedom, Salvation, and Truth.

The Saints hold the Priesthood, which from the beginning
Existed with God, and on earth will remain,
Establishing liberty, peace, and salvation—
Preparing the way for Messiah to reign.

Chorus—Lo! here, &c.

All hell has combin'd with this world's bitter hatred,
Usurp'd man's best rights, all our freedom suppress'd,
From place to place driven us, and murder'd our Prophet,
And homeless we wander'd while poor and distress'd.

Chorus—Lo! here, &c.

Brigham Young, with a band of brave Pioneer vet'rans,
Like Abra'm instructed, here found us a home,
In these deep western wilds, amid snow-cover'd mountains,
Where th' wild cactus blooms, and rude savages roam.

Chorus—Lo! here, &c.

All hail to the day they saluted this Valley—
Day sacred to mem'ry, to Liberty dear;
While th' judgments of God are pour'd forth on the nations,
Truth, Equity, Justice, and Peace resort here.

Chorus—Lo! here, &c.

The cactus our emblem, we're strong through oppression;
In exile our Banner is broadest unfurl'd—
When robb'd we grow wealthy—the blood of our martyrs
Will plant the pure Standard and challenge the world.

Chorus—Lo! here, &c.

The Stoppage of the Utah Mail.

From the Deseret News, August 5, 1857.

That our readers may correctly understand why Messrs. Smoot and Stoddard (who arrived on the 23d ult., in twenty days from Independence) came through without the mail, we publish the following official letter, and make such comments upon the subject as its true nature seems to warrant and demand:

Post-Office Department, Contract Office
Wednesday, June 10, 1857.

Sir: The indentures of contract for the conveyance of the mails on route No. 8,911—Independence, Mo., to Salt Lake City, Utah, sent for execution to the care of the Postmaster of Salt Lake City on the 16th October last, do not appear to have been executed by you until the 24th March following. The delay in executing, and the unsettled state of things at Salt Lake rendering the mails unsafe under present circumstances, the Postmaster-General declines extending the time of execution beyond the period mentioned in the advertisement; and, therefore, declines to accept the contract executed by you. Hence, your service on the route will cease.

Very repectfully your obedient servant,
William H. Dundas,
Second Assistant Posmaster-General.
Mr. Hiram Kimball, Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

We will not now enter into a minute, tedious and unpleasant detail of the manner in which previous contracts upon the route in question have been NON-FULFILLED and will omit specifications concerning the large extra sums paid for not carrying the mail, for those facts are most fully understood in Utah and by the Department in Washington, and the record since October last is sufficient for our present purpose. The official letter written by the P. O. Department to inform Mr. Kimball of the acceptance of his bid, &c., purports to have been mailed at Washington on the 16th of October, and of course it was well known at the time that said letter could not by any possibility reach Mr. Kimball by due course of mail until the 1st of the following December, the very day on which the indentures of contract were required to be executed and service placed upon a long and inhospitable route at the begining of winter. But owing to the fact that the mail in question seldom made time, and often missed whole trips upon the most frivolous pretexts, especially when the weather was about to become cool, the Department could not have reasonably expected that the letter to Mr Kimball would reach him until long after the expiration of the time specified for compliance with its requirements. And since no duplicate was forwarded by the Isthmus, and the last eastern mail under the old contract, which contained the letter to Mr. Kimball, did not arrive until the 24th of last March, and did not leave Independence until the 8th of November instead of the 1st, there is certainly fair ground upon which to base the presumption of a pre-planned pretext for disannuling the late contract, for "the delay in executing" arose solely through fault in the P. O. Department and its late pet contractor, and was entirely beyond any conduct or control by Mr. Kimball who executed the identures on the day of their arrival.

We are well aware that the acceptance of Mr. Kimball's bid was a source of great annoyance, loss, and chagrin to Treasury suckers; that the previous contractor, after having received large extra sums upon representations that the service was worth some twice the amount bid by Mr. Kimball, made a bid only a few hundred dollars higher, under the almost certain expectation of more thick fat for lean service, and that certain frontier crumb eaters of Washington loaves were outrageously disappointed and maddened, and most candidly admit that we hardily expected the Department to be able to withstand so severe an outside pressure. It even caused us surprise that there was sufficient integrity, amid champaigne, oysters, and other nicer titbits of a more delicate description, to admit of the acceptance of Mr. Kimball's bid, even though bound to do so by law, on account of its being the lowest responsible one. But after tempting bait had been set aside, after the anger of hungry expectants had been braved, and the contract lawfully and magnanimously awarded to a 'Mormon'—one who it was just to presume would faithfully perform the service—then to shift in the wind and disannul the contract for an alleged delay arising solely from its own dereliction, demonstrates an increasing progress in the unblushing exercise of arbitrary power in trampling upon the rights of an American, that we were not altogether prepared to expect at so early a date.

The first account against Mr. Kimball in the disannuling letter is shown to be entirely the fault of the P. O. Department and the mail service of the former pet-contractor; and the second is supremely ridiculous, viz:—"the unsettled state of things at Salt Lake"!! Who told you that things were 'unsettled' here? The off-scouring of the earth, and we defy the Department to name any other authority for an assault so utterly unjust and groundless. And it is indeed pitiable to see an important Department of a great Nation driven to the miserable subterfuge of employing the vile statement of liars, hireling slanderers and soured office hunters, to enable it to hatch up pretexts for depriving American citizens of their rights, twist it as you will, solely on account of a difference in religious faith and practice, concerning which Article 1 of amendments to our common Constitution reads, "Congress shall make no law—prohibiting the free exercise thereof.'

Mr. Dundas' letter and the facts above stated are in themselves conclusive and incontrovertible evidence of the arbitrary and unjust usage now dealt out to Mr. Kimball and the people of Utah, and a few more facts will show how unwise is also that usage—how much like biting of one's nose to spite the face of his neighbor. In December last, and knowing that the former contract had expired, Judge Smith, Postmaster in this city, employed Messrs. Little and Hanks to take the mail to Independence, which they succeeded in doing in the dead of Winter, after a trip of some seventy-eight days, encountering weather and hardships which, in all probability, no other men have endured in such service, and which few others, if any, of even mountain men could, and for which they have not as yet received one cent of compensation from the Department. A copy of the contract was seasonably lodged in the Department at Washington, and when Mr. Little called to receive his pay for the trip, he was informed that they would pay him if they had received a copy of the contract. Mr. Little replied that he had duly forwarded the copy, and a gentleman standing by remarked that they had already received it, for he had seen it. So much for another miserable subterfuge to avoid paying "Mormons" the most arduous service of Government. How consistent! Millions for corrupt party purposes—not a dollar for honest, severe and honorably performed toil.

In January the depth of snow and severity of cold drove back those who attempted to take the mail. About the time of that event and early in February, the Mormon and a few lines from Hon. J. M. Bernhisel, both of which came in the California mail, gave the first intimation of the acceptance of Mr. Kimball's bid, though, as before stated, no official information reached here until the 24th of March, the letter containing it having lain at the Devil's Gate on the Sweetwater during the winter.

On the 7th of February another mail was sent out, another early in March, and on the 1st of April, the first schedule date and the earliest date after the execution of the indentures, which as before observed, were executed on the day of their arrival, efficient service began to put on the route by rapidly stocking it with men and animals, able and numerous, and supplying it with suitable vehicles.

From that date to the arrival of our July mail at Independence, the mail has never been carried on route No. 8,911 so promptly, safely, faithfully and expeditiously, since the first period of its establishment, and it was the calculation to soon be able to transmit the mail in from sixteen to twenty days, to the greatly-increased accommodation of business men at home and abroad. And, as efficient mail service could not be placed upon the route for the small sum of $23,000 a year, it was designed to speedily connect it with a transportation and express company, by which the merchants and people in Utah would receive goods from the frontiers in from twenty to twenty-five days, much to the mutual benefit of all concerned. Under the fairly-to-be-presumed certainty that "Mormons" would actually carry the mail, we are informed that the late incumbent, Postmaster General Campbell, was pleased when Mr. Kimball's bid was accepted; but the present Postmaster General and his Second Assistant have yielded to the groundless clamor and sordid selfishness of characters too worthless to name, and, without the least shadow of a true cause, have arbitrarily, unjustly, and most foolishly and unwisely disannulled the only responsible and efficient contract ever entered into upon the route.

In addition to the main inducements for such a disannuling by the Department, it may be that the very promptness and speed, and the freedom from plunderings of the mail sacks under charge of "Mormons," gave too much of a shock of progressive movement to the lumbering, unsatisfactory, uncertain, disappointing, loss-incurring, old-fogyed Post Office Department of the United States. But hush! or some thin-skinned, ignorant, tyrannical booby may call our remarks rebellious and treasonable. Reared among the Green Mountains of Vermont and the Granite Hills of New Hampshire, and familiar with the infernal corruptions, abominations, superatitions and wire-workings of this generation, and also with our rights and privileges as an American-born citizen, we shall use "the freedom of speech," as guaranteed in Article I, in accordance with the dictates of our own conscience and the judgment we may be blessed with. And if the time-serving, money worshipping, place-hunting, lie-making, oppression-dealing rabble think that they will be able to measure arms with the Almighty and again blot His truths and His people from this earth and successfully make lies and abominations their ramparts of defence, we have merely to say that from our heart we pity them, and take the liberty of informing them that in both of their plans and expectations they will find themselves most terribly disappointed, for their purposes are without counsel.

For the honor of our nation, of which the inhabitants of Utah are indisputably the most loyal and law-abiding, we are and long have been deeply chagrined with the management of our postal affairs, as contrasted with the more prominent European Governments; and for this reason alone, we are anxious that our General Post Office Department should wake from its long sleep, shake itself from its abuses, and extend equal, prompt, speedy and reliable mail facilities to all. To prove that we are thus disinterested, especially since our hopes of a speedy mail reformation have been so unwarrantably and unprecedently shattered to the winds, we now fairly propose that if the Government will clear the track, we will cheerfully bear the burden of transmission of all our mail matter from the shores of both oceans to our most secluded hamlets, and be most thankful for the untrammeled privilege, for then our feelings would not be constantly rasped, nor our nationality put to the blush, nor our reasonable expectations be continually cut off. This boon can be constitutionally granted, for in the delegated powers to "establish Post Offices and post roads" there is no restriction as to how nor to whom; and such a wise grant would be a great favor to hundreds of thousands, at a saving of Government large sums of money now worse than uselessly expended.

To the careless and unreflecting it may appear singular that we write so plainly upon this subject, but such persons have not been caused to endure the bitter experience that we have passed through. Search the archives at Washington from the beginning, and contrast alone the postal usage towards us with that towards any other State or Territory, and there is not an enlightened, sound, candid-thinking man but what would blush at the gross injustice meted out to us, as well as others, and marvel at the patience with which it has been endured, far beyond what would have been possible among any other class of all our millions. And since that injustice is becoming still more flagrant, is it to be wondered that we respectfully ask the Post Office Department to entirely clear the track, and accord us the privilege of carrying our own mails at our own expense? Can they, or anybody else, expect a cheaper proposition? While others are planning every conceivable method of tapping the Treasury, we are striving to stop the leaks; and, though living in a region which even the New York Herald has at last learned is "frightfully poor," we simply ask the boon of being let alone and allowed to sustain ourselves. Cannot the most rabid "Mormon"-eater raise a consistent objection?

The world ask us for miracles to substantiate the truths of our faith and practice in the Gospel of the Son of God. From the first ministration of an angel of light to Joseph the Prophet, all classes of unbelievers in the doctrines revealed to him from Heaven have joined in a constant, most furious, illegal and unfeeling onslaught upon the Latter-Day Saints. And the Government of the United States, after coldly looking upon and inwardly chuckling at the inhuman conduct of Missouri and Illinois towards the Saints, could take active part in the internal broils in Kansas, and has now, after a long series of would-be sly oppressions, openly entered the arena of our avowed persecutors, and contrary to the very Constitution by which it exists, is high-handedly taking away our rights and privileges, one by one, under pretexts that the most devilish should blush at, and is laying plans for our extermination—thursting the hot iron into our sides, and telling us to hold still and say nothing. These facts alone are a continuous miracle which the wicked can gaze upon day by day, and to them and the Saints are proof positive that we, at least, of all people on the earth, fully answer our Saviour's description of the Former-Day Saints, "If ye were of the world, the world would love his own; but because ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you."—John, xv., 19, which contains the whole secret of all the hostility against us, as the whole world will sooner or later most assuredly learn, each for themselves.

The United States Government and Utah.

From the Deseret News, Aug. 12.

Powerful in numbers and wealth, extensive in domain, learned and practical in mechanical arts and exact sciences, and possessing a land choice above all other lands, the United States had it in their power to become the most free, enlightened and happy government ever instituted by man. Peopled by those who had experienced and fled from intolerance, oppression, and religious persecution in the Old World, delivered from the yoke aimed to be fastended by a foreign power, and blessed with a Constitution guaranteeing freedom of conscience, of speech, and of the Press, it was scarcely presumable that occasion would ever be found for the prudent, cautionary counsels and exhortations to be found in the inaugural addresses of Washington, Adams, and Jefferson. But alas for human wisdom, when man rejects the counsels and servants of Jehovah! So recently as March 4, 1797, President Adams rationally and forcibly urged the propagation of "knowledge, virtue and religion among all classes of people—as the only means of preserving our Constitution from its natural enemies, the spirit of sophistry, the spirit of party, the spirit of intrigue, the profligacy of corruption;" and within that brief period those very enemies, so wisely cautioned against as destructive "to elective governments," are exercising almost undisputed sway over our nation, and most certainly bid fair to soon accomplish their fore-warned nefarious designs.

Place-hunters and spoilsmen, with a hireling clergy and reckless editors to bolster corrupt systems and lash unbridled licentiousness into fury, have the Executive of our nation fast bound hand and foot, and turn him, like a weathercock, to subserving their nefarious purposes, to the utter overthrow of equal laws, of justice and humanity, principles so revered and respected in the early administration of our Government. Yes, so much were those principles then respected, that President Jefferson, so late as March 4, 1801, asserted "a wise and frugal Government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another, and shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement," to be "necessary to make us a happy and prosperous people."

But, inasmuch as rotten political pigmies have attained to almost supreme sway in the Government, and are fast trampling under foot the last vestige of "unalienable rights," utterly regardless of the correct teachings and examples of the wise and true patriots and statesmen of the Revolution, it may be asked whether we expect to wean them from the cesspool of their corruptions, or to prevent the mad officers and crew of the ship of state from pursuing their wild orgies, as they are hopelessly whirled in the narrowing circles of the vortex of destruction. We have no such expectation, for we are aware of the folly of attempting to cast evil spirits out of those who prefer their companionship, and our voice is not loud enough to penetrate the ears of those who are willingly deaf and drunken through the influence of their own unbridled passions. What then do we propose? To freely and truthfully comment upon men and principles, no matter whether high or low, powerful or weak, as opportunity and wisdom may dictate. Also to inform "the powers that be" that we are somewhat acquainted with their inhuman plans and designs, and shall subvert them so far as possible; and, for the benefit of the honest, virtuous and upright the wide world over, shall strive to encourage the noble and good, and restrain the vicious.

The United States has millions of acres of unoccupied land, for the rapid settling of which the very genius of our Government requires the extension of every Constitutional facility and encouragement Utah embraces a large area of mountains, deserts, and arid valleys, with three salt lakes, several brackish and fresh water springs and streams, six or seven small unnavigable rivers, and limited and widely scattered spots and strips of soil, rendered fertile by expensive and vexatious irrigation. This "frightfully poor" region was unoccupied previous to 1847, save by the aborigines and a few roving Indian traders, trappers, and hunters. Being midway between the Western States and the land of gold, on the best direct central line of overland communication, did not the Government offer large bounties in land, and almost stretch its delegated powers, to pave the way for the settlement of so desolate a country? And did they not even shake off a barbarous relic of colonial usage, and guarantee to the settlers in such a region, even more fully and cheerfully than is accorded to those dwelling in more desirable locations, the Constitutional right of electing their own officers. We will answer.

In February, 1846, thousands of men, women and children could be seen leaving their homes in Nauvoo and crossing the Mississippi to escape the religious persecution so ruthlessly poured upon them by the State of Illinois, while not a single move was made by the General Government to "restrain men from injuring one another." And when crossing the Missouri, after a weary journey through the State of Iowa, they were met, instead of with kindness, commiseration and succor, with a requisition from the United States for a battalion of 500 efficient men to assist in the war with Mexico. This quota, if even any could have been legally called for under the circumstances, was so outrageously and unprecedently large as to plainly manifest what might be expected from the then Administration, which should, according to Jefferson, have extended "equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever state or persuasion, religious or political."

That battalion, after being so recently thrust from their homes solely because they lived above corruptions and the commission of popular crimes, at a moment's warning turned their backs upon their wives, children, and aged parents, upon their brethren and sisters, and least of all upon their teams, wagons, and the little all left to them of this world's goods, and performed the most arduous, health-destroying and praiseworthy, but much the poorest requited service, in the acquisition of the very territory of which Utah is a portion. That unfair and inhuman requisition was the first open thrust at the Latter Day Saints by the Government, but it was met in a manner so different from what any other class thus treated would have met it, that the then design for our extermination was foiled. And the ready compliance with such an unheard-of requisition, for a long period effectually silenced the most rabid persecutors of the Saints, and even caused its originator and instigators to blush at cruelty so akin to the charcteristics of the fiends of darkness.

In 1847, unfostered and unsustained by human aid, but strong in the Spirit of their God, and joyous in the known and eternal principles of Heaven, the Saints wended their way to the mountain fastnesses of what is now called Utah, and from that date until now have been busily engaged in the observance of the commandments of God and the counsels of his servants, in framing and abiding good and wholesome laws, and in benefiting and striving to save the human family so far as possible. Within that short time cities have been built, containing, aside from the comfortable dwellings of the less affluent, large, tasteful and commodious public and private edifices, which would add grace to cities the most favored by time, wealth, and other facilities. Many locations, previously nude and unsightly, have, by laborious, persevering, and often unrequited toil, been caused to teem with their rich products for the sustenance of man and beast—of the citizen and the stranger. And trees, planted and watered with a labor and patient waiting that but few would endure, are now bending with their burden of beautiful, luscious, and varied fruits, where heretofore naught but barrenness met the eye. And mills and machinery add their hum to the music of waters hitherto unrestrained. These facts alone are of themselves a perfect refutation of all the lies and slanders uttered against us, whether in regard to our social, moral, political, or religious character and habits, for no people, of the character and habits given us by our enemies, would, could, or ever did, e der the most favorable circumstances, operate in a manner at all comparable, for true worth, with the course and conduct of the Saints in Utah.

"Well, for all this toil expended in peopling with patriotic citizens regions where no other people would or will dwell, has not Congress passed for Utah an extra liberal pre-emption law?" It has passed pre-emption laws, some more and some less liberal, for all Territories, if we mistake not, except the Territory of Utah! And here alone, where, from the very nature of the country and the just claims of its settlers and the circumstances of its settlement, justice and mercy would require its being freely given to its occupants, as some small remuneration, there is no pre-emption law extended by a Government which proclaims its citizens to be "free and equal." At a late date persons were sent to make scattering surveys within our borders, when it is or should be well known at Washington that even those will never pay for the expense. For although they be made, as we are informed has been the case, at a very cheap rate to the parties intrusted with their execution, by plotting in the office lines never run and corners never seen in the field, and by here and there sticking long stakes so loosely that animals upon the range will rub them down (laid to "Mormons") and thus obliterate guiding marks to blunders, still the Government pays according to the office returns, and the buyer may hunt his lines and corners as best he can. But perhaps we should find no fault with large pay for not doing, since it is preferable with some to be unwilling to pay anything for service, unless the service be of a corrupt and corrupting description, or be not performed.

We are as willing to pay for land as are any other people, and are as fond of valid titles to land, which in unsold lands, whether surveyed or to be surveyed, we recognize and always have recognized to rest with the Government. And who in Utah has ever prohibited or in the least interfered with the customary surveying of public lands? Who refuses to pay for public lands, when they are thrown into market? No one in Utah. But how has it been in Nebraska? Congress passed an act granting a quarter section of land to each settler of a certain description in that Territory, and the Territorial Assembly transcended their bounds and legislated a half section to each such settler. Has the Assembly in Utah ever ventured upon legislation of anything like that character? Verily no; and as to land they have only granted possession to certain claims and improvements thereon, as has been custo mary in all new countries, pending the survey and sale by Government. And we again defy the world to point out a single infraction of law by the Latter Day Saints, either in a legislative, judicial, executive, public or private capacity.

But the unlawful land-legislation in Nebraska is not all the beauty of land practice in that region, for they have organized Clubs to mutually warrant and defend half-sections to settlers, and have passed a resolution, among others, in which all who will not join them are called sundry very hard names, and threatened with all sorts of violence if they in the least

THE MORMON.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, SEPT. 19, 1857.

Our Last Issue.

In another column our subscribers are informed that our editorial labors for the time being cease with the present issue. No particular reasons are there assigned for the discontinuance of THE MORMON as we think that none are necessary. The greater part of our Patrons are members of the Church and they have learned by their associations with the servants of the Lord that every move is right. We have labored to deserve the confidence of our brethern, sisters and all good people, and have the fullest assurance in our own mind that, however much they may regret the absence of their weekly visitor—THE MORMON—they will say amen to all our proceedings.

Before we lay aside our pen we cannot resist saying a few words to our friends. From the moment we entered this sanctum, to address the public, our time has been wholly consecrated to the labor assigned us. We have labored to encourage the saints in every good work—to live their religion. We have studied to encourage the elders in the vineyard of the Lord and to our enemies we have administered the rebuke they merited. We have had many friends, in and out of the Church, who have appreciated our labors and many unscrupulous foes who would willingly have crushed us, if they could have done so; but the Lord and Truth have ever brought us through our struggles victorious.

The mantle of darkness is fast enshrouding the nation; wickedness is visibly on the increase—in short, peace is taken from the earth and "the Prince, the power of the air" rules triumphant among the children of men. What a melancholy spectacle—the earth that rolled in purity from the hands of its creator is now covered with corruption. Man, created in the image of God, is now emaciated, palsied, paralized and diseased, "from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet," through transgression of the laws of heaven; woman, the gift of the Lord to man as a "help-meet"—is degraded and debased—his victim or his partner in crime. Every generation is worse than its predecessor, and the end must be wreck and ruin. THE MORMON of these facts has spoken plainly and shewn what the Lord has offered to do for the humble who would trust in Him and act righteously. The vices of men have been exposed and the virtues of those who served the God of Israel anciently have been all placed before our readers that they might eschew the evil and cleave to the good. How far our labors have been a blessing to them is not for us to say; but, without fearing a reproof for egotism, this we can say, and we scarcely think any who have read THE MORMON will question its truth—we have feared God, labored for His cause to the best of our ability, and if we have come short in the discharge of any duty expected of us it is more than what we have been able to perform; of such a failure, however, we have no knowledge. We laid no claim to literary attainments: the opinion of our talents, or want of talents rather, therefore, never troubled us. Our whole aim has been to build up the Kingdom of God, by the preaching and writing of truth—by the enunciation of correct principles, and with such views the language or talents of men are small matters. The voice of the messenger of salvation is not the plan of redemption. To confound the vain, the haughty wise, the Lord has invariably chosen those in whom He could confide for humility and integrity. To be such an instrument in His hands has been our constant prayer and study, and for whatever good we may, in our present position, have accomplished, we render to Him whom we serve and adore the Honor, Praise and Glory.

We took up the pen because we were appointed to do so and we lay it down, for the present, to take up whatever may be the most useful in building up the Kingdom. We pretend not to a knowledge of the secrets of the Lord; but with a firm confidence that He will do nothing but what He first reveals to His servants the Prophets, we are on hand to follow where duty leads. Mormonism is not a profession of some ancient faith, the worship of some God who was said to speak to men in ages past, it is the work of the Great God now. Men from love of truth and of moral rectitude espoused His cause anciently with all the world against them. To enlist under His banner to-day, is to take up the same sea of troubles. We counted the cost before we took His name upon us, and in future time whatever may be the lot of the servants of the Most High, we desire to share it with them. With the last dash of our pen we ask our friends to consider whether they will serve the God of Jacob, to inherit eternal peace and honor, or the world with its fading earthly joys. To-day is the day of choice—God and Liberty, or the World and Slavery!

The Late News from Utah.

The important documents from the Deseret News will be read with deep interest by the Saints. On them we offer no comments, they require none; they are clear enough that "the wayfaring man, though a fool, may not err therein." Wisemen in Israel, however, will undoubtedly more fully comprehend them, as such persons generally take time to read, and to reading add praying, that the light of heaven may illuminate the mind to the fullest comprehension of things that now are, and that the Holy Ghost, the comforter, may, as Jesus promised, "shew things to come."

The Herald and Daily Times, of Monday, published considerable of what we publish to-day, which will doubtless give the sentiments of the Utonians on their grievances a wide circulation. The stoppage of the mail; sending out of an entire set of Federal officers from the ranks of the "Gentiles"—men sought after and appointed to these offices, because of their well known want of sympathy or interest in the welfare of the inhabitants of the Territory, and these, too, backed up by 2500 hired soldiers fully equipped with everything for war at an enormous expense—are ugly facts which will tell a tale to the detriment of "the powers that be."

Thousands and tens of thousands of honorable citizens of the United States, unconnected with Mormonism, without faith in its principles, regard the Mormons as an ill used people, and despise the tyranny of the Administration of the professedly freest republic in the world; an Administration that, in its dealings with the weak, walks in the footsteps of the bloody, tyrannical, aristocratic government of the Kings of England, who goaded our fathers on to acts of despiration and ultimately to the accomplishment of the designs of Providence—the establishment of Liberty on American soil. Liberty purchased by the sacrifice of everything at the disposal of our honored sires; and yet a little more than three-fourths of a century only have passed away since the leading spirits of the colonies declared their resolve before high heaven to be free from the bondage of tyrants, and the same game of oppression is pursued by their representatives towards the Utonians. Oh! consistency whither hast thou fled?

The British colonies were inhabited by many god-fearing men; men who were just in all their ways; men who, for peace and liberty of soul, had left the homes of their fathers, and forsaken the land where the ashes of their progenitors reposed. In the natural course of events—of progress—the spirit of liberty to do right, to serve God, and to seek after a higher order of government, seized their souls, and the more the tyrants of England oppressed, as now does the Democratic Administration at Washington, the more did our revolutionary sires feel by the spirit of Almighty God that longer obedience was degrading servileism, and no virtue. Other people sought liberty before our fathers did; but they feared not God—sought it not for "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness" for all, and they failed in their struggles. The patriots of 1776 were righteous men, who believed it better to serve God than man, who trusted in Him, and His omnipotent arm brought them salvation—liberty of body and soul. Have the rulers of this great nation forgotten that oppression under the name of a Republic is no better favored in the sight of God than oppression under a monarchy? Or have they not gumption to understand that it is a greater sin in the sight of heaven for the government of a Republic to persecute than for a Kingdom or Empire? Know they not that hypocrisy added to sin makes the evil more detestable in the sight of high heaven? If they don't know it, the Almighty God of Jacob will reveal it to them in His own due time.

The Press on Utah.

THE N. Y. Express, the organ of, as Greely terms him, "Booby Brooks," gives a lengthy article on Tuesday on "Signs from Salt Lake." He begins by saying:

"The latest intelligence from Utah (Aug. 13th) indicates a determination on the part of the Mormon leaders to resist whatever attempts the Federal Government may be inclined to make, to bring the territory within the sphere of Federal authority."

Now, Mr. Brooks, we won't call you "Booby"—that is too apparent to require our repetition, you ought to be ashamed of your ignorance or hide your face for folly. "To bring the territory within the sphere of Federal authority" sounds very well as a justification for sending troops; but you nor no man else can tell the time when the territory was beyond "the sphere of Federal authority." Mr. Brooks, before you write another line against the Mormons in Utah, ask yourself the question if you or any of your calibre ever served their country, or were more faithful to its Constitution than have been the Mormons.

His Know-nothing mania rises and he talks about the audacity of the Utonians, because, says he:

"Two-thirds of them are foreigners, and of that two-thirds, probably one half are emigrants who came hither with never the remotest intention, or inclination, to swear allegiance to the Constitution of the United States."

They were not all sworn British subjects in the Colonies when the Colonists burst the shackles of oppression, they did not the less deserve the freedom which they toiled and bled for in common with sworn subjects. If one half have not sworn allegiance to the Constitution it is more than we know; but this we do know, none of them have sworn allegiance to their enemies, and if Mr. Brooks doubts it, he can volunteer to join the rabble now on the plains, and he may find it out. It is surprising that men so soon forget where they sprung from. One would think to hear Brooks in his Know-nothing mania that he and his were plants of American soil. The emigrant to-day is as deserving of liberty as the man who can boast of a father born in America—perhaps more so. The native owes his allegiance to the accident of birth, the emigrant comes to the country from choice. Mr. B., take a word of advice: aspire more after the gift of common sense than after popularity or office, and you will be much better qualified to speak on Utah.

In a late speech His Excellency Governor Young says:

"It would be hard for the people to explain away the idea that the Government of the United States is shutting down the gates upon us, for it is too visible; and this is what hastens the work of the Lord, which you are praying for every day."

The Express from its hatred of Utah turns the friend of the Administration and its comments on the above justifies thus the sending of troops:

"The government, in marching an army to Salt Lake, is shutting down no gate, no more of a "gate" than Gov. Walker has shut down in Kansas, to keep the peace, and uphold "law and order" there."

No difference between Utah and Kansas! Eh! Let us put a picture of the two territories before you, drawn by no friendly hand, and you will be better prepared to discover the difference.

"Kansas and Deseret both appear to be preparing to knock at the doors of Congress for admission. But how differently to they present themselves as suppliants! Kansas comes forward with bowie knives, rifles and land jobbers, with hands stained with blood, murder and arson, and fresh from the conflicts between the pro-slavery and anti-slavery settlers. On the other hand, Deseret, which is peopled by the Mormons, who, for their religious opinions, were driven out of Missouri, banished from Illinois, and driven beyond the Rocky Mountains, has gradually and quietly, without trouble or conflict, and by the efforts of its own energy and industry alone, grown into an important community; and after peaceably adopting a new constitution, its delegates are now on their way to Washington to claim its admission into the Union. And yet Deseret, although presenting such an example of industry sobriety and piety, will no doubt be set down by the present Congress as an immoral, dangerous and wicked community, while Kansas will be fought for, quarrelled about, and probably admitted to a co-partnership with the rest of the States.—N. Y. Herald, June 1, 1856.

However much it may be convenient or amusing for the Herald now and again to pitch into the Utonians, the above extract is strictly true and forced from that paper by the universal testimony in favor of Utah, rendered by disinterested gentlemen who have sojourned there. Marching troops into Kansas could not possibly injure the inhabitants of that Territory who sought after the right, as they were sent there for the purpose of preventing the armed minority from coercing the majority, and forcing upon them institutions abhorrent to their faith and wishes. But every person who knows anything of the Utah expedition knows that it has been sent into that Territory for no other purpose than breaking up, if possible, the Mormon institutions. It is true, ostensibly, the army was sent to assist the new Federal officers in executing the laws of the United States; but every sane, intelligent person sees through the flimsy pretext for that expedition. That corrupt scoundrel, Drummond, who owes his life to the protection extended him through the influence of Governor Young, left the Territory with his prostitute, Ada Carrol, for California, to save himself from prosecution by the relatives of his legitimate wife, and then began the abuse of Utah and the most unfounded calumnious reports that ever were concocted in hell and heralded on the earth by the most corrupt and most base unhung scapegrace that ever lived. He lied in California, he wrote lies to the papers in the Atlantic States, and he lied to James Buchanan, and lied to everybody, till he got the Utah expedition on foot. In hopes of being sent back Governor of Utah to be revenged on those who spurned him for his iniquity and whoredom, he left no stone unturned, and seduced others of the same stripe as himself in Utah to back up his statements by their letters to the press of New York City. The Government, pressed by the excitement created by these blackguards, gave orders for an expedition, without asking Governor Young if these things were so. When these calumnious reports reached Utah, an express was sent on immediately to Washington, and affidavits were placed before the Administration that quashed every charge made against the authorities there; but did that stop the expedition? Oh, no! How could the Administration look the country in the face for the two millions of dollars they had expended for the expedition, and at the same time admit that the money had been unnecessarily expended—that the alarm was all a hoax? They could not do it, and to keep their own credit good, they have sent on the expedition to break up Mormonism by introducing the whoredoms of corrupt Christianity. The army is intoxicated with the hopes of "wine and women." Their talk on the Plains is of the most voluptuous character—boasting what they'll do, how they will "enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Nothing is heard of on the Plains but corruption and every species of abomination. The Herald recommended early in the summer a large army of young men with that view, and on Monday repeats the hope of seeing Utah yet as corrupt as the cities of the States. Marching troops there is not for the protection of the Federal officers; none ever required any, and none ever saw the necessity of any, but those among them who lived in rioting, drinking, swearing, gambling, and whoreing; but the army was intended as a permanency. The Tribune of Tuesday publishes a letter from the Plains, with the following very significant item:

FORT KEARNEY, Aug. 31.

Companies A and H of the 6th infantry have arrived here to day under the command of Capt. Hendrickson. They have been employed since May as an escort to Lieut. Bryant of the Topographical Engineers, under whose directions a road has been opened from Fort Riley to Bridger's Pass in the Rocky Mountains. It is probable that all reinforcements sent next year to the army in Utah will pass over this road, as it is much shorter than the present route from Leavenworth, by way of Kearney and Laramie. They report that at Bridger's Pass the Mormons had no preparations for opposing the march of troops into Utah, although it is there, if anywhere, that such resistance could be most effectual.

An express has arrived to-day with the news that General Harney and Governor Cumming will start from Fort Leavenworth for this post to-morrow. This early departure of the General helps to remove the doubt of the passage of the army beyond Fort Laramie this year.

Ultimate Fate of the Mormons.

THE news from Utah, increases in terrible and tragic interest. Scenes are being daily enacted there such as no writer of fiction has ever yet portrayed. Hundreds of poor, misguided families have been lured from their distant homes all over Europe, homes of peace and innocence, and have come over, the blind dupes of men pretending to extra sanctity. Drawn into that horrible lair, far away from kindred or protection, scenes are enacted of which humanity trembles and the blood curdles. They are stripped by tithes and all manner of base schemes, of their property, and forced to work one day in ten building the Temple. Their innocent children are corrupted, for their young daughters are nominally married to old men with half a score of wives, and then left to support themselves and their children as they best can. The women are far worse off than the slaves in Turkish harems. As murmuring and discontent have followed, new orders of Priests and Priestesses have been instituted, to allure into complicity those bolder villains who might be dangerous as foes, and a new order of "Destroying Angels" now go about by night, murdering in secret all those more innocent persons whose wrongs lead them to complain or desire even to remove, lest they should inflame the country against them by the story of their wrongs. No one's life is safe. The enmity of a single chief may be sufficient without judge, jury or inquiry, to bring down the vengeance of a host of midnight assassins, who murder in cold blood, like the Thugs in India from the dictates of a devilish fanaticism, and for whom there is neither law nor justice, even if they are discovered. Not Paris in the worst days of the first French Revolution witnessed so complete a prostration of all the the forms of justice—such a perfect reign of terror as seems to be pervading all ranks alike of the Saints and the sinners there, and not the cities on the border of the Dead Sea witnessed a more horrible amount of crime than, by all accounts, seems daily to be perpetrated on the shores of the Great Salt Lake. Never did a course of vice and crime run itself out so soon. It began in a speculative toleration of polygamy, but in circumstances where it might have seemed impossible by the laws of nature ever to have amounted to any great practical question. Settled on farms, without wealth or luxury, all were obliged to work hard for a living, or perish from starvation. And yet the course of crime has run itself out so soon. The very rumor of a small detachment of two thousand United States soldiers to protect the virtuous citizens draws out the long stifled abhorrence of the people, and the weapons are already falling powerless from the hands of the chiefs.

There is no question, that the present idea of Brigam Young and a few of his more devoted followers, is to found a new Church still further in the wilderness, in the event of the expected arrival of United States troops or expulsions by the inhabitants of Salt Lake. So rapid is the train by which one crime leads to another, and the whole to retribution.

It has, perhaps, been well to let all this iniquity ripen to its own ruin, this disaffection blow out into black treason, before proceeding to overawe this miserable refuse of mankind by troops, cannon, and if need be, bloodshed. But now the time of action has arrived, and a proper military force is at once needed in Utah, and a proper Government for this Territory. All agree to the great productiveness and value of the lands thus opened up half-way to California. With a just Government duly administered, and backed in case of necessity by sufficient power to secure at once justice to all, the Territory will fill up immediately with an industrious, enterprising and virtuous population, larger than that of Kansas, who will soon obliterate all marks of the scenes which have polluted these beautiful shores. The preaching of a dozen ministers, and the reaction from the former villainies would render the future inhabitants of Utah more jealous of all infringements of female virtue than any community in the land. The foreign population need this protection. They came to be guarded by our laws, and educated for our citizenship.

The most difficult question is, what to do with a large body of men now ready for any crime, through the agency of Brigham Young. Most of these will seek to remain attached to the fortunes of their leader, and wish to draw off further into the wilderness, and form a new settlement into which they may inveigle foreigners from all parts, and as much worse than Utah, as Utah is than Nauvoo. This must not be suffered, or we shall have troops of worse than Arab robbers and rebels, roving through our plains. Brigham Young ought now to be brought to speedy justice, and put down as a nuisance.

[Philadelphia Dollar Newspaper, Aug. 26.

WE publish the foregoing article from the Philadelphia Dollar Newspaper; and a more malicious, unblushing article of falsehoods was never penned; and the writer, be he whom he may, exhibits the baseness of his own black and perfidious heart. The spirit of murder is manifested in almost every sentence. He shows himself as ignorant in relation to Utah and the Mormons, or their doctrines, and is about as well posted as was Balaam's ass; in fact he does not know or believe half so much, for Balaam's beast did see an angel, and believed it. But this maligner has undertaken to charge an innocent people, whom, in reality, he knows nothing concerning, and who never did him an injury, with all manner of crimes, even murder not excepted. He says "scenes are daily transacted there such as no writer of fiction has ever yet portrayed." What are these scenes transacted—can this base scribbler answer? No, he cannot. Are there any of the scenes enacted in Utah that are perpetrated daily in the cities of the States? Verily no. The Mormons attend to their own business, and invite all others to attend to theirs. He says "poor misguided people there are stripped of all on their arrival in Utah, and their innocent daughters corrupted, &c." We know scores of men in Utah who never had or owned a home during their lives until they emigrated to Utah. Since then they have procured themselves homes and the comforts of life around them; and thousands and tens of thousands there are in the States and in foreign countries this day, who would give all they possess if they were only gathered with the Mormons, and away from the ungodly abominations of Babylon that everywhere surrounds them.

This scribbler talks about corrupting their young daughters. Do we behold the houses of prostitution in Utah, so popular in the cities of the States, where nightly congregate the libertine, the whoremonger and adulterer, where virtue is destroyed, innocence debased, families ruined, disease engendered, murder committed, cyprians insulting you at every corner of the streets? Verily, no. Can the seducer, adulterer, or destroyer of virtue and innocence, walk the streets of the cities of Utah and boast of his hellish deeds? He cannot. Can the prostitute keep her brothel there to lead the young and unwary down to the chambers of death? No, indeed. Do you find innocent infants the fruits of illicit intercourse in the lieu d'aisance and cesspools of the cities of Utah? Do you behold the Model Artists' exhibitions—"admittance 25 cents, and three dollars behind the scenes?" Do you see women picking rags from the gutters, others bloated with intemperance—men and women's vitals consuming with disease, the fruits of prostitution, like in the christian cities of the States? Verily, no. But this immaculate writer is barking about the immorality of the Mormons, when he is over his head and ears in filth, and wallowing in the mire and corruption surrounding him on every side. Yet he is so fanatically blind, he cannot see it, and smell it he cannot, for he is so full of filth, as his writings show, that carrion would have no effect upon his stomach. "Destroying angels" haunt his corrupt conscience, and he thinks no one's life is safe. If the people of Utah had the murderous spirit in their hearts that this base calumniator manifests, exists in his, surely no one's life would be safe. This holy hypocrite talks about the crimes of the Mormons, calling them by every epithet his seared heart can invent, when there is more abomination and crime committed in one day, either in New York or Philadelphia, than was ever known or thought of in Utah. He calls the Mormons a miserable refuse of mankind. We would inform him that a large portion of them are from the States of New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Ohio, &c.—American citizens, sons of Revolutionary sires—men whose shoes this base blackguard is not worthy to black. We are a Jerseyman ourself, and we do not feel like calmly and silently submitting to such insults and base lies from him or any one else, in relation to a people we know to be virtuous, and innocent of the crimes this calumniator charges them with. We have lived in Utah, and know for ourselves. What does this writer know, in reality, concerning the Mormons? Not the first thing. But he is spitting out his spleen and exhibiting a spirit that would gloat and rejoice over shedding the blood of innocence, and crucify the Son of God if he had it in his power—a spirit of intolerance, madness, and frensy, instigated by the devil, who was a murderer from the beginning.

He recommends the "sending of a dozen ministers to Utah to preach to the misguided there, and cause a reaction, and educate the people there for christian citizenship." We answer that he cannot get a minister who dare meet a Mormon on scripture or on any principle of Mormonism; even one of the old Mormon women would put the clergy to flight in five minutes. Furthermore, houses of accommodation would then have to be established in the cities of Utah, to become christianized and educated for our (their) citizenship. For it is a notorious fact, one may go into any Gentile city or town and the more church spires you behold pointing to Heaven, the more houses of assignation will be there, and the more clergy and church members, the greater the number of cyprians. Can any discerning, observing and honest person deny it? He says that "Brigham Young ought now to be brought to speedy justice, and put down as a nuisance." We know Brigham Young is a terror to evil-doers, the corrupt and ungodly; he is the champion of right, justice and truth, and he looks upon his maligners with defiance and contempt, and so do all the Mormons.

We politely recommend this poltroon to go to Utah and assist in carrying out the bloodshed which he so earnestly recommends, and blow off some of the filthy gas that is in him; but we believe him to be too much of a coward, for barking dogs seldom bite.

We are certainly astonished that any journal calling itself respectable, or wishing to be thought so, unless among heathen, should ever disgrace itself in the eyes of all upright people, by admitting and publishing in its columns such a base onslaught against a people who never done the writer or the editor an injury, in any form or manner whatever.

We would inquire—what have the Mormons done? Who have they injured? What laws have they transgressed? Whose rights have they infringed upon or taken away? Who have they robbed or plundered? Where are their treason or rebellion? Are they not loyal to the Government and laws of the United States? Have they ever refused their country's call to help fight her battles? Have they not on all occasions exhibited their loyalty and patriotism? But like American citizens and patriots, they have told corrupt and wicked officials sent among them they would not bear or tolerate their insults and oppression. All the Mormons ask, are the rights and privileges guaranteed unto them by the Constitution, and nothing more. By that sacred instrument they are willing to stand, fight for it, defend it, and die for the support and maintenance of those liberties and immunities guaranteed therein. But when that sacred boon, the legacy of our venerated sires, purchased by the blood of freemen, is trampled into the dust by aspiring demagogues, and the sons of those sires deprived of every privilege and right contained in it, no account of their religion, by the base, intolerant, and proscriptive in power, then the Mormons, like our fathers, think it better to sleep in death than wear the galling chains of oppression and tyranny.

This writer rejoices over the idea of the troops obliterating the Mormons, and no doubt would wish the Mormons to make resistance, in order to have a pretext for carrying the same into execution. However, we anticipate no such difficulty. There is no danger of any, unless the troops and officers sent to Utah should assimilate themselves into a military mob, to ravish, murder, and destroy; then, in that case, they will surely be met, for the Mormons have been plundered, mobbed, driven, and murdered, and deprived of their Constitutional rights and every other right, until they prefer the silent tomb to bearing such oppression much longer, come from whom or what source it may. Then why all this "hue and cry?" Do you behold any of "Bleeding Kansas" editions in Utah? O, no. Kansas is civilized, and becoming christianized quite fast. But this venal scribler cannot see the filth at his own door, but must wreak out his ire against a people that is just as much above him in truth, light, intelligence, virtue and honesty, as noonday is above midnight darkness. But we understand all about it. Political demagoguery, chicanery and charlatanism, with fanaticism, bigotry, intolerance, envy, jealousy, and fear of retribution, combined, are the main springs that incite the base to action against the Mormons. They well know that the Mormons have been robbed, mobbed, plundered, driven, murdered, banished, and deprived of their every right, for the liberty of conscience and their holy religion; and yet they increase and spread, and are growing strong and powerful, and their oppressors and murderers are afraid of retributive justice. Hence, fear and dread takes hold of them by day, and, like Nebuchanazzar of old, their dreams trouble them by night; and they fancy they see Destroying angels, and almost everything else. The Lord said, several years since, that the fear and dread of Zion should be upon all people, and surely it is fulfilling. The Mormons trust in their God to avenge their wrongs, and he will do it in his own due time, and in his own way, notwithstanding the opposition of their enemies. The Mormons have always felt like living at peace with, and blessing their fellow mortals, and doing them good, and teaching them the truth, and leading them in the paths of peace; at the same time they know they have been abused, persecuted, and their rights taken away, and all their love, good will and designs have been tortured into all manner of evil by their enemies. The Mormons wish to see virtue and peace extending, for their mission is one of peace. But we do not believe after being smitten on both cheeks, to turn the other, to have the same thing repeated. We belive in asserting our rights, maintaining and defending them; upholding the laws and Constitution; and whenever we are provoked to a retort, to give it; but never to be the aggressor. We feel like endeavoring to take our own part in any way our enemies can assail us. We will trust in the Lord, and abide our time, live or die. The Mormons are not easily scared, but bold. The eternal truth from heaven which they are in possession of, makes them bold. They know Mormonism is true, and is bound to go ahead and prosper—so howl and yelp on you poor miserable curs. But we calculate that whenever we, our principles, or friends, are attacked to defend our rights and theirs also. The "ultimate fate of Mormonism" will be its extension over the whole earth.

We hereby inform the "Hyena" editor of the New Jersey Signal, at Bordentown, that the foregoing equally applies to him, in reply to his base and bigoted onslaught on the Mormons.

☞ Elders Miner G. Atwood and Moses J. Sneddier are requested to come to New York immediately.

Utah.

WE reported in our last issue the arrival from Utah of Elders S. W. Richards and Geo. G. Snyder in this city, on the evening of the 10th instant; but we then had neither time nor space to say more than that all was well with the Saints in that Territory. They remained one day in St. Louis to attend to business there, and arrived here in twenty-eight days from Great Salt Lake City. They left here for Philadelphia on Monday afternoon, returned next day, and propose leaving for Liverpool via Boston, on Saturday. These faithful men of God are on an important mission to the Church scattered abroad among the nations. They enjoy richly the spirit of the work assigned them, and are destined to return to the home of the Saints with the satisfaction of not having run in vain. For every work which the Lord has set His hand to accomplish, His spirit has ever prepared the way, and left no dubity on the minds of those who kept His commandments and lived in the light of the Holy Ghost—and so is it to-day.

By these brethren we have received the Deseret News for July 22 and 29 and Aug. 5th and 12th, from which we extract the following:—

The 24th of July in the Tops of the Mountains.

ON Wednesday the 22d inst., numerous teams could be seen wending their way by the different routes to the mouth of Big Cottonwood kanyon, the company being privileged to camp for that night at any points below the gate in the kanyon. On the 23d, Prest. Brigham Young led the van of the long line of carriages and wagons, which easily passed up the now comparatively smooth ascent, made so at great expense by the Big Cottonwood Lumber Company, and began to reach the camp ground at the lake at about 11 A. M. By good time in the afternoon all the company, numbering 2587 persons with 464 carriages and wagons, 1028 horses and mules and 332 oxen and cows, were encamped and busily engaged in their several arrangements for the morrow.

Captain Ballo's Band, the Nauvoo Brass Band, the Springville Brass Band, the Ogden City Brass Band, and the Great Salt Lake City and the Ogden City Martial Bands were in attendance; also the 1st company of light artillery, under the command of Adjt.-Gen. James Ferguson, a detachment of four platoons of Life Guards and one platoon of the Lancers under the command of Col. R. T. Burton, and one company of Light Infantry under the command of Captain John W. Young.

Col. J. C. Little, marshal of the day.

At 4 P. M. the Martial Bands serenaded the camp.

At sunset notes from a bugle summoned the Saints to an eminence near the centre of the camp ground, when Prest. Brigham Young made a few remarks, recounting the mercies of God to this people in delivering them from the power of their enemies, in making the desert places blossom like the rose and the sterile plains yield luscious fruits and golden grain, in loading the leaves of the trees and shrubbery with honey dew and in increasing our flocks and herds in a marvellous manner. After Prest. Young had concluded his remarks, Prest. Heber C. Kimball offered a prayer of thanksgiving unto God for his goodness to his people, prayed for Israel and Israel's enemies, and renewedly dedicated and consecrated unto God the ground, the waters, the timber, the rocks and all the elements pertaining to the stream upon whose head waters we were assembled to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the entrance of the pioneers into these valleys.

Three spacious boweries, with plank floors, had been provided by the B. C. Lumber Company, and a large number passed the evening in the joyous dance.

July 24th, each one began to enjoy the privileges of the occasion as best suited their several tastes and feelings, in accordance with the order of the day, giving liberty to all to do as they pleased, occupying their time and opportunities in a manner the most conducive to the greatest amount of happiness and comfort.

The different bands played at intervals throughout the day, and greatly added to the zest of the varied sources of enjoyment.

At morning assembly the choir sang, "On the mountain tops appearing." Prayer by Elder George A. Smith. Prest. Kimball gave a few instructions for the government of the company in their exercises during the day, and Prest. Wells said that on account of the large number of people, Prest. Young wished them to attend to prayers at their several tents.

The stars and stripes were unfurled on two of the highest peaks in sight of the camp and on the tops of two of the tallest trees.

At 20 minutes past nine a.m., three rounds were fired from a brass howitzer, for the First Presidency of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints and our rights and independence. At 15 minutes past 10 a.m., three rounds were fired for the "Hope of Israel." Captain John W. Young's company of Light Infantry were paraded and elicited admiration and astonishment from all beholders. This company numbers fifty boys ranging from 10 to 12 years of age, and was furnished with tasteful uniform by Governor Young, and truly they are the "Hope of Israel."

At about noon, Bishop A. O. Smoot, Elders Judson Stoddard and O. P. Rockwell and Judge E. Smith rode into camp, the two former from the States in 20 days.

At about sunset the camp assembled for prayers, when Prest. Wells made a few remarks in relation to the latest tidings from the States, upon the order of leaving the ground in the morning, and concluded with prayer. Songs by Bro's. Poulter, Dunbar, McAllister and Maiben commenced the evening's exercises, after which dancing and general hilarity continued to a late hour.

On the morning of the 25th the company began to vacate the ground by day break, every one apparently gratified with the privileges they had been so blessed in enjoying. G. D. Watt, Reporter.

The inhabitants of other settlements had their celebrations and rejoicings in their own peculiar mountain style—processions in which "Zion's Sons" and "Silver Greys" (the aged fathers,) the virgin "Daughters of Zion" and honored "Mothers in Israel," appeared in their best and gayest attire; the gentlemen carrying flags, with appropriate mottoes, and the ladies with boquets of such flowers as their young gardens have produced. We have before us the reports from a number of settlements, from which we conclude that our brethren had an excellent time throughout the Territory. The dawn of that happy day was in every settlement saluted by "a discharge of ordnance" or musketry, and brass bands paraded early the streets. The reports of the last 24th of July show that every settlement has now its "Brass Band," and to that several of them have added a "Martial Band." The proceedings in every place were conducted with the utmost propriety. At their assemblies the smile of the Lord was asked to be upon them during the day, and after all had enjoyed themselves, grateful hearts returned to Him their humble offerings of praise for the liberty they enjoyed to serve Him according to His good-will and pleasure.

At Kaysville the Saints were entertained with music, short speeches, and a dinner "provided by the fair sisters of the ward." As a general thing no such parties pass over without an expression of sentiment in the form of toasts, which, by the bye, are as near as can be the general feeling of the community, and when read by the ready scribe who gives them shape on paper, are heartily endorsed by the multitude with a vigorous Amen.

As evidence of the feelings of the inhabitants of the valleys and mountains of Utah, the notice of a few toasts from the settlements may not be inopportune. At this settlement celebration the following toasts were offered:—

The social institutions of Utah—May they continue to operate until the world is regenerated.

Brigham Young—May the rays of eternal truth as revealed to him by the Holy Ghost, spread through the world, dispersing the clouds of ignorance and planting in the hearts of the honest the germ of endless lives.

Zion—A beacon light to the world.

At Lehi city "the Pioneers" and "Mormon Battalion" with "Captain Spicer's company of Infantry" made quite an appearance in the procession. The following toasts were read and heartily endorsed:—

The Day we Celebrate—Anniversary of the dawn of true liberty; may it grow brighter and brighter until tyranny and oppression will cease to exist.

Constitution of the United States—Boon of Heaven trampled under foot by men.

Inconsistency—Uncle Sam complaining of ill treatment from the mother country and handing out the same to his own offspring.

Truth—Where is it to be found? Echo—in the mountains.

The Mormon Leaders—their Union and their Peculiar Institutions—The first the outsiders couldn't imitate if they would; the second, they wouln't if they could; the third, they durst not for fear of their ladies.

Alpine city had a "company of Life Guards with Muskets" in the procession and seems to have had quite a good use of them, considerable powder was consumed in the "firing at daybreak," "loud peals at sunrise" and "a heavy fire" when the Bishop joined the procession. After addresses and songs, the last of which was "the Mormons are the happiest set that can be found in the world" three toasts were read:—

Mormonism—A plurality of wives, a plurality of worlds and a plurality of intelligence to occupy them.

Nauvoo Legion—Defenders of the Bee Hive.

Pure Patriotism—Willing to serve the country, not salary nor party.

The folks in Provo city had quite a time. Capt. Nuttall's company of infantry led of the procession, followed by the Brass Band, the dignitaries of the place, a chaplain and reporter, "Mormon Battalion" "Pioneers of 1847," "Officers of the Nauvoo Legion" and 500 Sunday school children—conducted by their teachers, and other citizens with Captain Thomas' Company brought up the rear. After the procession came to a halt and got "comfortably seated under the Bowery," music and addresses were here also the order of the Bowery entertainment.

The Toasts:—

The Mormon Battalion—May they be found as true to their God as they have proved themselves true to their country.

Brigham Young—First statesman in Israel; his governmental policy is only equalled by his judgement as God's Prophet.

The 24 Young Ladies—

May their forms, enshrouded in white to-day,
Be as pure and as spotless till time wears away;
'Tis the dress of the angel as worn high above,
May they also take pattern in union and love.

To conclude the day's rejoicing the Quadrille Band gave a splended concert in the City Hall.

At Nephi city they had a military review in addition to the procession. On their arrival at the Bowery the people were addressed by several of the Elders. The following toasts were read:—

The Deseret News—The organ of President Brigham Young, played by a skilful hand.

Editors John Taylor, Erastus Snow and George Q. Cannon—May the Snow storm blow, the Cannon roar and the Taylor cut, until the gain-sayers of Zion are silenced.

Songs and dancing closed the exercises of the day.

We are forced to conclude our summary of the 24th of July by a notice of the celebration at Manti, which, though among the small settlements, had quite as "big a time" as some of the "greater places."

At sunrise, many of the citizens, under the command of Captain S. R. Gilford, assembled on the Temple Block and fired a few rounds with small arms; music in attendance; marched through town, accompanied by the Committee of Arrangements and the Marshal of the day.

At ten A. M., the people assembled at the Council-House and formed into procession, under the direction of the Marshal, and proceeded through the city, and afterwards returned to the Council-House, where they were addressed by several Elders.

Music and singing, at intervals, and the following toasts:

The Day We Celebrate—May it soon be followed by the ushering in of the more complete and glorious redemption of Zion.

Those that Celebrate at the Head Waters of Big Cottonwood with Brigham Young at their Head—

May this day be by them celebrated with joy,
And nothing appear their peace to annoy.
May the Angel of Peace, to the front and the rear,
Bear them tidings of joy that redemption is near.

The Fair Daughters of Zion—May they ever be pure, in virtue and truth may they ever endure.

Brigham Young and Council—

May their wisdom be great and their councils free,
Till the wise Virgins all join the great jubilee.

The Sisters of Manti—May the jewels of their adorning be like those of the "Roman matron," even the strong arms and noble hearts of their brave sons, and the virtue and intelligence of their fair daughters.

The Little Girls—May the principles of "Mormonism" grow with their growth, and their motto be virtue, modesty and truth.

Brave Sons and Fair Daughters of Utah—Up to the world, and can't be matched in the lower regions.

The Sons and Daughters of Manti—May they live long on the earth to defend the rights of the priesthood, and become as numerous as the sands upon the sea shore.

By the foregoing summary of the rejoicings on the 24th of July last in Utah, and the sentiments there expressed in their toasts, the world may judge whether the Utonians are deserving of the calumny that has been heaped upon them, and worthy of the visitation of that army scourge—2500 men let loose among them.

Notice to our Agents and Subscribers.

With this number we shall discontinue the publication of The Mormon for the present, in order to act in other matters pertaining to the welfare of the saints in the States. We wish no one to think that they are imposed upon in this matter. President John Taylor made known the conditions to all the subscribers to The Mormon, in that paper under date of January 24. 1857, in relation to its continuance, in the following words: "It may be that, if we are not sustained we may quit the publication of the paper, we don't think we shall; but if we do, we shall return no money to any body, and those who do not wish to subscribe even on these terms, can withhold. We have enough of liabilities already on our hands associated with this publication, in defending the rights of the saints, their immunities, and their priviliges in the States, and we do not feel disposed to assume any more."

These are the conditions the present volume of The Mormon was continued under. However, if it is considered wisdom or necessary hereafter to continue the publication, our present subscribers can be furnished with their regular numbers, commencing where the present number terminates.

All our Agents, or subscribers indebted to this office for The Mormon, are requested to make immediate payments. Also the Presidents over Branches of the Church will see that the weekly, and monthly donations, together with the Conference Funds, are collected up to September 27, and remitted to us immediately in order that we may settle up the accounts of the office. After that date The Mormon Fund will discontinue; but the Conference Fund will continue under the directions of President Cannon, of the Philadelphia Conference, and President Clinton, of the New York Conference; as we purpose continuing the office in New York for the present, for the transction of business, pertaining to the Church, we expect to stay here until next spring, as the duties dwelling upon us, will necessarily detain us. Our address will be as usual Box 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. Appleby, President of the Church &c., in the Eastern and Middle States.

SUMMARY.

Having published so much from Utah in this issue, which we consider it our duty to do, in view of the proability of misrepresentation about Utah's relations with the Administration, we are necessarily prevented from giving our usual summary of outside news. We have likewise been forced to set aside considerable correspondence from the Elders. We have this week received letters from the Canadas, from England, from Switzerland and from Denmark which we intended publishing; but can only now say that the spirit breathed by the Elders everywhere is encouraging. They are valliant for the truth, and rejoice in the God of their salvation. We thank our numerous correspondents for past favors, for the part they have taken to render The Mormon interesting by their contributions. The summary of our news is simply—"Zion is gathering her sons and daughters as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings." Her people rejoice more and more in the salvation of Israel.

The news abroad is little interesting. Confusion reigns in the nations. Peace and war, war and peace. India is a hard affair for England. At home the same confusion among parties as abroad. This morning another terrible tale is related in our city. The steamship Central America, which left Havana on Tuesday for this port with 525 passengers and $1,600,000 in specie, from California, exclusive of what money was in the hands of passengers, has gone down into the sea. One hundred persons only have been rescued from a watery grave. It casts a deep gloom over the city. Considerable losses on the coast during the week.

Washington, Sept. 3d.

Utah is much the sharpest thorn in the Executive chaplet. Kansas is not permitted to be a subject of severe anxiety at the White House, for the Cabinet is a unit on the position freely declared by the President from the period of his inauguration.

"Congress and the Constitution will settle the Kansas question without bloodshed," has been his constant reply to all his volunteer addressers on this point. Governor Walker wrote not long since to a personal friend in these words: "I apprehend some attempt from the violent demagogues of both extremes, to create a difficulty when the election comes off, but I think I shall be able to put them all in the wrong by a strict adherence to the law and the Constitution. My friends and the country may depend upon my doing my duty, my whole duty, and nothing but my duty, and I have no shadow of fear as to the result."

The Cabinet is not so clearly a unit on the Utah policy. Two leading members—the Attorney-General and the Secretary of the Interior—are said to be strongly in favor of letting the Mormons "severely alone," in the belief that the evil will cure itself more safely and thoroughly than it can be effected by the demoralizing presence of a large body of United States troops.

Gen. Scott will not answer for the successful military occupation of Utah with less than double the force of our entire standing army, with all the appointments in the extravagant ratio in which his line of invasion was supplied in Mexico. The requisitions for that service footed up to three times the cost of the French and British force in the Crimea, in proportion to the force employed, and five times as great as the thousand men of Napoleon's army in Egypt, and these were instances of extraordinary military expenditure. The President may well doubt whether the men who are so anxious to get the United States engaged in a war of extermination with Utah will not be the first to cry out against the outlay of from fifty to a hundred millions of dollars, for the slaughter of the Mormons.

If Quarter-Master General Jessup had a thousand camels to organize in the transport service, and to carry mountain howitzers in the mountain defiles, which no other animal or class of artillery can penetrate, something might be done in the way of supplying our men, and enabling them to fight when they got to Utah; but no such hope is entertained.

Meantime, Governor Brigham Young writes that he is as ready to lay down the rank he has received from the Federal Government as he was to accept it, and says he only asks for his people "the protection of the laws," while they respect and obey the U. S. Constitution. It is probable this profession of fealty will be put to the test by Gov. Cummings, and that nothing will be done until all legal and peaceful means are fairly tried; and if they fail, the result will be known in time for Mr. Buchanan to lay all the facts before Congress. The long session will give ample time for this, and Congress can act with all the facts before it.

A Mormon Rider at the Capitol.

Washington, Sept. 15, 1857.

I have met, many times this summer, an elderly man of singularly quiet, yet intelligent mien, haunting the library of Congress on its open days. His tall, erect figure, and well-turned head, passed the door with a silent bow almost as regularly as it was opened, but no one could tell me his name, for, I confess, something in him awakened my curiosity.

The other day, as we sat side-by-side at the library table, I discovered we were pursuing the same train of reading—the records of the early missionaries on this continent, and the Book of Mormon. On this last point we opened conversation, and to my astonishment, I found this well-informed man a Mormon convert, and even then, preparing to leave home and country, and travel, at his own cost and very great sacrifice, as a missionary of that strange faith in foreign lands.

I am no bigot, but I could not conceal my astonishment at finding such a man wedded to such doctrines, and something to that effect escaped my lips.

"The Hebrews said the same of St. Paul," was the Mormon's quiet reply, "and the clamor raised against the patriarchal institutions of Utah is no louder than that which heathen Rome raised against the customs of the early Christians."

As I have no talent for controversy, I waived discussions of faith to inquire into the political complexion of affairs in Utah, where it seems, he had spent a year in religious and social inquiry.

"There are letters in this city," I observed to him, "which state that Brigham Young will resign the Governorship and set a sincere example of obedience to the laws and Constitution of the United States; but there are also other letters which say that he is preparang to resist them and to maintain his power at all risks. Which are true?"

"The bees of Deseret will share their well-earned honey with their friends—but they have stings for their enemies," was his singular and evasive reply.

"I do not catch your meaning, sir," I observed, in answer to the remark which had been twice repeated.

"I mean that those who come to us in the truth of the law and in the justice of the Constitution will be safe and respected, but enemies will be met like enemies."

"But who is the judge of that? the United States officials, or Brigham Young?" I inquired.

"The law and facts shall decide for us before the country, when the cause is tried at the bar of Congress."

"Perhaps the people of Utah will leave the question to the law, and not make an appeal to arms?"

"If you come with the sword, you will be met with the sword," said the Mormon in the same low and even tones. "Those who were men enough to create a flourishing State in the howling wilderness, feel able to maintain their rights against all the United States can send to put them down."

These expressions sounded so remarkable under the roof of the Capitol, that I thought them worth repeating to you.

Signs of the Times.

IMMENSE SEIZURE OF OBSCENE WORKS—ACKERMAN AGAIN IN TROUBLE.

Yesterday morning Officers Walsh, Burchell, Davis, Willets, Houston and Delay, of the Court of General Sessions, made an important seizure of the obscene publications of the man, George Ackerman, the publisher of the filthy sheet called Venus' Miscellany.

Ackerman, it will be remembered, was arrested last week, and brought before Justice Osborne at the Special Sessions on Saturday last. On his promising not to offend again, the mildly-disposed Justice fined him $50 only, notwithstanding the remonstrances of Rev. C. J. Warren. The leniency of Justice Osborne found its fitting climax yesterday, when the next issue of Venus' Miscellany was seized on the printing press of Messrs. Wells, No. 14 Frankfort Street. In the publishing office, Nos. 22 and 24 Frankfort Street, the doors being broken open, seven thousand copies of the Miscellany were found, together with twenty different works of the vilest character, comprising several thousand volumes. The list of the subscribers to these works was found. It is a disgraceful fact, that out of 3,300 subscribers, nearly one-half were females. Females also were employed in stitching the sheets of the works and in coloring the plates. According to a statement in the number of the Miscellany which was seized, it was the intention of Ackerman to have removed the publication office out of the State, perhaps Jersey City or Hoboken. Several hundred parcels of the papers were found ready for mailing, and addressed to various booksellers and news agents throughout the country. The names of these parties are before us. Contributions to the literary contents of the paper, in many cases written by females, and of the most obscene description, were also found. Ackerman's ledger, on examination, showed that his profits in this nefarious business could not have been less than $12,000 a year. As the Miscellany could only be obtained by actual subscription, and through the Post Office, the names of the debased wretches—and they include parties of great reputation in society—who indulged in the filthy luxury, are known to the authorities.

So large was the stock of these abominable productions, that the police were employed all the day in transporting them to the office of the Deputy Superintendent. The pressman who was employed in working off the paper, and two boys who were feeding the machine, were arrested. The engravers of the plates to the volumes are known, and will probably be taken into custody. Ackerman, who published the Miscellany, under the name of Ramerio, has fled the city.

Great credit is due to Officer Walsh and his coadjutors for the able manner in which they effected this seizure. To Mr. Walsh belongs the credit of being one of the most efficient officers of the whole Police force.—[N. Y. Daily Times, Aug. 15.

[We give the above place in our paper, as our readers may be blissfully ignorant of what goes on in this christian city. The Herald gives a much lengthier account which exposes the extent of the infamy practiced here as it ought to be; but our space is too limited. Oh, Sodom, it will be well with thee when New York is in hades, for thy crimes were never half as numerous.—Ed. Mormon.]

More Emigrants.

By letter from President Orson Pratt, we learn that a few saints sailed for this port in the Dreadnought, from Liverpool on the 26th ult.

While emigration is named, we would add that the saints in this country will do well to correspond with us before they take further steps towards emigrating their friends from England.

From the Plains.

Elder Musser writes us from Fort Laramie, Aug. 19th, from which we make the following extracts:

"We are now within about 7 miles of the above named Fort under circumstances truly prosperous. Thus far we have been blessed beyond anticipation or expectation. We have lost but one ox and left but one wagon, and that an old one not worth hauling half the way.

"General health prevails and a unanimity of feeling exists throughout. This last, you know, is a striking or prominent characteristic of the Latter Day Saints. Yesterday we unanimously deputed Elder W. G. Young to precede the emigration companies to the valley, that he may be enabled to report at head-quarters their exact position and circumstances, and that they may in time receive succour if necessary.

"I regret to have to mention several deaths, and the loss of a number of cattle, through stampedes, in Captain Martin's and Captain Hofheins' companies. The first of these companies lost a number of cattle in the stampede, so laming the train that several families were obliged to return to Genoa. Bros. Latey, Greener, Gillis and Keates, with their families and friends, were those that returned.

"Brother E. Howard, from Sheffield, aged sixty-five, and a daughter of Sister Banford, aged four years, were the sufferers. They were interred in a double grave which formed a melancholy feature of the fatal spot where the tragic scene occurred. A Sister Rogers, and a daughter of Sister Turner's were seriously injured, so much so that their recovery was hardly looked for. Captain Hofheins' train lost upwards of thirty head of cattle. No human suffering I believe. The Hand-Cart Companies are, as far as we can learn, going along pretty well, but slower than was expected.

"Several fresh graves mark the steps of the Angel of Death amongst them. I think we noticed but three or four. The names of three I remember well, as follows: Brother James Reader, late from St. Louis, formerly from England; Brother Peter Hanson, a Dane, and a young female by the name of Emerretta Green.

"We learn that the company of soldiers, set apart to straighten the Utonians out, have lost 800 head of cattle, through stampedes; 60 head had been recovered. It is reported that Gen. Harney, their commander, has been remanded for shooting one of his subordinates, a lieutenant, in a duel."

degree interfere with the operations of the Clubs. And we are informed that they have already shoved several under the ice, tied up and severely whipped others, banished some, and otherwise killed and maltreated those who cross their plans. Is not all that law-abiding and highly praiseworthy? But they are not "Mormons." Why not send troops to Nebraska, where Congress is openly legislated over by a Territoral Assembly and the laws set at defiance? Why were not troops sent to California, where downright insurrection and rebellion have strode rampantly over all law? Oh, they were not "Mormons!" Why are not troops sent to New York, Baltimore, Washington and other cities, when the civil authorities are wantonly scouted and blood lawlessly shed by violence reddens their streets? There are no "Mormons" engaged in those pastimes of civilization!! And last, why send any troops to Utah, where all is peace, industry, law, order, virtue, sobriety, and the daily observance of the principles pertaining to both temporal and spiritual welfare and salvation? Oh, solely for the very reason that they are "Mormons," and their upright and virtuous course is so unlike our deeds of darkness that we are determined to make them as lawless, bloodthirsty and rotten as we are, or exterminate them if we have the power.

To pave the way for the accomplishment of so laudable (?) a design, and, if possible, to goad us to some over act that can be seized upon for a plausible pretext, they persist in the barbarous colonial usage of thrusting strange and outside officers upon us, contrary to our lawful and oft-expressed and unanimous choice, and the majority of whom are most well known to be utterly base and unworthy. President Jefferson, in his address already quoted from, specifies, "a jealous care of the right of election by the people" to be one of "the essential principles of our Government." But, within a few days, over fifty-six years from that date, and in the same professed Republic, at least one of President Buchanan's Cabinet has styled our Legislative Assembly disrespectful and threatening, because, forsooth, they plainly though most respectfully, set forth their Constitutional rights in the matter of officers for Utah, and that too most strictly in accordance with the teachings of Thomas Jefferson, the great father of the party now in power. But what better can be expected from such pigmy sons of Revolutionary sires, who in so few short years have sunk to so low a depth of degradation. Halloo in the ears of the deaf, or preach repentance to the devil, all you who have hopes of success in such a course; but for our part we do not look for justice from a power which has striven all the day long, both secretly and openly, to exterminate us from the earth.

And now, after having briefly sketched a portion of Governmental usage to "Mormons," we actually wish our Government to cease beating about the bush, and to frankly and manfully, if they have any manhood, proclaim to us and the world what course they intend to pursue towards the Latter-Day Saints. If you are too sneaking and cowardly to show your hand, but persist in the same oppressive and suspicious conduct you have heretofore, except during the Administration of President Fillmore and partially that of President Pierce, you can but expect that the ardor of our patriotism will at some period cool, for there is always a limit to the human endurance of injustice and tyranny.

If you intend to continue the appointment of certain officers, we respectfully suggest that you appoint actually intelligent and honorable men who will wisely attend to their own duties, and send them unaccompanied by troops, which you yourselves well know are of no lawful use here, and your officers will be respected and treated strictly according to their own acts and merits, as you also well know has always been the case, except that we did not hang up some of the infernal scoundrels you have heretofore sent, as they most richly deserved. And if you will not receive this fair counsel, but persist in sending us officials from the tag, rag and bobtail of whore-houses, grog-shops and gambling-hells, we shall take the Yankee liberty of guessing your kind (?) intentions towards us, and shall also take the liberty, for the first time, of using that class of officials strictly in accordance with their deserts.

Should you elect to send the last named class, and should they venture to come and act out their devilish natures, they will really need a far larger body-guard than 2,500 soldiers. And not only to prevent your sending an ignorant soldiery into trouble, and to a region whose manners and society are not congenial to them, but also that such officials may have a characteristic and reasonably numerous guard, we respectfully suggest that you invite to that service particularly all the hireling priests, editors, and other infernal liars, who have for years been pouring their venom upon us, and striving to banish "Constitutional principles" and all saving truth from the earth. It would be rather amusing to see how that class of characters would appear at the meeting, for they have been exceedingly diligent in their abortive attempts to successfully charge error, crime, or outrage, to the doctrine and conduct of the Saints. And when foiled in lie upon lie, they have renewed the attack, with a zeal worthy of a better cause, and pertinaciously continued to make lies their refuge.

Why cannot our Government at least listen to the counsel of Jefferson and be "wise and frugal"—"restrain men from injuring one another, and leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry, and improvement?" Why not wisely expend the immense national revenue in paying off the national debt, in making railroads, improving rivers and harbors, settling the public domain, and in using every proper method to promote the peace, welfare and prosperity of a great people? But let the wicked take what course they may, and though the President, his Cabinet, Congress, and others recklessly break and trample upon the Constitution, that will not alter the course of the people in Utah, for it is our duty to stand by and preserve it though all others forsake it; and most manfully and faithfully will that duty be fulfilled.

We are fond of peace and will have it, even though we have to fight for it—as did the Quaker in Connecticut. An old gentleman went from New York to Connecticut on a visit, and while there he met a man who abused him. When he returned to his home he told his son of the bad treatment he had met with, and described to him the person who had misused him and the place where it occurred. The son was a strong man and a fighting character, and after brooding awhile over the subject, he started for the place described. Upon his arrival he met a man dressed in Quaker costume, who very well filled the description, and he at once accused him of having at a certain time grossly abused his father. The Quaker stoutly denied the accusation, but the son persisted and told him that he was bound to whip him. The Quaker, finding remonstrance and his protestations of innocence to be in vain, laid off his coat and hat and said, "Lie there, religion, until I give this fellow a whipping"—which he did most effectually.

19. ¶ Woe to the multitude of many people, which make a noise like the noise of the seas; and to the rushing of nations, that make a rushing like the rushing of mighty waters!

13. The nations shall rush like the rushing of many waters; but God shall rebuke them, and they shall flee far off and shall be chased as the chaff of the mountains before the wind, and like a rolling thing before the whirlwind.

14. And behold at eveningtide trouble; and before the morning he is not. This is the portion of them that spoil us, and the lot of them that rob us.—Isaiah xvii.

Conference Notice.

The Semi-Annual Conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, comprising the New York Conference, will be held at the Saints' Hall, Brookes' Assembly Rooms, No. 351 Broome Street, New York, on Sabbath, October 11th, 1857, commencing at 10½ o'clock A. M.

Traveling Elders and Presidents of Branches in said conference who can make it convenient, are expected to meet in council at the residence of President Appleby in Williamsburgh, on the Saturday evening previous, at seven P. M. They will please come prepared with a report of their labors, and of the situation of the Saints committed to their charge.

All those who cannot attend, will send in a report of their respective Branches, &c., previous to that time, directed to W. J. Silver, Box 3957 Post Office, New York.

Jeter Clinton,
President of the New York Conference.

Conference at Philadelphia.

The Traveling Elders and Presidents of Branches, comprising the Philadelphia Conference, are expected to meet in Council on Saturday, October 3, at 7 P. M., at the house of Elder William Wright—the first house in Weaver street, below Coates, between Fifth and Sixth streets, Philadelphia. They will please come prepared with a report of their labors and of the situation of the Saints committed to their charge.

The Semi-Annual Conference will be held the following day, October 4th, at the Saints' Hall, commencing at half-past ten A. M.

Angus M. Cannon, President.

Notice.

Letters on business pertaining to the Eastern Mission must be, in future, addressed to President William I. Appleby, Box No. 3957 Post Office, New York. Letters for Elder Stenhouse can be addressed there likewise.

In consequence of discontinuing this paper, and at an early day, vacating this office, no more letters or newspapers can be received here or at our private box. Our friends will please take notice and order no letters addressed to our care or to our box; but for the persons named in this issue.

THE MORMON.

A Short Account of the Faith and Doctrines of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

We believe in God, the Eternal Father, and in his Son Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Ghost, who bears record of them for ever.

We believe that all mankind, through the transgression of our first parents, were brought under the curse and penalty of transgression; but that through the sufferings, death, and atonement of Jesus Christ, all are to be redeemed from any effects of original transgression; that as they were placed under a penalty without any act of their own, so they were delivered from it precisely on the same terms. "For as by the offence of one judgment came upon ALL men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon ALL men unto the justification of life." Rom. v. 18.

We believe that little children are innocent, and not under transgression; that they are incapable of obeying any law, not believing good or evil; and Jesus says, "Of such are the kingdom of heaven; but then, when they arrive at years of maturity, and know good from evil, and are capable of obeying or disobeying a law; if they then transgress, they will b condemned for breaking a known law.

We believe that no man will be condemned for not obeying a law that he does not know; and that consequently millions of the human family who have never had the gospel, are better off than those who have had that privilege, and disobeyed it. That mankind will be judged according to what they have, and not according to that they have not done "according to the deeds done in the body."

We believe that faith in God, and in the sufferings, death and atonement of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and in his resurrection and ascension on high, and in the Holy Ghost, which is given to all who obey the gospel, and is one of the first conditions.

That the next is to repent of—to confess, and to turn away from their sins, and make restitution to all whom they have injured, as far as it is in their power.

That the third is to be baptized by immersion in water, in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, "for remission of sins." And that this ordinance must be performed by one having authority, or otherwise it is of no avail.

The four is, to receive the laying on of hands, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. And this ordinance must also be administered by the Apostles, or Elders, whom the Lord Jesus has called to lay on hands, nor then is it of any advantage except to those persons who have complied with the afore-named three conditions.

We believe that the Holy Ghost is the same now, as it was in the apostolic days formerly, and that when a church is organized, it is their privilege to have all the gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit.

"'Such, for instance, as the gifts of revelation, prophecy, visions, the ministry of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands in the name of Jesus, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient saints.' We believe that inspired apostles and prophets, together with all the officers as mentioned in the New Testament, are necessary to be in the Church in these days.

"We believe that there has been a general and awful apostacy from the religion of the New Testament, so that all the known world have been left for centuries without the Church of Christ among them; without a priesthood authorized of God to administer ordinances; that every one of the churches have perverted the gospel; some in one way and some in another. For instance, almost every church has done away 'immersion for remission of sins.' Those few who have practiced it for remission of sins, have done away the ordinance of the laying on of hands' upon baptized believers for the gift of the Holy Ghost. Again, the few who have practiced the last ordinance have perverted the first, or have done away the ancient gifts, powers and blessings which flow from the Holy Spirit, or have said to inspired apostles and prophets, we have no need of you in the body in these days. Those few, again, who have believed in and contended for the miraculous gifts and powers of the Holy Spirit, have perverted the ordinances or done them away. Thus, all the churches preach false doctrines and pervert the gospel, and instead of having authority from God to administer its ordinances, they are under the curse of God for perverting it. Paul says, Gal. i. 8, 'Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.'

"We believe that there are a few sincere, honest and humble persons who are striving to do according to the best of their understanding; but, in many respects, they err in doctrine because of false teachers and the precepts of men, and that they will receive the fullness of the gospel with gladness as soon as they hear it."

We believe in the Bible, the Book of Mormon, and in living and continued revelation; but we also believe that no new revelation will contradict the old.

"The gospel in the 'Book of Mormon' is the same as that in the New Testament, and is revealed in great plainness, so that no one that reads it can misunderstand its principles. It has been revealed by the angel, to be preached as a witness to all nations, first to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews, then cometh the downfall of Babylon. Thus fulfilling the vision of John, which he beheld on the Isle of Patmos, Rev. xiv. 6, 7, 8, 'And I saw,' says John, 'another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying, with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters. And there followed another angel saying, Babylon is fallen, is fallen, that great city, because she made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication.'

"Many revelations and prophecies have been given to this church since its rise, which have been printed and sent forth to the world. These also contain the gospel in great plainness, and instructions of infinite importance to the Saints. They also unfold the great events that await this generation; the terrible judgments to be poured forth upon the wicked, and the blessings and glories to be given to the righteous. We believe that God will continue to give revelations by visions, by the ministry of angels, and by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, until the saints are guided into all truth."

"We believe that wherever the people enjoy the religion of the New Testament, there they enjoy visions, revelations, the ministry of angels, &c. And that wherever these blessings cease to be enjoyed, there they also cease to enjoy the religion of the New Testament.

"We believe that God has raised up this church, in order to prepare a people for his second coming in the clouds of heaven, in power, and great glory; and that then the saints who are asleep in their graves will be raised, and reign with him on earth a thousand years."

We believe that great judgments await the nations of the earth, on account of their wickedness, and that when the gospel shall have been sufficiently proclaimed, if they reject it, they will be overthrown and destroyed; that plagues, pestilence and famine will be multiplied upon them; that thrones will be cast down, empires overthrown, and nations destroyed; that when the Spirit of God ceases to restrain the people, the world will be full of blood, carnage and desolation; that peace will be taken from the earth, and from among all people, religious and irreligious. "It shall be as with the people, so with the priest," &c. Isa.

We believe that the Lord will gather his people from among all nations, unto a land of peace, "and give them pastors after his own heart, who shall feed them with knowledge and understanding," and they shall be the only people upon the earth that shall not be at war with one another."

"We believe that the ten tribes of Israel, with the dispersed of Judah, shall soon be restored to their own lands, according to the covenants which God made with their ancient fathers, and that when this great work of restitution shall take place, the power of God shall be made manifest in signs, and wonders, and mighty deeds far exceeding anything that took place in their exodus from Egypt. Jerusalem will be rebuilt, together with a glorious temple, and the Lord shall visit them also, as well as his saints in Zion. In that day, the name of the Lord shall become great unto the ends of the earth, and all nations shall serve and obey him, for the wicked shall have perished out of the earth."

We believe in all principles of truth that have been revealed; in all that is now being revealed, and are prepared to receive all that God will reveal.

We believe that the gospel now being preached by the Latter Day Saints is to call the honest in heart out of Babylon, "that they partake not of her sins, nor receive of her plagues."

We believe in morality, chastity, purity, virtue, and honesty; and wish to promote the happiness of our fellow men.

Aux Elders et aux Saints, en Canada, en France, en Suisse, en Italie, et dans les Iles de la Manche.

Bien-aimés frères, je désire, en commençant cette publication, vous adresser quelques paroles. Le Seigneur, dans sa bonté et sa miséricorde, a jugé convenable de restaurer au monde l'Evangile primitif, dans toute la simplicité, la beauté et la pureté qu'il avait autrefois, parmi les chrétiens des premiers temps, aux jours de Jésus et de ses Apôtres.

Les sages, les savants, les gens pieux, le philosophe, le législateur, l'ecclésiastique et le chrétien ont été à la recherche de quelque chose, pour améliorer la condition de l'homme; mais, malgré leurs recherches et leurs plans divers, le monde marche sans changement et sans régénération; la contention, le trouble, la perplexité et la misère couvrent la terre. Et tout ce que les hommes ont fait pour régénérer le monde, ne montre que plus clairement leur folie et leur impuissance. Et malgré tous les efforts, le monde religieux, moral et politique, ne fait qu'empirer.

Les œuvres de la création sont en ce jour, aussi parfaites qu'au moment où elles se déroulèrent de ses mains. Toutes les créations continuent à être aussi régulières, aussi magnifiques et aussi harmonieuses, étant gouvernées et dirigées par la sagesse et la puissance de Dieu. Et si l'homme n'eût pas abusé de l'action morale qui lui avait été donnée; s'il ne s'était pas corrompu, et s'il n'était pas devenu plein d'orgueil et présomptueux; s'il ne se fût pas éloigné de Dieu; s'il eût recherché la sagesse, et l'eût obtenue de cet Etre qui maintient les sphères dans leur course et qui règle l'univers s'il eût imité la beauté, l'ordre, l'harmonie et l'innocence de la nature; s'il eût continué à être noble, magnanime, vertueux, pur et bon; répandant sur tous et recevant de tous des bénédictions; s'il eût persévéré dans l'enseignement du Père céleste, ce monde aurait pu rester à toujours un Eden, un Paradis, et l'homme aurait conservé sa place, comme le représentant de Dieu sur la terre.

Notre religion n'est pas, comme on l'a supposé, une vague fantaisie, basée sur quelque vision obscure ou une fable vaine. Elle est une révélation de Dieu à nous et au monde. Elle s'accorde avec tout vrai principe de raison, de révélation, d'intelligence et de philosophie. Elle est la restauration de l'Evangile primitif dans toute sa pureté, sa plénitude, sa beauté, son intelligence et sa puissance; et elle est parée de son originaire simplicité naturelle.

Un ange de Dieu est apparu à Joseph Smith, ainsi qu'à d'autres qui étaient réunis à lui. Mais des anges apparurent aussi à Abraham, à Moïse, à Gédéon, à Zacharie, à Joseph, à Pierre, à Paul, à Jacques, à Jean, à Corneille, et à d'autres. Pourquoi n'apparaitraient-ils pas aux hommes de nos jours? Un ange a révélé à Joseph Smith les anciennes annales des Aborigènes de l'Amérique; notre foi ne repose pas sur son témoignage seul; car un ange a confirmé les mêmes choses à d'autres personnes, qui, aussi, en rendent témoignage. Est-ce donc chose si surprenante que le Seigneur révèle l'histoire des millions de millions qui ont habité ce grand continent-là, dont les ruines sont des monuments vivants de leur intelligence et de leur civilisation? Ou devra-t-on nous dire que le Seigneur ne voulait et ne pouvait se révéler qu'à un petit nombre de peuples en Asie, et laisser le reste du monde dans les ténèbres? Si ces annales sont vraies, il y aura d'autres découvertes, qui dévoileront l'action de Dieu sur d'autres peuples, que le monde sera forcé de croire. Comment le monde est-il arrivé à la connaissance de Dieu? Par révélation directe, ou par les Ecritures qui sont données par révélation. Et sans révélation, nous serions dans l'ignorance de Dieu. Qui donc voudrait fermer la bouche de Dieu, et nous dire qu'il ne faut pas et qu'il ne doit pas se communiquer encore aux hommes. Pour être conséquent, nous devons dire qu'il y a probabilité que Dieu le fera encore ou qu'il ne l'a jamais fait: car si nous croyons qu'il a déjà parlé, pourquoi ne pas croire qu'il le peut faire encore de nos jours? Mais on nous dit qu'il y a eu un grand nombre d'imposteurs dans le monde. Cela est vrai. Mais un imposteur est-il jamais venu avec la plénitude et la simplicité de l'Evangile? Nous répondons, non; car on ne peut pas le montrer. Saint Jean dit: "Celui qui transgresse et ne demeure point dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ ne possède point Dieu. Et quiconque demeure dans la doctrine de Jésus-Christ, possède le Père et le Fils."

Or, où est l'imposture dans cet Evangile ou dans ces annales? L'Evangile que nous enseignons et l'Evangile contenu dans ces annales sont précisément le même, en doctrine, en ordonnances, et en bénédictions, que celui contenu dans la Bible; et ces annales qui sont l'histoire d'un peuple du continent de l'Amérique, confirment les annales asiatiques qui sont la Bible. Dans les temps anciens, est-ce que les Apôtres disaient aux hommes de "croire au Seigneur Jésus-Christ et de se repentir de leurs péchés?" Nous faisons de même. Leur disaient-ils "d'être baptisés au nom de Jésus pour la rémission de leurs péchés!" Nous disons de même. Imposaient-ils leurs "mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit?" Nous le faisons aussi. Crurent-ils aux Prophètes, aux révélations, aux visions, aux "guérisons des malades par l'imposition des mains par la foi en Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent, ils "l'espoir en la résurrection?" Nous l'avons aussi. Attendaient-ils le "second avénement de l'apparition glorieuse de notre Seigneur et Sauveur Jésus-Christ?" Nous aussi. Eurent-ils "des Apôtres, des Prophètes, des Evangélistes, des Pasteurs, des Instructeurs, etc.?" Nous les avons aussi. Eurent-ils "le don des langues, le don d'interprétation, des visions, des gouvernements, le don de secourir, etc.?" Nous aussi. Mirent-ils en pratique la doctrine, les préceptes, et l'exemple de Jésus-Christ? Nous tâchons aussi de le faire, et nous savons que Dieu a restauré de nouveau ces anciennes bénédictions à son Eglise actuelle.

Les principes que nous croyons et que nous enseignons sont strictement conformes à la raison, à la révélation et à la philosophie.

Qui est-ce qui a fait la terre et l'homme? Si Dieu les a faits, n'a-t-il pas le droit de gouverner, d'instruire, d'ordonner et d'enseigner? Lequel est plus raisonnable, de croire que l'homme, l'image de Dieu, destiné à vivre ici-bas et dans l'éternité, doit demeurer dans un aveuglement absolu à l'égard de son bonheur présent et futur, ou de croire que son Père lui donnera l'enseignement de ces choses? Est-il donc arrivé que ce soit une dégradation de reconnaitre Dieu?

Et encore, philosophiquement parlant, qu'est-ce qui peut procurer le plus grand bonheur au genre humain? L'intelligence, la vertu, la pureté, l'union et la fraternité. Et pourquoi le monde est-il, en ce jour malheureux, dans un état abaissé, corrompu et désordonné? c'est à cause de l'absence des principes purs de la vraie philosophie, de l'absence d'une philosophie et d'une intelligence, donnant la connaissance du ciel et de la terre. Car les œuvres de Dieu, sur la terre ou au ciel, temporelles ou spirituelles, sont toutes gouvernées et dirigées d'après les principes exacts d'une philosophie, la philosophie de Dieu manifestée dans les cieux et sur la terre. Et si l'homme est arrivé à de fausses conclusions sur les actions de Dieu, c'est parce qu'il lui manquait une connaissance de Dieu et de ses lois, qu'on ne peut obtenir dans sa plénitude que par la révélation. Mais comme toutes ses lois, qui nous sont connues, sont régulières et parfaites, il en est ainsi de celles qui ne sont point connues des hommes en général.

Nous croyons en tous vrais principes de philosophie, et nous cherchons en outre à y associer la sagesse de Dieu. Ils recherchent, eux, la sagesse, de la terre et des œuvres de Dieu; nous la cherchons, nous, de ses œuvres, et aussi de Dieu lui-même, leur auteur. Ils recherchent les bénédictions de cette terre; nous, nous les recherchons de ce monde actuel et du monde à venir, comme une récompense dans le temps et dans l'éternité. Si nous possédons de l'intelligence, nous ne sommes pas honteux de reconnaître que c'est Dieu qui la donne. Si le Seigneur a donné des lois, nous n'avons pas de honte à les observer. Si Jésus est allé à Jean et lui a demandé d'être immersé dans l'eau, nous ne sommes pas honteux de suivre ses pas. S'il ordonna la foi, le repentir et le baptême, nous ne sommes pas honteux d'adopter le même plan. S'il ordonna l'imposition des mains pour le don du Saint-Esprit, nous la croyons nécessaire aussi. Et si, par l'obéissance à ces ordonnances, ils obtinrent la faveur divine, et reçurent un Esprit qui "devait les conduire à toute vérité, rappeler à leur souvenir les choses passées, et leur montrer les choses à venir," nous nous réjouissons de-ce qu'il nous a découvert la voie qui nous fera obtenir la vraie intelligence, ainsi qu'une connaissance des vrais principes, anciens et modernes, et de notre relation avec Dieu, et nous donnera la manière d'augmenter notre bonheur et le bonheur de toute la terre.

Les hommes sont tombés dans deux extrêmes, par rapport à la religion: les uns se sont imaginés que tout est immatériel, aérien et visionnaire; ils sont devenus ascétiques, tristes et superstitieux, et ils ont imposé des prescriptions contraires à la nature humaine. Les autres, pour briser ces gênes, se sont jetés dans les excès: ils ont violé les lois de la moralité et de la vertu; ils ont négligé ou nié Dieu, et ont cherché dans la dissolution, dans la présomption, et dans la satisfaction de leur convoitise et de leur lasciveté, ce bonheur qui ne peut être obtenu que par la vertu, la modération, la pureté et la crainte de Dieu.

Notre religion est temporelle, spirituelle et éternelle; elle est adaptée au corps et à l'âme, car nous sommes un composé des deux. Et le Dieu qui a créé l'un a donné l'autre. Le but de la rédemption est de sauver le corps et l'âme; elle nous concerne dans le temps, et nous concernera dans l'éternité. Comme hommes, nous devons nous servir de notre jugement, de notre raison et de notre intelligence pour acquérir des possessions, organiser la société, cultiver la terre, semer, planter, récolter et pourvoir à nos familles. Comme chrétiens, nous devons chercher en Dieu la sagesse pour nous diriger en toutes choses, temporelles et spirituelles; et comme êtres éternels, nous devons agir, durant cette vie, en toutes choses, en vue du monde éternel, afin d'être honorés ici-bas, et de nous tenir dans notre propre position avec Dieu, dans le monde éternel, lorsque nos corps et nos esprits seront réunis de nouveau.

Le Seigneur nous a donné des révélations, touchant nos affaires temporelles et spirituelles. Il a commencé à raffermir Sion, à établir son royaume. Il déroulera et avancera ses desseins, et accomplira les paroles des prophètes; et son œuvre ira en croissant jusqu'à ce que les desseins de Dieu soient tous accomplis.

Permettez donc, mes frères, que je vous exhorte à être vertueux, à être purs, à garder les commandements de Dieu. Priez votre Père céleste de vous donner de la sagesse, de la grâce, de la patience, et de l'humilité, afin que vous soyez des modèles de tout ce qui est bon, grand, noble et spirituel "et que votre lumière brille devant les hommes." Evitez toutes contestations politiques; priez pour les nations au milieu desquelles vous vous trouvez, et pour leurs gouverneurs; et imitez notre Seigneur et Sauveur, en manifestant de la bonté, de la miséricorde, de la douceur, et de la bienveillance envers tous. En un mot, s'il y a quelque chose de bon, de louable, d'honorable et d'élevé, tâchez de vous l'approprier, et la vérité de Dieu vous rendra libres. Vous serez rassemblés à Sion dans le temps convenable, et vous vous réjouirez dans la plénitude des bénédictions de l'Evangile de paix. Vous saurez comment vous réjouir dans ce monde, comment vous recevrez la connaissance du royaume céleste de Dieu, et comment vous en obtiendrez l'héritage.

JOHN TAYLOR.

A Card to the Saints.

As Mormonism is a subject in which every Latter-Day Saint is interested, we respectfully solicit the interest of the Saints throughout the world in spreading "THE MORMON." Intelligence is what we want to communicate; the press is a powerful auxiliary for this purpose, and while we publish you, by helping to circulate the truth, will not only assist us in our heavy pecuniary liabilities, but help to stem the flood of falsehood and roll forth the kingdom of God.

Use your influence; send on your subscriptions, and spread it to the ends of the earth.

Notice.

THE Saints who desire to send means to their friends in Europe, can have the same attended to, by forwarding any sum they wish in current money, to this office, enclosing one dollar or more, in proportion to the amount sent, to defray the expenses of procuring Bills of Exchange, making remittances, foreign postage, &c., describing particularly to whom, and where they wish to have it sent; at the same time not holding myself responsible in any manner whatever unless the money reach me.

All subscriptions, donations, &c., for the support of THE MORMON, or Conference Fund (except the donations and Conference Funds raised in the Philadelphia Conference, which will be forwarded as usual through President Cannon) must be sent hereafter to my address; as also Tithing; P. E. Fund, and donations for the Temple from those who wish to contribute the same, so each person may be duly credited, and the means forwarded to Zion, and have their names entered in "The Book of the Law of the Lord."

No Power of Attorney, or other legal instrument of writing, going to Europe or elsewhere, forwarded to us for the purpose of sending to Washington in order to obtain the attestation of the Department, and the British Consul's Certificate and seal to the same, will be attended to in future, unless the means to defray the expenses and foreign postage accompanies the Instrument, as there is considerable expense attending it as well as labor. We would like to oblige all, and are willing to give our services when we have opportunity; but we cannot advance means to defray such expenses.

All communications intended for THE MORMON should be addressed—Editor of THE MORMON, New York. Otherwise direct to my address, Box No. 3957, New York Post Office. W. I. APPLEBY.

Notice to Subscribers.

WE frequently receive remittances for subscriptions to THE MORMON, without the sender giving the name of the place he desires the paper to be sent to. Sometimes the name of the Post Office or town is mentioned, but not the county, and as there are several towns in some States by the same name, unless the county is designated we are at a loss to know where to direct the papers ordered. We wish all communications to us to name distinctly the Post Office or town, county, and State or Territory, as then there will be no mistake.

PARTICULAR NOTICE TO
HORACE E. DIMICK & CO.'S
GREAT WESTERN EMPORIUM,
No. 42 Main Street, St. Louis, Mo., (at the Sign of the Deer in Windows.)

WE are now in receipt of our stock of Goods for the coming season, which enables us to say, that we have now in store, and for sale, the LARGEST and most COMPLETE assortment of Guns, Pistols, Sporting Apparatus, and Goods selected expressly for the arming of wagon trains, for crossing the plains, the markets of Santa Fe, Salt Lake, and Oregon, &c., that can be found in any HOUSE in the WESTERN COUNTRY!

Among the most staple articles now on hand, can be found upwards of 2,000 DOUBLE AND SINGLE SHOT GUNS; 2,500 MUSKETS AND UNITED STATES RIFLES, both new and second-hand, with flint or percussion locks; COLT'S REVOLVERS, of all sizes, ALWAYS on hand, in quantities to satisfy almost any demand, and at EASTERN PRICES. Also, all the most improved patterns of Revolvers and other Pistols now in use.

N. B.—We, the undersigned, being practical men in all matters appertaining to the arming and equipping of Emigrant and Merchant wagon trains for crossing the plains, renders our experience worthy of consultation, to make it the more easy for the emigrant and trader to supply themselves with the necessary articles, viz: FIRE ARMS, FIXED AMUNITION, PROVISIONS AND GROCERIES, of all kinds Wagons, Tents, Horses, Mules, Oxen; in short, everything necessary for their comfort.

We also beg leave to call the attention of EASTERN HUNTING PARTIES, that wish to spend a few months on the plains, that we have all the necessary arms and equipments, and at prices as low as they can be furnished in any Eastern city.

We keep constantly on hand, (or make to order,) TARGET, HUNTING, and MINNIE RIFLES, which we guarantee to be superior to any in the country.

We also keep constantly on hand the CELEBRATED SHARP'S PATENT RIFLE, which is the safest and most destructive weapon ever invented, for sale at the Manufacturer's prices, for cash.

Please call and examine for yourselves, as it is no trouble for us to answer questions, or show goods.

Remember the place, No. 42 North Main street.
